

2ND L.A. AIRLINER PLUNGES INTO OCEAN

By MARY NEISWENDER AND TONY CILLO

A Boeing 727 United Air Lines jet plummeted into the Pacific during a rainstorm four minutes after takeoff from Los Angeles International Airport Saturday night and rescuers said they feared all 36 aboard had perished.

Nearly three hours after the plane requested permission to return to the airport, the first searchers reported finding portions of three bodies in shark-infested waters. Two search boats said they sighted "lots of debris."

The crash scene was apparently only a mile removed from the location where a Scandinavian Airlines System jet crashed Monday with a loss of 15 lives.

The plane, Flight 266, carried 30 passengers and a crew of six.
Four minutes after takeoff, the pilot radioed that his fire warning indicator light had gone on and said he had shut down one of his three engines. He was ordered to return to the airport but seconds later disappeared from the radar screen.

Coast Guard helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft which rescued 30 survivors of the SAS plane, sped into action two minutes later from their ports at the ocean end of the airport. They used spotlights and dropped flares to light up the dark night.

Small-craft warnings were up for southeast winds of 20 to 30 knots and visibility was five miles with a ceiling of 1,000 feet.

A Boeing 727 can carry 94 to 120 persons depending on seating arrangements.

The harbor master's office at Marina del Rey was set to care for possible survivors and local hospitals, already caring for some survivors of the SAS tragedy, implemented a prepared emergency procedure.

Nurses and doctors at Santa Monica Hospital, for the second time in less than a week, prepared to receive casualties.

The Coast Guard warned private boats to stay out of the search area 10 miles west of Los Angeles International. Private craft hampered the rescue of the survivors of the SAS plane, which was on a flight from Copenhagen.

A UAL spokesman said "We don't know what has happened as yet" and added "We aren't ruling out any possibility."

The plane was starting to make a left turn 10 miles west of the Los Angeles shoreline when the pilot reported his fire warning indicator light was on, an official of the Federal Aviation Agency reported.

The FAA spokesman said the plane was within a couple of miles at that time from the site of the SAS crash.

The crew was made up of the captain, first and second officers and three stewardesses.

Los Angeles International tower chief John Collet said the airport was closed briefly for takeoffs after the Boeing craft left because of the poor weather.

A national Transportation Safety Board investigative team, headed by Tom Saunders, left Washington, D.C., immediately.

Ironically, the safety board team in the SAS crash planned a news conference for Saturday night.

The second crash in six days involving a Los Angeles International airliner was only the second fatal accident of a commercial airliner in the 22-year history of the airport.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fifty-two tons of crumpled metal and seven tons of fuel — the remains of a Scandinavian Airlines System jetliner which plunged into the sea killing 15 — were hoisted onto a barge near Malibu Point Saturday.

The cockpit of the DC-8 was still at the bottom, under 60 feet of water but salvage workers hoped to raise it before nightfall.

The tail section of the doomed airliner has not yet been located. The airplane split just behind the wings when it pancaked into choppy water eight miles to sea Monday night, and the aft section sank almost on impact.

It was believed the tail held the bodies of 11

NATIVE-SON INAUGURAL

Californians Invade Capital En Masse

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO

From Our National Bureau
WASHINGTON — Californians by the thousands poured into Washington Saturday for the inaugural of Richard M. Nixon, the first Golden State native to gain the White House.

They came by plane, train, bus, car and even horse van in an eastward trek that could be one of history's great reverse migrations.

Allen May, a young San Francisco lawyer who has been making arrangements for the California invasion for over a month, said he conservatively estimates that 2,000 Golden Stateers will be here by Inauguration Day, Monday.

"Over 800 came on chartered flights alone," said May. "Probably half again as many are coming on individual flights or by other modes of transportation."

May, who was Northern California field representative for Nixon's presidential campaign, said the charter flights arriving late Friday and early Saturday mainly brought party activists who have been invited to the various inaugural festivities.

Among those coming on individual flights were Gov. and Mrs. Ronald Reagan, who flew here Saturday afternoon from Los Angeles.

The Californians were scattered among a half dozen hotels, although the headquarters for the contingent is the posh Sheraton Park. This is where the state's invited guests have been assigned for one of the six inaugural balls on Monday night.

Presiding over the ball at the Sheraton Park will be Robert Finch of Pasadena. (Continued Page A-2, Col. 5)

State Aid

Q. The address label on some advertising material sent to us appears to be exactly the same as that used on our tax statement from the Board of Equalization. Is it possible that the board has given or sold their mailing list to some industries? E.E., Long Beach.

A. It is. The Board of Equalization is committed by the California Sales and Use Tax law to make available to the public the information contained on business licenses and permits, according to Douglas Bell, in charge of administrative services for the board in Sacramento. As a public service, mailing lists are provided to "responsible persons or businesses" for the cost of the computer tape and cards. Individuals may obtain information on specific businesses for 50 cents a name, Bell said. Requests for such information must be made to the State Board of Equalization in Sacramento.

Pest Control?

Q. In June, I ordered an Electrapest Destroyer from Electrapest Research Corp. in New York. The company cashed my check for $19.95 and mailed out the pest destroyer. Unfortunately, I was away on vacation when the item arrived, and the item was returned to Electrapest Corp. I have written the company several times trying to get the destroyer or a refund and have had no response. R.B., Lynwood.

A. ACTION LINE was unable to contact the company by phone and the New York Better Business Bureau had no information on it. We then called the Postal Inspector's Office in New York and learned that the company is being investigated. Send your complaint to the U.S. Postal Inspector's Office, Mail Fraud Division, Eighth Avenue and 33rd Street, New York, N.Y. 10001.

Prize Winner

Q. In October and November I received notices in the mail that I was a winner in the "Luxury Living Sweepstakes" sponsored by Better Homes and Gardens magazine. I sent in my duplicate winning numbers as instructed, but haven't heard a thing. Has something gone wrong? C.L.S., Long Beach.

A. No. Martha Callison, in charge of the sweepstakes promotion, told ACTION LINE that you are listed as one of the winners, but that the advertising firm handling the distribution of the awards is far behind in its work. The response to the sweepstakes exceeded even the enthusiasm that was expected. In any case, she said, you should receive your prize in less than a month. A complete list of all the winners will be available from the magazine by Dec. 15, 1969.

Duke's School

Q. I attend Poly High School and have heard that John Wayne attended school here but didn't graduate. Is it true that his brother died in a wrestling match while wrestling for the Poly team? J.A., Long Beach.

A. No on both counts. While Wayne's mother now lives in Long Beach, Sydney Preen, Wayne's stepfather, told TEEN ACTION LINE that John Wayne went to Glendale High School. Wayne's brother, Robert Morrison, attended Poly High School and is now a film director. Both brothers went on to USC and played football said Preen. Wayne was born Marion Michael Morrison in Winterset, Iowa in 1907. The Morrison family moved to Lancaster, Calif., when Wayne was a child, and later

SURPRISINGLY QUICK AGREEMENT

Broadened Peace Talks Open

New York Times Service

PARIS — The broadened talks on Vietnam opened Saturday and in five hours and 10 minutes full agreement was reached on the procedures to be followed in negotiations to end the war.

With the procedural question cleared up with surprising speed, representatives of the United States, the Saigon government, North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam, or Viet Cong, agreed to hold a first plenary meeting early next week on substantive issues in the war.

No specific date was set for the beginning of the substantive negotiations. The Liberation Front, supported by North Vietnam, suggested Tuesday and the U.S. said it would make proposals soon to start the talks "as early next week as possible."

"I am happy that we are getting down to the serious business of making peace in Vietnam," Cyrus R. Vance, the ranking U.S. negotiator at Saturday's meeting said. He was smiling widely as he left the conference center, the former Majestic Hotel near the Arc de Triomphe.

Hanoi's chief delegate in the session, Col. Ha Van Lau, also smiled and said: "The four-party Paris Conference is in agreement on the procedure to open the plenary meeting."

The main points of procedure settled were:

—Each of the four groups to participate in the plenary meetings, starting this week, will comprise 15 delegates.

—English and Vietnamese will be the official languages, while French will be used as a "working language."

—The seating arrangements of Saturday's procedural meeting will be followed in the plenary sessions.

—The French government will be asked to provide a larger hall in the Center of International Conferences for the meetings — because the room in the same building used Saturday is too small for plenary sessions.

—Newsmen will be al-

Militants Arrested by Police

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

A violent power struggle between black militant factions apparently led to the slaying of two Black Panther leaders at UCLA, investigators said Saturday. Police arrested 17 Panthers who appeared to be planning retaliation for the killings.

But homicide detectives said they still had no named suspects in the Friday afternoon slayings at a black student meeting at the university's Campbell Hall.

The 17 Panthers were arrested throughout the night and early morning at the Watts home of John J. Huggins, 23, one of the two victims.

Officers said they seized 14 guns — including an M-1 Garand rifle, several shotguns and handguns — a homemade bomb and hundreds of rounds of ammunition.

"They had the guns and ammunition and were embarking somewhere," said Det. Lt. Arthur Logue. One man was carrying blasting powder in a paper bag, he said.

Both police and reliable sources at UCLA say the double homicide may have exploded from a feud between the Black Panthers and US, a black militant organization headed by Ron Karenga, a UCLA graduate.

"Many people on campus suspected the feud would come to a head in Friday's meeting," said a former UCLA professor who is close to minority student groups.

Police and college sources said they believed at least two factions were struggling for the presidency of the campus Black Students Union and

PAY DOUBLED

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson signed Saturday a bill doubling the salary of the President to $200,000 a year.

The increase will take effect at noon Monday when Richard M. Nixon is sworn in as president. It will be the first presidential pay hike since 1949 when the chief executive's yearly salary was raised from $75,000 to $100,000.

More Rain Due

"Misery loves company," the old saying goes — and it applies to the weather, too.

By late Saturday night the storm had dumped .40 inch of rain in the downtown area.

Long Beach will have more of the same dank, dour skies today and tomorrow.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

East L.A. Dean, BSU Leader Sign Peace Pact

The dean of instruction said Saturday he fears an unusual agreement between the acting president and Black Student Union will fail to keep peace at East Los Angeles College.

"I think we'll be very fortunate if we don't have another confrontation," said the dean, Jack Smith. "I don't like the chances at all."

Dean Bernard Butcher, acting president, signed the agreement Tuesday with a tall, bearded science student who calls himself Melvin X, head of the campus BSU.

The agreement said the BSU would not "organize or plan any violent disruption," and Butcher would ask 30 deputy sheriffs to leave the campus.

Some college officials said they thought the agreement was the only one formally signed between a college administration and the BSU in California.

The deputies arrived Jan. 9 at the administration's request after a student strike the day before resulted in blocked classrooms and smashed windows.

Melvin X said the agreement means that the college administration will: Start a negro studies department by next September; cooperate in hiring Negro instructors; do everything in its power to provide scholarships for Negro students; and abide by a Student Council decision, still pending, on whether to provide space, a telephone and funds for a Negro student newspaper.

BRIDE

Dressed in pink from head to toe, actress Audrey Hepburn became the wife of a Roman psychiatrist in a quiet ceremony Saturday in Morges, Switzerland.

The petite screen star, who became a svelte symbol of Hollywood high fashion, married Dr. Andrea Dotti after a romance that blossomed on a Mediterranean cruise last summer.

Miss Hepburn, 39, was previously married to Mel Ferrer, the actor, with whom she still has business interests. It is Dotti's first marriage.

The ceremony was performed by Morges Registrar Madame Denise Ratz before Miss Hepburn's 6-year-old son and a few family friends.

HONORED

Italy's textile industry honored the widow of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Saturday for her devotion to him and his ideals.

In a ceremony in the Verona City Hall, Mrs. King accepted the Zucchi-San Valentine Prize awarded annually to recognize the efforts of some individual representing love for mankind. The award is a gold and silver plaque depicting St. Valentine.

Mrs. King flew to Italy from New York Friday to receive the award. She will be received at the Vatican Monday by Pope Paul VI. The Pope received her husband in an audience Sept. 18, 1964.

HOMEWARD

Max Conrad, the American "flying grandfather" who was forced to abandon plans to fly over the South Pole in a twin-engine plane, left Saturday for Panama on the way back to the United States.

PAY CUT

Vinegar Bend Mizell made more money as a major league baseball pitcher than he does as a congressman from North Carolina, but he wants no congressional salary increase now.

In a statement published in the Congressional record Saturday, Mizell said the 10 per cent surcharge on income taxes should be removed before salaries of government officials are increased.

Mizell, a Republican, is in his first term in the House.

BEATER

Maryland's first heart transplant patient, Sidney Seidenberg, 56, went home Saturday after 55 days in a hospital.

"I feel great. It's an unusual feeling, going home after almost not going home," the Baltimore realtor said in John Hopkins Hospital. Doctors said Seidenberg will be able to lead a "fairly routine life," but will be under close observation for at least another month.

BIRTH

Singer Dionne Warwick gave birth to a 5-pound, 5-ounce boy, her first child, at Newark, N.J. Saturday.

The 25-year-old singer, whose latest hits include the theme songs of the movies, "Promises, Promises" and "Alfie," is married to actor Bill Elliott.

GOODBYE

President Johnson spent the final working day of his 40-year public career Saturday saying his goodbyes, clearing his desk, and watching the moving men prepare the White House for Richard Nixon.

For all practical purposes, Lyndon Johnson had vacated the White House of his personal belongings by Saturday evening. By then, all that remained was the man, his family and little more than their clothes.

The final legislative act of Johnson's career came shortly before noon when he signed a bill to double the presidential salary from $100,000 to $200,000 a year. The remainder of his official duties involved the issuance of numerous required annual reports which had to be sent to Congress before he left office.

Large moving vans have been pulling up to the west wing of the White House every evening for weeks to be filled with large stocks of filing cabinets containing Johnson's papers and the records he wants to take home with him to Texas for his library.

The President was expected to spend his last full day in office today quietly in the White House with a family dinner and possibly a few close friends this evening. The President will leave the White House for the last time Monday morning, when he travels to Capitol Hill for Nixon's swearing in.

'I DO SOLEMNLY SWEAR . . .' Presidential Oath

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Article II of the Constitution provides that a president must take the following oath before assuming his duties:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of the president of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

George Washington on his own initiative added the words, "so help me God." Every subsequent President has done likewise.

RECEPTION FOR DISTINGUISHED LADIES

NIXON INAUGURAL Gala LURES 10,000 Eastward Inaugural Migration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President-elect Spiro T. Agnew and nearly 10,000 other Republicans saluted President-elect Richard M. Nixon Saturday night at an inaugural gala — a theatrical spectacular featuring opera stars, soul singers, cowboy actors and the entire cast of a Broadway show.

Nixon himself was not there. He is not due to arrive in the capital until today, the day before he is inaugurated as the 37th president of the United States.

But the party faithful, paying up to $100 a ticket, got a chance to see Agnew and his wife, Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, wife of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower; David Eisenhower, his grandson; David's wife, Julie, youngest daughter of Nixon; and Tricia, her sister.

Other top Republicans on hand for the extravaganza included Robert Finch, Nixon's secretary-designate of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and Interior Secretary-designate Walter J. Hickel.

Television's Johnny Carson was on hand for the two and a half hour show. So were singers Tony Bennett, Dinah Shore, Roger Williams and Connie Stevens. For those who preferred their music on the highbrow side, the gala offered opera stars Jan Peerce and Marguerite Piazza.

And interspersed with these were "Hines, Hines and Dad," plus two big name bands — Les Brown and Lionel Hampton.

SENATE EFFORT

Action on Hickel May be Delayed

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Key Democrats on the Senate Interior Committee forecast Saturday a delay in Senate confirmation of Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska as secretary of the interior.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson D-Wash. chairman of the committee, said that he had heard that efforts would be made to delay action by the Senate on Monday when the Senate is scheduled to take up the nomination of the controversial Alaskan and other key appointments of President-elect Nixon.

The committee itself will not vote to report Hickel's nomination until Monday morning after questioning him Saturday on his financial holdings and oil leases he once held.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he would call the senate into session Monday, shortly after Nixon's inauguration, to confirm the "noncontroversial" appointments as approved by committees.

At least 10 of the cabinet appointments appear assured of confirmation on Monday. William P. Rogers, secretary of state-designate, is expected to be confirmed later in the week.

Hickel likely will be approved by the interior panel and sent to the Senate but the delay points up the raging controversy that has caused the committee to examine him for four days in public and private sessions. Conservationists have led the fight to block his nomination. They have accused him of being industry-oriented and seeking exploitation of natural resources, including vast areas of his state which is rich in oil and other minerals.

As the committee wound up Saturday, Jackson said that Hickel had agreed to file with the committee a letter stating that any company in which he had a substantial interest "would not engage in any business with the government." He will not be required to create a new trust for his holdings with a prohibition against his interference with any business decisions that might be made by a trustee.

Hickel put his holdings estimated at between $5 million and $6 million, in trust before he became governor in 1966 but the committee questioned managerial decisions he had made under the trust. He protested the decisions were "very few."

First Big Inaugural Protest in History Begins in Capital

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The first large protest demonstrations at any of the 45 inaugurations in the presidency's 180 years, began here Saturday with a bit-

Hundreds of long-haired, New Left display of youthful irreverence. They wearing the nonconformist uniform of a Navy pea jacket and bellbottom blue jeans, began gathering here for a day of pre-inaugural workshops.

THE TOPICS ranged from "antidraft work," "guerrilla theater" and "campus rebellion" to "corporate power in America," "the grape boycott" and "repression of the liberation movement in Portuguese Angola and Southern Africa."

The youths, mostly white, were the vanguard of thousands of so-called counterinaugural demonstrators that the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam has summoned here for three days of protests.

The committee is the same loose coalition of anti-war, antiestablishment groups that sponsored the 1967 protest at the Pentagon and that marshalled thousands of youths at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago last August.

The protest schedule, after the workshop discussions concluded Saturday night, includes an antiwar march this afternoon from the vicinity of the Washington Monument. It will be followed by a 7 p.m.-to dawn Counterinaugural Ball in a rented circus tent erected under a government permit on a corner of The Mall.

The Counterinaugural Ball will feature "heavy" rock and folk performers and a program of satiric "underground theater." It will include the "in-hoguration of a pig as symbol of youthful contempt."

ON MONDAY, President-elect Richard M. Nixon's inauguration day, thousands of demonstrators are scheduled to be in the reviewing stands and on foot along the Pennsylvania Avenue parade route with peace placards, songs and chants.

According to protest leaders, there are no plans for "physical disruption or confrontation." However, they have qualified such assurances to government and Inaugural Committee officials with the disclaimer that "we can't control everybody."

2 Killed in Car Crashes

A Compton woman and a Whittier youth died Saturday in separate Southland traffic accidents.

Dead on arrival at Las Campanas Hospital was Mrs. Stella Romo, 28, of Gardena, killed in an accident at Alondra Boulevard and Central Avenue, in which the car in which she was riding collided with a police car.

Benjamin C. Garcia, 19, was killed when the auto in which he was a passenger was stalled — then struck — on the freeway. Two other men were injured in the accident.

Black Power Struggle at UCLA Cited were in disagreement over who should head a proposed Afro-American Studies Center.

Andrew J. Hamilton, UCLA public affairs officer, said the deaths appeared to reflect "a power struggle between the black students..." He said Chancellor Charles E. Young would likely make a statement Monday.

Police Det. John Slater said the Panthers, US and BSU all had candidates up for the BSU presidency. Both Huggins and the other slaying victim, Alprentice Carter, 26, were both prime contenders for the post, another source said.

Huggins was area captain of the Panthers and Carter was deputy minister of defense.

All 800 black students on the 29,000 student campus were invited to attend the Campbell Hall meeting, called to discuss qualifications for a studies center director.

Police, who have assigned six more detectives to work the case, say they've turned up no more than the original 12 witnesses they interrogated after the incident Friday.

None of the 12 actually saw the slayings, which occurred moments after the meeting adjourned, police said.

Although 150 persons were in the meeting, they all fled after the gunfire. Police were checking reports that four men — one of them carrying a gun — were seen running from the building "incredibly fast." One person leaped out a first floor window, police said.

Of the 17 persons arrested at Huggins' home, 12 were booked on suspicion of conspiracy to commit assault with a deadly weapon and carrying deadly weapons.

Five others were booked on miscellaneous charges such as suspicion of interfering with police officers and traffic warrants. Those arrested included Huggins' wife and four UCLA students.

David Hilliard, a national chief of staff of the Black Panther Party who flew in from San Francisco, charged the arrests were "police harassment."

Hilliard, who said that "the first thing the police did" after the killings was to arrest the victims' fellow Panthers, who said they had the weapons "to protect themselves from any aggressors, black or white."

"The killers are still loose," Hilliard noted.

"If we knew who they were, we'd tell the police," Hilliard said. "But we don't intend to go to them and ask for protection."

Hilliard also denied there had been dissension among Panther members or disagreements with US.

While police insisted they were not now trying to connect the US organization with the slayings, reports have circulated in the Los Angeles area for some time that US leaders resented the increase of Black Panther strength in the area.

But one observer noted that US leader Karenga's "big pitch has been unity," adding that US has usually taken a comparatively moderate line in working with the white "power structure," while pressing "nationalistic and culturalistic views."

Karenga has advocated building a cultural background for black people in his attempts to make racial gains on other fronts.

WHERE THE UCLA PANTHERS DIED

Chalk outlines on the floor of a campus hall being examined by officer Prentiss Frost indicate where two members of the militant Black Panther Party died Friday. The two, John Huggins and Alprentice Carter, were shot to death as a meeting about proposed black studies program was ending. The meeting was attended by 150 black students at UCLA.

MINIFLIGHT ENDS IN DRAINAGE DITCH

A spirited, single-engine plane took an unmanned trip from one city to another Saturday and ended its brief flight nose down in a drainage ditch.

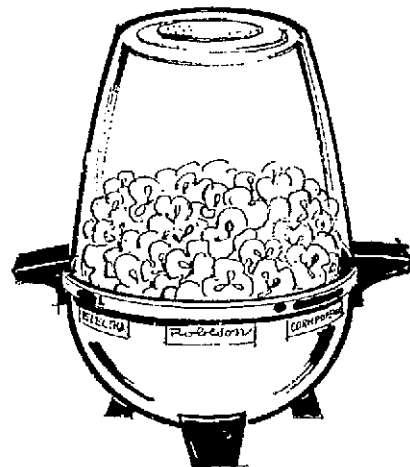

The aircraft, owned by John J. Evans, 38, of Venice, was parked at Hawthorne Municipal Airport when it lurched across the runway just after Evans turned the propeller to start the engine.

Evans said the plane flew across the field at an altitude of about six feet, then nosed down and crashed through a fence, skidded across 120th Street and wound up in the ditch, located in the city of Inglewood.

The plane narrowly missed a car when it cross 120th Street.

ISOLATIONISM

Clifford's Final Report A Warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford cautioned the Nixon Administration Saturday against retreating to isolationism when the Vietnam war is over.

In his lengthy, final report before leaving office Monday, Clifford contends "some degree of United States presence and commitment will be required" as a counterweight to Red China in East Asia in the years immediately ahead.

Clifford, who was instrumental in putting a lid on U.S. troop involvements in Vietnam, says "the overriding goal of our collective defense efforts in Asia must be to assist our allies in building a capability to defend themselves" with strong ground forces.

But, he adds, these allies — except for Japan — will be too weak economically for the foreseeable future to become self-sufficient in air and naval power or in the means of supplying, equipping and supporting their armies.

"We should remain prepared to provide such support where needed," the retiring Pentagon chief holds. Looking at the over-all U.S. role in the world Clifford asserts:

"We must make it clear that although a new administration will bring with it new people and new ways of conducting our nation's affairs, the broad thrust of our approach to the great problems of our time will remain what it has been ever the past two decades:

"Timely assistance to our friends, prudent use of the great military power at our disposal, a willingness to place our energies and our resources behind peoples who are willing to devote their own blood and treasure to the preservation of their own freedom and national independence."

President-elect Nixon, during his campaign and since his election, has seemed bent on shifting this country's role.

Last month, he called for "a new type of collective security arrangement in which the nations in a particular area of the world would assume primary responsibility in coming to the aid of a neighboring nation rather than have the United States called upon to give direct unilateral assistance every time such an emergency arose."

Earlier, Nixon proposed that the free nations of Asia "be brought to accept the need for their own mutual security arrangement."

Clifford's report does not refer directly to Nixon's positions on this question, but it is clear that the man who helped draft the Truman policy of containing communism feels that the U.S. cannot pull back from foreign involvements.

The departing defense secretary acknowledges that this country faces a reappraisal of its security policies in the wake of the Vietnam war, which has become widely unpopular in the U.S.

The circumstances under which U.S. forces "would be used to meet a future major Asian contingency are considerably more conjectural than is true for Europe," Clifford finds.

"Even assuming a successfully negotiated settlement," Clifford says, "there remain broad and fundamental policy issues which must be resolved on how best to fulfill our security commitments to maintain Asian allies."

Clifford's discussion of future Asian policy wraps into a 165-page document amplifying on the Johnson Administration's $78-billion defense budget for the coming fiscal year and defense planning for the next five years.

Clifford's thrust on Vietnam is to emphasize negotiations rather than the fighting.

"I think that we have now set a true course toward peace in Vietnam," he writes.

Guidelines to Hide Utility Wires Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — An interagency federal committee unveiled Saturday a set of proposed guidelines to improve the looks of the nation's unsightly web of power transmission lines.

The committee also proposed that the utilities start putting all new power distribution lines underground on Jan. 1, 1973 — two years earlier than previous proposals.

The plan came from the Working Committee on Utilities, which put itself out of business by reporting to its parent group, the President's Council on Recreation and Natural Beauty.

THE REPORT was transmitted Dec. 27, and the committee was authorized to release it Saturday before the council acts to adopt or reject it.

The beautification guidelines were offered as a kind of cosmetic kit to cover up existing blemishes on the nation's face until the day when it becomes practical and economical to put high-voltage transmission lines underground, completely out of sight.

The working committee urged the federal and state governments and private industry to adopt the guidelines.

The looks of power transmission facilities can be improved in two basic ways, the guidelines state: by creative design and construction; and by using natural features to conceal

L.B. Official Says Criticism of Youth Corps Exaggerated

An official of the Long Beach Community Welfare Council has declared that a government report critical of the city's Neighborhood Youth Corps may have exaggerated the extent to which irregularities were present in the program.

George Logan, executive director of the council, also said he thought the report gave such prominence to the irregularities that it totally obscured the benefits of the program — which are substantial, he added.

THE REPORT accused the council, Los Angeles County, the city of Los Angeles and the United Way in Los Angeles of having failed, among other things, to make sure that only qualified youngsters were enrolled.

Under Labor Department regulations, a youth could be enrolled in the work experience program only if his family's income fell below certain well-defined levels.

The report was prepared by the General Accounting Office of Congress and covered only fiscal 1967. The GAO said it had reviewed the files of 487 enrollees in the county and found 188 instances where eligibility criteria had not been met, or where the records supporting eligibility were incomplete.

Upon reviewing the report, Logan said he could find only seven cases in which eligibility determinations may have been a little lax in Long Beach.

And Logan admitted that orientation sessions at that time were difficult to offer because the youngsters (about 100 of them) were scattered in 40 different work locations.

The council no longer operates the Youth Corps here, having turned the operation over to the city's antipoverty agency, the Economic Opportunities Commission.

Logan said the agency's main criticism of Long Beach centered on the Welfare Council's failure to provide sufficient orientation to the enrollees here.

Paris Peace Talks Get Under Way

lowed into the conference room for 15 minutes before the first plenary meeting starts.

—In the absence of a conference chairman, speakers will rotate among delegations.

—Proceedings will be recorded in the same way as previously — by tape recorders and stenographers.

—Delegations will consult one another to set a date for the first plenary session as early this week as possible.

Most of the debate in Saturday's meeting was restrained and free of the invective that often had marred the bilateral talks between the U.S. and North Vietnam here between May and October.

The only harsh note was struck by the chief negotiator for the Viet Cong, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, the only woman among the delegates.

In her opening statement, Mrs. Binh attacked the Saigon regime and extolled the Front as the organizer "of the South Vietnamese people's resistance against the American aggressors and their valets."

A U.S. spokesman rejected Mrs. Binh's statement as "propaganda." Mrs. Binh is a 41-year-old former schoolteacher and a guerrilla heroine.

Reports are recurring in Paris that the Soviet Union had played an important backstage role in bringing about a breakthrough in the procedural impasse that delayed the broadened talks.

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. air and ground forces battled Communists near the border of Cambodia and Laos Saturday in operations designed to block the infiltration of enemy soldiers and supplies into South Vietnam.

Air Force B-52 bombers dropped 200 tons of explosives on Communist base camps and suspected storage areas near Dak To, near the Laotian border, and U.S. paratroopers sweeping an area 24 miles south of the Cambodian border killed 10 North Vietnamese soldiers, military spokesmen said. Two paratroopers were killed in the clash and 12 others injured.

Oil Strike Over at American

A third major oil company came to agreement with striking oil workers Saturday and, said the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, the pattern has been set for no-amount-less contracts with other companies.

American Oil Co., formerly Standard Oil of Indiana, offered a contract averaging an increase of 66.5 cents over the next two years.

AMERICAN, sixth largest company in the nation, was the second to come to terms with the union Saturday. Earlier, Mobil Oil Co. offered an acceptable contract for employees at Beaumont, Texas.

But about 52,000 union employees remained on strike in 26 states Saturday, according to an OCAW spokesman.

Affected by the American contract are 1,000 employees of the company's Texas City, Texas, plant. An OCAW spokesman said the union has 1,829 other members who work for American and he presumed they will soon receive similar offers.

Airliner Crashes 9 Miles Off Coast

missing passengers, probably still strapped in their seats, as well as the SAS jet's flight recorder which might give investigators clues as to why the crash occurred. Investigators fear the tail may have slipped into an underwater canyon or drifted farther to sea and may never be recovered.

The salvaged forward section contained three electronic altimeters, and two actuated by barometric pressure. Investigators want to know whether the devices were in working order and why the plane was flying 1,500 feet below the customary level at the time of the accident.

Thirty persons were rescued by Coast Guard and private boats and helicopters. Four bodies were recovered. Twelve victims still are hospitalized, and SAS officials were arranging to fly to Los Angeles families of those still missing who wish to await the possible recovery of the bodies.

Black Militants End Occupation at Brandeis

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Sixty-four black students at Brandeis University filed silently out of a building they had occupied for 11 days Saturday with a grant of amnesty but their original demands still unsatisfied.

They vowed to continue their struggle in "new forms" and the university said talks would continue on 10 student demands to combat alleged racism.

THE TWO sides appeared as far apart as ever on the principal demand, for an autonomous department of Afro-American studies. The university has insisted that such a department be subject to the same faculty and administration controls as all others.

The break in the crisis that shook the 20-year-old university of 2,600 students came on the third day of the coming and goings of emissaries of both sides.

ATTACKS KILL PARENTS OF BALL PLAYER

BROWNING, Mont. (UPI) — Both parents of a Browning, Mont. high school basketball player died of heart attacks shortly after watching their son play Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Torelv Berkram, both in their 50s, attended the Cut Bank-Browning high school basketball game in Browning and watched their son, Allen, play.

As they were leaving the gym, Mrs. Berkram became ill and was rushed to a hospital. Her husband visited her in her hospital room, but collapsed and died as he left the room.

Mrs. Berkram died two hours later.

Home Away From Home

Q. I am on sabbatical leave and have a home in Naples. I would like to trade homes for the Spring semester with someone from San Francisco. Do you know of any home exchange bureaus? V.M., Long Beach.

Q. I'd like to rent a home in Europe. Is there some agency here that can help me? N.N., Lakewood.

A. Two agencies that specialize in exchange rentals are Vacation Exchange Club, 663 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022; and Holiday Home Exchange Bureau, P.O. Box 555, Grants, N.M. 87020. The Vacation Exchange Club, founded by David Ostroff, charges no swapping fee and conducts no investigations. Those who want to trade homes pay a $7 membership fee per year. They receive a Vacation Exchange Directory which contains all listings four times a year. Members make the trade arrangements themselves. The home listings are for the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom. Holiday Home Exchange, founded by Olivia McMillan, charges a $5 registration and $25 swapping fee. The bureau investigates each applicant, checking on references, and then matches families up. Applicants then write to each other and work out the details. Mrs. McMillan said she has 20,000 people on file in some 60 countries. Two agencies which specialize in rentals in faraway places are World Wide Living, 5455 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., and Properties International, Allrent, 2201 Filbert St., San Francisco, Calif. A spokesman for Properties International said she had listings from modest to grand houses in Hawaii, Mexico and Southern Europe.

4 JAILED IN SANTA ANA Cache of Airliner Hijack Plans, Dope Uncovered

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

Two men and two women were jailed by Santa Ana police Saturday after the aroused suspicions of two patrolmen led to a cache of airplane hijacking plans, airliner schedules, militant propaganda leaflets, marijuana, small arms and incendiary materials.

The four, including a man police say is wanted for murder in Pennsylvania, were booked on suspicion of conspiracy to hijack an airplane and suspicion of possession of dangerous drugs.

Police said they seized four handguns, a carbine, knives, ammunition and what were described as "inflammable materials" with instructions for making firebombs.

Also found, police said, were airliner flight schedules from Los Angeles to Miami, passenger tickets and notes which indicated a craft would be diverted to Cuba. Police said "a quantity" of militant propaganda leaflets and brochures were also found.

Officers said there was a small amount of marijuana and pills taken. They said the man wanted in Pennsylvania had been sought for three months by the FBI.

He was identified as George Edward Anderson, 23, lately of 2107 W. Myrtle St., Santa Ana. He was held on a fugitive warrant and was charged with conspiring to hijack a passenger airplane for a flight to Cuba.

James A. Gales Jr., 22, and his wife Betty, also 22, of 1213 W. Brook St.,

Santa Ana, were held on suspicion of harboring a fugitive and with suspicion of possession of narcotics.

Corliss Toni Scipio, 21, of Philadelphia, was arrested in the Gales apartment and was accused in the alleged hijack conspiracy. Miss Scipio was identified by police as Anderson's girl friend.

Police Sgt. James Dittman said officers R. A. Lacy and Dennis Scott started the investigation which netted the four.

DIFFERENT SITE Soviets Land 2nd Spaceship Safely

New York Times Service
MOSCOW — The Soviet Union Saturday landed the second of two manned Soyuz spacecraft that were temporarily joined in orbit around the earth in the Russian space experiment last week.

Soyuz-5, piloted by Lt. Col. Boris V. Volynov, touched down gently at 11 a.m. Moscow time (midnight PST) 125 miles southwest of the town of Kustanai in northwest Kazakhstan. It had completed 49 orbits in its three day flight.

There was no immediate explanation why Soyuz-5 did not land after 48 orbits in the customary target area 25 to 40 miles northwest of Karaganda in central Kazakhstan. This is the landing site used by previous manned Soyuz flights.

These were Soyuz-3, which made a four-day flight last October, and Soyuz-4, which participated in last week's link-up experiment.

Soyuz-4 returned to earth Friday morning with its commander, Lt. Col. Vladimir A. Shatalov, and two other astronauts aboard.

THE TWO others were Lt. Col. Yevgeny V. Khru- nov of the Air Force and Aleksei S. Yeliseyev, a civilian engineer, both of whom walked through space to transfer from Soyuz-5 to Soyuz-4 while the two craft were linked in orbit for four and a half hours on Thursday.

All four astronauts have been returned to the space center at Baikonur, 350 miles west of Karaganda, for medical checkups and debriefing.

Like previous Soviet astronauts, they are expected to be welcomed at a Red Square rally in Moscow and to give a news conference under the auspices of the Soviet Acad-

BORIS VOLYNOV
Cosmonaut Eats Earth Food

my of Sciences. Additional details on the flight may then be disclosed.

Soviet television Saturday displayed charts of the docking maneuver of the two craft and of the space walks of the astronauts.

THE DOCKING chart illustrated various stages of the maneuver.

The space walk chart showed how the astronauts had emerged from the regular entry hatch of the orbital compartment, one of the two sections of Soyuz-5, and used a hand-rail outside the two connected craft to move toward Soyuz-4, which they entered through the regular entry hatch.

During this operation the commanders of the two vehicles remained in their command compartments, which were shut off by an internal hatch from the decompressed orbital compartments.

After the two astronauts had entered Soyuz-4, the outside hatch was closed, atmospheric pressure was restored to the orbital compartment and the two men then removed their spacesuits, which they had put n for the hour-long transfer.

Mistreatment Worst Cause of Illness Among Children

More children are battered and starved each year than become ill from the combined diseases of chicken pox, measles and mumps, a symposium on the battered child syndrome" showed Saturday.

Medical men, social workers and others dealing with children and their welfare met at the Orange County Medical Center in Orange for a day-long conference on the problem.

They assembled to work out procedures under a new state law requiring all persons who work professionally with children to report suspected cases of mistreatment.

Some expressed doubt that the new regulations are sufficiently severe, but all admitted that a good start had been made.

Dr. Justin Call, chief of child psychiatry at UCI's California College of Medicine, said that "the typical child-batterer is not a monstrous ogre. Very often, child batterers are 'nice' people who are unable to cope with primitive emotions . . ."

He appealed for the public to cooperate in reporting suspected cases of child abuse, thus reinforcing the new requirements that physicians, hospitals, social workers and others working with children report all such cases.

Dr. Brandt F. Steele, professor of psychology at University of Colorado, discussed "the drives and urges which cause a parent to batter his children," elaborating on Dr. Call's remarks.

As many as six mistreated children are brought to the Orange County Medical Center every month, according to Dr. William F. Taylor chief of the clinical pediatric service there.

Besides suffering serious physical injuries and malnutrition, many are "emotionally shattered," Dr. Taylor said.

Big E Death Toll Now 26

PEARL HARBOR (AP)—The death toll in the Enterprise disaster rose to 26 Saturday as the Navy announced that it will cost an estimated $6.4 million to repair the nuclear aircraft carrier.

The latest victim of last Tuesday's explosions and fire aboard the carrier was a crewman who died of injuries at Tripler Army Hospital in Honolulu. The Navy said the man's identity is being withheld until all of his next of kin are notified.

Forty-one crewmen of the Enterprise remain confined at Tripler, three of them in serious condition. Eighteen others have been transferred to mainland military hospitals.

New Clash of Students, Tokyo Cops

TOKYO (UPI) — A force of 6,000 riot police launched another assault on the bloodied campus of Tokyo University at dawn Sunday, hoping to drive a group of 200 fanatical students from their last campus stronghold.

Meanwhile, another group of approximately 1,000 students battled police off-campus with the announced intention of going to the relief of the university rebels, who have held the campus for the past six months.

In a 10-hour battle Saturday, police drove rebel students from nine of the 10 university buildings they occupied. But they were unable to dislodge the main group of rebels, who are barricaded within the main administration building. The students repelled the police rushes with acid, giant slingshots, firebombs, rocks and staves.

A police helicopter Sunday sprayed liquid tear gas over the Yasuda Auditorium and administration building, where an estimated 30 students stood atop the nine-story bell-tower and pelted police below with firebombs. On the ground, 20 police trucks moved forward as a shield for the main police force, which was firing tear gas shells into the building. Students managed to hurl back many of the shells before they exploded.

As the battle raged on campus, other students clashed with police in separate incidents nearby the nation's leading university. The major off-campus incident occurred at the Ochanomizu subway station, where an estimated 1,000 students battled police for more than an hour.

Her Hands Shake,
Her Vision Dims
—She Sits in Court

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

"This is where my heart is, so this is where I will be."

Blinking against oncoming blindness, but most of the time blinking back tears, a sad-eyed, wispy-haired woman — the mother of the man who killed Sen. Robert F. Kennedy follows her heart.

AND IT leads to a fortress-like courtroom where she sits in the back row peering between taller heads to catch a glimpse of her son.

Television and newspaper cameramen dog her footsteps.

Her hand is always shaking, but she uses care when she signs her name, Mary Sirhan.

Mary Sirhan has to obtain a red entry pass, her only daily access to her son.

She faces the same stringent security regulations everyone faces when they enter — a minute search of her person and possessions.

Because her son's attorneys and defense investigators have warned her not to talk to anyone, she sits most of the time by herself during court recesses. Occasionally she talks with one of her two sons, Munir, 21, or Adel, 30, who have been with her most of the time. Occasionally a spectator walks up and offers her condolences because "you are a mother."

In the courtroom she sits near the back row reserved for "family" flanked by her sons. She keeps her eyes fixed on a door from which another son — an assassin, but still her son — will emerge.

When he does, she strains visibly to make herself taller.

SHE FIXES her eyes on him, a small smile on her lips. When he looks her way and she catches his eye, her whole face smiles — even the sad, cataract-covered eyes — and she waves, once, twice — as long as he is looking at her.

But she never complains.

She hesitates before emerging from the court security area, knowing that the klieg lights will hurt her eyes. But when she emerges she walks straight towards the lights, not shielding her eyes, not hiding from the men she says "have their work to do."

It is not easy for this small, almost pathetic woman. But then she admits "it has never been easy for us."

"I had 13 children... I love children... but only five of mine have lived. My daughter died when she was 29. She was a very sweet girl."

Then she mentions her son, Sirhan.

"I pray. I pray all of the time. Prayers are good. Prayers help. It is all I can do."

ACCORDING to a close friend the gray-haired woman keeps magazine accounts of the assassination of Kennedy piled on a buffet in her home and talks to pictures of Kennedy on the covers of the magazines.

"I am sorry... I am so sorry... she is quoted as saying over and over again to the pictures."

(In her mind, a friend relates, the pictures answer: "It is OK Mary I forgive you.")

Mary Sirhan rarely prays for herself.

Up to the day her son was arrested for murder Mary Sirhan worked in a nursery school "with little children" the things she loves most.

She no longer works.

"I cannot be in two places, and I must be here."

Historic Hearing on Pueblo Capture to Open Monday

CORONADO (AP) — One of the most exhaustive investigations into the loss of a U.S. ship opens Monday at a court of inquiry into the capture of the USS Pueblo.

It ranks with inquiries into the sinking of the nuclear submarines Thresher in 1963 and Scorpion in 1968, two of the most important Navy courts in recent history.

But it deals with an incident almost unique in the annals of the Navy. The intelligence ship Pueblo was one of only two Navy vessels captured in peacetime.

THE OTHER was the USS Chesapeake, captured by the British on June 22, 1807, during hostilities leading to the War of 1812. The Pueblo was captured Jan. 23, 1968, by North Koreans. One of her men was killed; the other 32 were imprisoned 11 months. They were released for an emotional Christmas Eve reunion with their families in San Diego.

"The court is directed," said Adm. John J. Hyland, commander of the Pacific fleet "to inquire into all the facts and circumstances relating to the subject incidents."

"The court is also directed to inquire into the death and injury to Naval personnel as appropriate to perform the duties of an inquest."

THE COURT has subpoena power to call anyone in the Navy to testify and, technically, it could recommend "administrative or disciplinary action" for any Navy man involved aboard ship, at Pacific headquarters or in the Pentagon.

Five admirals headed by Vice Adm. Harold G. Bowen Jr., commander of the Pacific Fleet antisubmarine warfare forces, will take testimony in a 111-seat classroom at this Naval Amphibious Base across the bay from San Diego.

They will conduct a hearing, not a trial. Any recommendations for major discipline on grounds military law was broken would go to a court martial.

The court of inquiry will try to come up with definitive answers to these questions:

1. Where was the Pueblo when she was taken?
North Koreans said she intruded into their territorial water five times during 10 days before her capture. When she was taken, they said, she was within the 12 miles they claim offshore.

"I never once, nor did that ship, ever once intrude into the territorial waters of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea," said skipper Lloyd M. Bucher the day he and his men were freed.

Adm. Thomas I. Moorer, chief of Naval operations, has said the Navy never doubted Bucher's word. U.S. evidence shows the Pueblo was 16 miles from Yeod Island when she was accosted by a North Korean sub chaser, Moorer said.

2. Was the Pueblo's presence "in accordance with or in violation of any order issued to the commanding officer by competent authorities," and what was the ship doing?

"My orders for this operation," said Bucher, "were contained in a message which I received from Command U.S. Naval Forces in Japan, and these orders directed me to conduct electronic intelligence gathering operations in the Sea of Japan along the coast of North Korea."

Navy statements substantiate this, and Adm. Moorer adds that when the Pueblo was captured she was dead in the water conducting hydrographic tests of water temperature essential to intelligence gathering.

3. How was the Pueblo captured?

All the details aren't public, but Moorer has said the first indication of North Korean vessels came shortly after noon when the Pueblo radioed, "more company." Then, he said, came messages about encountering a North Korean sub chaser which radioed "Heave to, or we'll fire." More messages from the Pueblo told about three North Korean torpedo boats and said Communist Migs were flying overhead, Moorer reported. Then, he said, the Pueblo radioed that a small boat was approaching with the boarding party. Firing started shortly after, Moorer said. Then the North Koreans escorted the Pueblo into Wonsan Harbor and boarded her there, Moorer said.

BUST OF SLAIN SENATOR UNVEILED

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mrs. Ethel Kennedy stand beside a bust of her assassinated husband, Robert F. Kennedy, which was unveiled in the courtyard of the Justice Department headquarters in Washington Saturday. Robert Kennedy was the U.S. attorney general from 1961 to 1964.

Ted Kennedy Ignores Death Threat, Dedicates RFK Bust

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., ignored a telephoned death threat Saturday to attend a Justice Department ceremony in honor of his assassinated brother, the late Robert F. Kennedy.

He drove from his nearby Virginia home where police maintained a 24-hour vigil to see the unveiling of the bust in the courtyard of the department where his dead brother had served as attorney general.

A spokesman for Kennedy said the police action was a "precaution" taken in any incidents of the kind.

However, police sources said the FBI viewed the threat as "serious" and at FBI request, Fairfax County police directed a patrol car to remain in the "immediate area" of the senator's home until further notice.

The threat, an aide said, was made in a telephone call to Kennedy's office Friday afternoon. He was at home at the time.

The senator, in a tightly buckled trench coat, dedicated the bust of his late brother which was presented by the Kennedy family.

The rain-soaked ceremony was attended by Chief Justice Earl Warren, Attorney General Ramsey Clark, Attorney General-designate John Mitchell, Undersecretary of State

Nicholas Katzenbach, World Bank President Robert S. McNamara and Ethel Kennedy, widow of Robert Kennedy.

Kennedy told a crowd of several hundred, huddled beneath umbrellas in the courtyard, that under his brother the employees of the Justice Department "all worked as a team in the best interests of the country."

"I think this is what means the most to us," Kennedy said.

Kennedy also praised Katzenbach, who succeeded his brother as Attorney General, and Clark for having carried on Robert Kennedy's efforts to improve the administration of American justice.

FOR WHITE HOUSE TOTS Johnson Family Leaves a Garden

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Johnson, who became grandparents in the White House, are leaving as a gift for future presidential youngsters a small, hidden garden on the executive mansion grounds.

A White House announcement Saturday said the President and his wife decided to provide this spot because they found the White House was lacking a quiet, secluded area where children who live there "can escape from the hustle and bustle of the executive mansion."

A LITTLE wooded park area on the south grounds, 18 feet by 30 feet, is paved with Pennsylvania blue flagstones. It has a Stayman Winesap apple tree for climbing, a pond of goldfish, four children's rocking chairs and matching table of rustic bentwood.

It has been planted with spring flowers and some year-round greens, including holly trees.

A plaque embedded in the flagstone walk is inscribed "To the White House Grounds from the President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, Christmas 1968." Nearby are reminders of the Johnson grandchildren — the footprints of Patrick Lyndon Nugent and the hand prints of Lucinda Desha Robb in bronze.

THE garden was designed by architect Edward Durrell Stone Jr. and the landscape architect from his New York office, Edward Alexander, with the aid of the National Park Service which takes care of the White House grounds.

A White House spokesman said the work was completed last week. Asked about the cost, Mrs. Johnson's press secretary said "I don't have that."

D.C. STADIUM RENAMED FOR BOB KENNEDY

WASHINGTON — The District of Columbia stadium has been renamed the "Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium," Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall announced.

The action was taken jointly by the Interior Department which has jurisdiction over the stadium site and the D.C. Army Board which operates the stadium under a contract with the National Park Service.

Principal users of the stadium are the Washington Redskins of the National Football League and Washington Senators of the American Baseball League although it is also the scene of college and high school games and other events.

7 Murders Charged to 'Vampire'

WARSAW (UPI) — A man called the Vampire of Galkowek because of the savage crimes of blood and lust he allegedly committed has gone on trial, Polish newspapers reported Saturday.

Stanislaw Modzelewski, 40, is charged with murdering seven women and a period of at least 13 assaulting six others over a years. Time after time he eluded elaborate police traps. He finally was seized after several women escaped and gave authorities the man's description.

Papers said Modzelewski pleaded guilty to the crimes when his trial opened Friday in Lodz Vaidvodship court.

Authorities have withheld details of the murders, but several papers have told stories of brutal assaults during which the assailant beat his victims and broke their ribs before raping and strangling them.

His first victim, the prosecution alleges, was a 17-year-old girl slain while she picked blackberries in a forest. His oldest was his 85-year-old landlady, whose body was found in a bathtub.

Psychiatrists who examined Modzelewski, an employee of the Warsaw sanitation department, declared he was excitable and sadistically inclined, but sane enough to stand trial.

NEW STOL DEMONSTRATOR IN FLIGHT

Douglas Will Test Short Takeoff Plane for American

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

American Airlines and McDonnell Douglas again are teaming up to explore greater passenger convenience and efficiency of operation on the nation's airways in the 1970s.

American, the airline which first ordered the McDonnell Douglas advanced technology DC-10 trijet now in production at Long Beach, has entered into an agreement with the manufacturer for a three-month test of an aircraft capable of flying from city center airstrips to avoid air and ground congestion around major airports.

The plane is the McDonnell Douglas 188 turboprop, designed for extremely short takeoff and landing operations.

The four-engine transport, which bathes virtually its entire wing surface in its own propwash for high lift at slow speeds, originally was developed as the Breguet 941 for the French Air Force.

A MODIFIED version for passenger service under franchise to McDonnell Douglas recently completed a 10-week Eastern Air Lines test in the high-density Boston-New York-Washington corridor.

The study by American Airlines will begin in mid-March and will be the most comprehensive ever made by an airline, according to George A. Warde, senior vice president-operations.

Ware said a special team of pilots and engineers will evaluate operating characteristics of the short-field aircraft and three highly advanced navigational systems. Warde will be in charge of the flights for American, and Warner Lowe will be McDonnell Douglas flight demonstration manager.

The American Airlines program will cost about $300,000 and no passengers will be carried on the flights, Warde said. He added that the short-takeoff planes would not be put into regular passenger service for four years at the earliest.

"OUR OBJECTIVE is to examine the feasibility of city-center to city-center operations and also between suburban and business centers," Warde said.

He explained that this service would not compete with such intra-metropolitan operations as the Long Beach-based Catalina Air Lines Aero Commuter service, which links outlying metropolises with major airports in four counties surrounding Los Angeles.

Warde said this type of third-level service with light short-field planes will continue to be a necessary and useful part of the air transportation picture, but that larger and faster aircraft will be required for inter-metropolitan service.

Warde said aircraft like the McDonnell Douglas 188, with the ability to maneuver safely at slow speed in the terminal area and land in much shorter distances than current planes, could bypass major airports on short-haul flights from civic center airstrips.

PRIME inter-metropolitan routes which would lend themselves well to such operations include the heavily traveled Los Angeles-San Francisco, Chicago-Detroit and Boston-New York links, he suggested.

Most of the flying in the American Airlines program will be done in the St. Louis-Chicago areas, Warde said. Limited East Coast flying is planned in April to analyze avionics performance with ground control systems in the northeast corridor.

All three of the navigational systems to be installed in the McDonnell Douglas 188 will be modified for American to include the vertical navigational capability necessary for the type of service planned.

USE OF THE airborne computer systems will enable the American Airlines pilots to avoid routes used by conventional aircraft.

GIFT FOR HOSPITAL

Mrs. Walter A. Richards, president of the Veterans Assistance League, presents a check for $10,000 to Joe Sutton, acting director of the Long Beach VA Hospital. The $10,000 will be used to buy research equipment to be used by Dr. Ernest Bors, center, chief of the Spinal Cord Research Injury Service at the local Veterans Administration Hospital. The League has raised approximately $60,000 for the SCI Research Project.

JEANE DIXON PREDICTS:

Nixon Will Shake Up Government, Which Bodes Good for the Nation

Jeane Dixon claims many triumphs and near misses as a "seer." She predicted the assassination of Robert Kennedy in California. She foresaw the move to draft President Johnson for re-election in 1968, and indicated that the draft would fail. She prophesied the emergence of Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. into a more active political role, and at various times she has spoken of the U.S. involvement in Asian affairs, foreseeing continued destruction.

JEANE DIXON Sees Exciting Year

By JEANE DIXON

Destiny is all-important where life and purpose are concerned. President-elect Richard Nixon is facing the most difficult tasks and problems of any president yet. Mr. Nixon will not endeavor to carry the image of any other president regardless of his admiration and respect — but will carry his own image.

Richard Nixon comes into office with years of political experience, wisdom, acumen and, not least, foresight. He will gradually shake up and reorganize the government as it has not been shaken up for 50 years. This intention carries good vibrations for the country.

I see President Nixon using great common sense in all his approaches, but he will not have the cooperation of the masses, of the minority groups, of those who lack vision, or of the opposing political party.

President Nixon will do more to advance the progress of Negroes than any other man in the last hundred years. But because of sabotaged communications, and the opposition forces, his good works will not be given due recognition.

Tightly controlled minority groups, master minded by the organizational geniuses of the USSR, will take advantage of this lack of cooperation to divide us in the United States; they will block the channels of communication and understanding. The innocent will become the victims. In addition, there are the powerful machinations of a "government within a government", which will organize strong opposition.

This opposition will be led by a family which controls a potent political machine. This opposition will be both national and international in scope. The activities emanating from this source, although even they will not realize it until too late, will be responsible for much agitation — even at times revolutions and riots. Eventually, they will be responsible for an international racial revolution. This will cause more trouble than one could ever dream!

President Nixon will answer many national questions in his inaugural address; he will endeavor to end the sit-ins, protest demonstrations and marches. But Mr. Nixon must have MAXIMUM PROTECTION, and everybody must be on the alert because a revolt is smoldering. Special precautions must be taken for his personal safety these next few months.

Some of the news media will be unfriendly and will blame the new administration, for everything from the Capitol to the Bible. But some leaders with high principles will not compromise; unfortunately some of them will resign from office rather than be compromised for political purposes.

There is one leader — I do not get his name but he looms up in the State Department — who will achieve a tremendous triumph for our country, a far-reaching international achievement.

This administration will have a new policy on the USSR, but this new policy will be deliberately misunderstood so as to cause the administration difficulties.

New decisions will be made on Vietnam and this seems to be rather close at hand. A very important meeting will be held in Washington affecting international affairs. There will emerge long-range plans, seemingly workable. But here again the opposition will cause trouble for the new administration. I get that this opposition is not only political, but even lay people will join in the wholesale criticism.

The new President and his secretary of defense should be prepared for a serious blow in Vietnam. At present there seems to be a widespread illusion that we are defeating the Communist forces in Vietnam. But I see long lines of infiltrators and military forces on the borders of South Vietnam. These will pour over the borders soon after inauguration Day.

Mr. Nixon must realize that there are no present plans to meet such a future military situation in Vietnam. This attack will be a major one, and can be stopped only by equal opposing military strength. The Paris "peace" talks are a diversion; the "war" issue can be settled only in Moscow and Vietnam.

President Nixon is not ruling out the spirit of compromise with the enemy. But he will not permit any makeshift arrangement to be made that will leave Southeast Asia to the mercy of the Communists.

President Nixon will enjoy a "honeymoon" with Congress for a limited time only. There will be criticism and shouts of "unpopularity" coming from various legislators, when they see Nixon cut off funds from their various pet projects. However, he will be applauded in other quarters for his courage. His main objective will be to stabilize the currency, and strengthen the dollar.

President Nixon will keep his pledge to the American people regarding law enforcement and "safety in our streets". The law will be enforced without fear or favor, but he will insist that all branches of law enforcement make justice the keystone of their policy while engaged in enforcing the law. He wants no taint attached to his administration, especially in the Justice Department; the many stories surrounding the Jimmy Hoffa case that refuse to die are distasteful to him. Incidentally, Hoffa's star is on the continuous rise.

There will be many changes in industry and in society, and much talk in Congress about the converging tide of problems — more really angry debates than ever before in American history. Because of opposition in Congress, the problems will only be talked about — not really solved — causing a national slowdown of business in 1969.

Money will lose some of its buying power. There will be a steady drain of money from the wealthy and an increase in taxes. The price of gold will rise in the open world market.

There is great danger around our defense set-up, with sabotage which could cause great losses. There will be sabotage this year on aircraft, also in outer space.

There seems to be a heavy death toll around the middle of the year, or just a little past midyear, caused perhaps by human carelessness and sabotage.

Gov. Reagan will continue to have trouble with riotous activities, but since he is good for our country and in harmony with God's law, he will meet California's problems headon. It will not be easy, and he will attempt to hold the line on taxes. Gov. Reagan will become increasingly important in this administration.

This year there will be some sensational developments in New Orleans District Attorney Garrison's investigation of President Kennedy's assassination. He will be able to solve a small part of the mystery surrounding this tragic event by proving that there were channels of communication going back and forth — from Ruby to a prominent New Orleans citizen and back to Ruby.

Time will prove that Senator Edward Kennedy's winning of the number two Democratic spot in the Senate may not have been the most advisable move he has made since becoming a senator. It will be clear as times go on that he will be too busy in his all-out effort to win the presidency in 1972 to give as much time as he should to the Senate. There is a great future for Sen. Kennedy, if he will just wait the Lord's timing for him as an individual. His impatience is not in his own best interests.

When President Johnson retires to his Texas ranch he will have many things to be thankful for. However, he will not stay "retired."

It was a privilege for me to meditate on some of the members of the incoming Cabinet. I am sorry I did not have time to meditate on all of them, but there will be more.

MELVIN LAIRD has vibrations similar to those of Lajos Kossuth (Hungarian patriot), and is a "natural" for the Department of Defense. He will logically reason things out. He is an incisive critic, sometimes too much for his own happiness. But this will be good for our country. He will never rest until he has carried out his objective.

WILLIAM P. ROGERS has vibrations similar to Adam Smith's (political economist), is quick-witted and clever. He will always expedite his travels whatever his destination, and will even risk his life if need be. He will always have many irons in the fire, but will prove a very capable secretary of state. He has a mind that acts quickly and sees things rapidly. He is capable of making important decisions correctly.

DAVID M. KENNEDY is a man I would like to have for my boss, because he is someone loved by subordinates, as well as his colleagues. Mr. Kennedy looks at life from a higher and more intellectual standpoint than most people. He is great when in a position of authority, especially in government work of any kind. He knows what it is to love his home — that is so important to people today. As time goes by he will take on even more responsibilities.

GOV. GEORGE ROMNEY has a very serious mind. His vibrations are like those of John D. Rockefeller. His a "child of fate" subject to circumstances caused by others; he possess a strong will and is very decided in his opinions. But he will be unable to express his true nature to the public and will be much misunderstood. He will be sacrificed for others, and will not get the credit rightfully his. Religion will play a big part in his life, and I see he will leave a large inheritance to philanthropic and charitable causes. He will do well in his new appointment and at the same time enjoy it.

GOV. SPIRO AGNEW has vibrations similar to those of President Theodore Roosevelt and Sargent Shriver. (Both Shriver and Agnew will have to dodge some bullets before their lives are over. Assassination attempts will be made but will not be successful, bless them both!) Gov. Agnew has great executive power and organizing ability; however, he will make many enemies due to his strong will and forcefulness. Fortunately he will carry the responsibilities of the vice president efficiently and astutely. A word of caution, Mr. Vice President — check frequently with your doctor to avoid high blood pressure.

MRS. ROBERT KENNEDY (I have long been an admirer of her) has wonderful vibrations, similar to those of Charles Evans Hughes and William Randolph Hearst — great individuality, will-power and determination, wonderful romantic qualities. She has original and unconventional ideas, great enthusiasm in everything she attempts. Here are qualities of a dominant leader and Mrs. Kennedy could, if she would, be very successful in the political world. But she has the best interest of all — to be a source of inspiration to her children. Mrs. Kennedy will do some writing later, and it will be very good. She will gain fame before her life is over. But a word of warning — she should never take any unnecessary risks!

SENATOR EDMUND MUSKIE has vibrations similar to Bismarck's. Owing to his magnetic nature he will have great influence over others through his gift of oratory. While Mr. Muskie is a great senator, he also has the gift of being a preacher or organizer, and is best when working alone, not with a partner unless he is the dominating partner. A word of caution — he, too, should check with his doctor because I get that, when he is older, he could be subject to high blood pressure.

ARISTOTLE ONASSIS has vibrations similar to Pierre Dupont's (destined to fame and fortune) with a natural magnetic personality. Though he keeps busy with shipping empire, I get the vibrations that he loves art, literature, seeks inventions out of the ordinary, loves the theater and all beautiful things. It is easy to see the attraction of this man for Jacqueline Kennedy. The only thing I can say at this time is for Mr. Onassis to keep his property and himself well insured. 1969 will be an exciting year for Mr. and Mrs. Aristotle Onassis, but in 1970 there will be other bridges for Jackie Kennedy Onassis to cross.

The constant laughter about how Israel defeated the Arabs in six days is no laughing matter. Russia is re-arming the Arab world, and the only way the Arab world can repay Russia is in oil. Since France and England do not care to be on opposite sides from Russia, America must use her diplomacy very skillfully if another Israel-Arab war is to be averted.

I see important decisions made by the "three decision makers" of the Soviet Union. Their initials are "S", "P" and "A". They are being assisted presently by Mr. Malenkov and Mr. Molotov.

Their decisions are —

1. Get the United States to agree to a non-nuclear proliferation treaty. From this point, proceed quickly to more and more disarmament agreements.
2. They overruled the Soviet military, which wanted to keep the 500,000 United States troops dying and isolated in South Vietnam. The Central Committee planners decided that their continued bleeding would arouse the American people. Therefore, less risk is involved if they are returned home, released and disarmed by disarmament agreements.
3. They foresee that with the return of the U.S. troops, South Vietnam, Thailand and the rest of Southeast Asia will fall without a fight. U.S. prestige and presence will be out of the area forever. This will cause distrust of U.S. commitments throughout the world.
4. While preaching disarmament, they will continue pressures in North Korea, Africa, Europe and South America.

5. They will test President Nixon's courage and fortitude by causing a flare-up in the Middle East during the summer of 1969. After Vietnam has been settled according to Mr. Molotov's plan and disarmament set in motion so that the U.S. cannot back track, this will leave the Middle East ripe for a Communist takeover.

6. While the U.S. has its sights on landing a man on the moon, the USSR is concentrating upon the military aspects of space, since this power may be needed in the final days of Socialist triumph.

7. Under Mr. Malenkov's guidance, internal security within the USSR and loyal Socialist states will be strengthened in order to secure the base for Communism's final victory. These are the seven steps to doom spelled out for the United States by Mr. "S", Mr. "P" and Mr. "A".

President Nixon, with the help of God, must make the proper decisions so that we may survive as a nation.

The way to this survival was shown to him and the entire world on Christmas Day, 1969, from out of this world.

Down through the ages the astronauts' prayer from the moon will be more of a milestone in our history than their flight.

After the loss of the atomic submarine Scorpion, I said that I saw it leaving a "sparkling electrical tunnel" behind it. I saw something rise up from the bottom of the ocean, and the Scorpion was destroyed by it. I did not see the submarine destroyed by a torpedo or a missile. Now, to learn the true facts, there should be a combined investigation by the four countries that have mysteriously lost submarines: Israel, France, the United States, and now England. Britain's latest loss should not be kept from the people. The results of such an investigation are vitally important to the very survival of the Western world.

End-of-the-Month Registration Drive

Good Citizenship Days, a drive to register voters for three spring elections in Long Beach, will be observed Jan. 29 and 30, it was announced by Mrs. Veronica Tischer, president of the League of Women Voters.

Registrars will be available those days at 18 local public schools in the voter qualification effort sponsored jointly by the League of Women Voters and the Long Beach Unified School District.

Persons who have lived in California for at least one year and within Los Angeles County for 90 days may register. Any person who has moved since the November general election must re-register.

Mrs. Tischer warned that those who have failed to register properly will be unable to vote in the April 4 School Board election, the May 13 Long Beach City Council primary and the June 3 final city elections.

Timetable for the voter registration days: Jan. 29—11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Long Beach City College liberal arts campus; 3:10 to 4:30 p.m., Jefferson, Stephens, Lindbergh and Stanford Junior High schools, Riley and Tischer Elementary schools, LBCC Business and Technology campus; 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Jordan, Millikan, Lakewood High School and both LBCC campuses.

Jan. 30—3:10 to 4:30 p.m., Wilson, Jordan, Millikan, Polly, Lakewood High schools, Maintenance and Food Service divisions; 3:10 to 3:45 p.m., Board of Education Annex; 3:20 to 4:30 p.m., Washington Junior High school; 4 to 5 p.m., Board of Education Building.

Those failing to register during Good Citizenship Days may register at any Los Angeles County fire station or at City Hall.

Way Clear to Solve Urban Woe

get what it wants by political or economic clout. They have something, more useful than Black Power. It is called Middle Class Power and it is available in black and white as well as in living color. This is no longer just theory: In December the New York chapter of the NAACP announced it was going to start a program to fight crime in Harlem. A few weeks later a similar program was started in Washington by the Black United Front.

One further thought. As Negroes climb into the middle class, there can be a logical hope that the tensions of what is called "white racism" will subside. Today, whites feel Negroes are "different" — and they are. They are poorer, less educated, have worse jobs, live in poorer housing, and are more likely to have a criminal record. But what will happen as the level of living changes? What will happen when attitudes catch up to statistics and when white Americans understand that the typical Negro is not a slum-dwelling undesirable?

What happens when the white home-owner who all along said, "I'd be glad to have a Negro neighbor if he was an engineer or an executive," suddenly finds out that there are enough engineers and executives to go around, and they are indeed ready to move in next door? It might then be the time to revive an old word: "integration."

THE NEGRO movement into the middle class is one facet of a unique political opportunity that Mr. Nixon faces as he takes office. He enjoys a situation that politicians often dream of, but rarely get: he can publicly and honestly move both to the right and to the left at the same time without antagonizing either side. Perhaps, he can be a "consensus president," which never was such a bad idea.

Thus, "law and order" is now a right-wing battle cry. But properly viewed, law and order is a concept that all Americans, right and left, support. The most militant black leader is against random mugging in the ghetto.

On the other hand, "Save the Cities" is the left-wing battle-cry. Liberals today are calling for a massive public and private effort to cope with slums, ghettos, job training, health care, and housing. But properly viewed saving the cities is a concept that conservatives endorse. A Harris poll showed that two-thirds of the whites in America favored large federal programs to rebuild the ghettos. Even the Republican platform pledged "a vigorous effort to transform the blighted areas of cities..." Mr. Nixon promised blacks "a piece of the action," provided that "law and order" prevails, and that taxes don't soar.

MR. NIXON is doubly blessed. Not only are his rightward and leftward moves not antagonistic to each other, but Mr. Johnson has left him an unprecedented kit of legislative tools to do the job for both liberal and conservative Americans. This is another unique circumstance of the Nixon presidency: Mr. Nixon is the first modern President to come into office with legislation already on the books designed to cope with the major problems of urban America.

In large measure, these are new laws just now crossing the threshold to utility. To be sure, all of these laws are not perfect, much more remains to be done, and there is a major job of coordination and evaluation ahead. But there can be no doubt that the new programs of the Great Society provide a rich legacy for Mr. Nixon.

The Safe Streets and Crime Control Act of 1967 is a prime example. It provides the wherewithal for bolstering local police forces. As planned, this legislation will ultimately send out close to a billion dollars each year to local communities.

I, for one, will be very surprised if Mr. Nixon does not accept the political dividend of hop-scotch-ing across the country shaking hands with local policemen while handing out federal dollars to fight crime. No matter. In the long run, this money will help to reduce crime. And in the short run it will seem as if something is being done, and in the short run that is very important.

When President Nixon finishes his courtesy calls on the police, he can then head downtown to lay hands, and dollars, upon the poor and the black.

THE MODEL CITIES Act was passed in 1966, and already 150 cities are at work. As planned, expenditures will run about a billion dollars a year, if the program is successful, it can fruitfully use much more. Spending estimates for the Housing Act of 1968 are hard to come by because of the nature of the legislation, but it is clear that the federal share can involve billions each year. Because each federal billion is designed to stimulate private billions in great numbers, one recent estimate indicated that this one law could bring one trillion dollars into the housing market over the next decade.

Once again, there will be great surprise if Mr. Nixon does not choose to reap the political harvest of these laws.

NOW THE crucial question: Will the money be there to pay for these and all the other programs?

It will. In fiscal year 1968 federal revenues amounted to $153 billion. In 1972 revenues are projected at $214 billion. That is an increase of about 40 per cent over a period of time when population will be going up by only 7 per cent.

One of the reasons for this extra money coming into the federal treasury is that Mr. Nixon inherits still another unique and beneficial circumstance. This one will not only help to pay the bills, but help to solve much of what is called "the youth problem." Richard Nixon is the first American President who will face the "baby boom" Americans as adult taxpayers.

The statistics are fascinating. Below are the numbers of Americans who have reached age 22 during the last four years and those who will reach age 22 during the next four years. Watch carefully what happens in the year 1969:

1966	2,793,000
1967	2,807,000
1968	2,795,000
1969	3,761,000
1970	3,551,000
1971	3,553,000
1972	3,530,000

For a generation the children who arrived in such great numbers after World War II have left nothing but chaos in their wake. They caused much of the housing shortage. They created the demand for the suburbs that they later grew up in. They caused the school shortage. Their demands and needs financially strapped not only their parents, but their local, state and national governments.

Now, the wave of young people in America has crested and the oldest of these wonderfully spoiled, bright, young Americans will soon be getting — in about this order — degrees, jobs, spouses, babies, mortgages and tax bills.

ACCORDINGLY, Mr. Nixon's budget faces a "demographic bonus" — and so does every state and city budget in the nation. On the federal level alone, a thumbnail calculation shows that in the next eight years the baby-boom Americans will pay about $70 billion dollars in taxes more than what might have been expected had our birth rate not soared after World War II.

But money is only one aspect of this major demographic change that we are about to witness in America. There are other intriguing speculations to consider as the oldest of the young become the youngest of the old and as the number of young people reach a plateau after two decades of sharp growth.

To begin with, what can be expected of the "student radicals" that have so riled the nation.

The current crop, I think will be defused. The first thing these young college graduates will find out is that all that rhetoric about "an affluent middle class" was a trifle oversold. The college graduate's first job at $8,000 is fine if you are single. But try to feed three mouths on it. Try furnishing a house on it. Try sending kids to private nursery school on it. Try it for four months. It can be done, of course, but suddenly all those scorned "middle-class, material values" become rather more important, and confronting cops is far less fun when you have to pay a babysitter while you're gone. (For the record, the median age of marriage in the United States today is 23.1 years for men and 20.6 years for women. The first child typically arrives 1.3 years after marriage.)

The radical appeal will also be defused by one more likely circumstance of the Nixon years: the coming of peace in Vietnam.

WHAT CAN BE the post-Vietnam banner for the new (still large) waves of youth going into college? Reform-the-Democratic-Party, perhaps? Stop - Benig - The - World's Policeman? Reform-the-Draft Restructure-the-University? Without a hot war the issues become quite abstract and it is doubtful that such slogans could attract the large army of crusaders that was raised by the war.

Though unlikely, it is even possible that the coming college generation could turn to more traditional American forms of extra-curricular activity — like the panty raids and phone booth stuffings of calmer time. Whether that would be a plus or a minus is moot.

But the waning of radical protest is not the only hopeful possibility that can stem from our changing Demography.

It is important to remember that "the crime wave" is almost exclusively a "youth crime wave." Accordingly, it can be hoped that as the numbers of young Americans in the crime-prone age groups level off — so will crime itself level off instead of continuing its sharp climb.

It is also important to realize that while the political Left draws its major strength from young people — so does the political Right. Every poll during the last year showed that "youth" as an age group was substantially more pro-Wallace than their grandparents. (Remember that the tire chains that confronted Martin Luther King in Cicero were swung in young hands.)

Accordingly, it is not unrealistic to suppose that as youth ages it may mellow — not only moving from Left toward Center as mentioned before, but from Right toward Center as well. And as the numbers of young people level off, it can be hoped that the troublesome extremes of American life will also level off. By this reckoning, if extremism is not slated to go away, at least there is no reason to expect it to expand.

SO THERE we are. A different America for Mr. Nixon: an America with a majority of Negroes in the middle class, the explosive black population growth in the cities a thing of the recent past, an America with new programs on the books to cope with the problems of the day, an America with the money to pay for the programs, an America with a stable youth population and an America that will see an end to the war.

If this somewhat sanguine view of America's future strikes the reader as dull, fear not, there are forces working to the contrary.

Thus, in an era when poverty has dwindled at a record pace — we have a poverty crisis. When educational standards and attainment have soared — we have an education crisis. When city-dwellers live in better housing and make more money than ever before — we have a city crisis. Now, on the apparent assumption that wherever people congregate there must be a crisis, we can begin to hear the ramblings of something called a "suburban crisis."

So Mr. Nixon and the American public may rest assured that we will not be short of crises in the years to come.

My own view is that what we have had recently in America is a near-crisis in our ability to differentiate crisis from problems, or from goals. I, for one, have had it with promiscuous crisis. There is a point at which crisis-mongering ceases to galvanize action, and instead creates a paralysis and disquietude of its own. I believe we have reached that point. As U Thant has said of China, nations can have nervous breakdowns. We have not had that, but we did go through a case of the national jitters — and it was not a particularly healthy experience. Americans have some good, major problems to face in the years ahead. These range from welfare, crime and transportation to the Kremlin, Peking and the Middle East. If the last few years can teach us anything it is that it is in our best interest to view our very real problems with a certain degree of calmness and perspective.

If that happens, the Nixon Years can be counted successful.

President Asks Vast Wild Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson proposed to Congress Saturday the creation of 13 additional wilderness areas of more than 7.5-million acres — including 323,000 acres in Utah — which would be permanently protected under the national preservation system.

The Ashley and Wasatch National Forests in Utah, to be called the High Uintas Wilderness, was the largest of the areas Johnson asked be placed under the National Wilderness Act. The remaining 12 proposals would create wilderness areas within several different wildlife refuges.

"We can destroy our country by neglect, just as surely as we can save its great, God-given beauty by showing true concern," Johnson said he recommended 30 additions to the preservation system during the last Congress and action was completed on four of those during the last year.

He urged that the Congress take early and favorable action on the new proposals as well as those he had submitted previously.

In transmitting the annual report on the status of the national wilderness preservation system, Johnson concurred with a recommendation of the Interior Department against including 39,936 acres in Utah's Bear River Refuge in the wilderness proposal.

Here are the other areas by state which the President asked be protected:

Oregon — Hart Mountain, 48,000 acres; Three Arch Rocks, 17 acres; Oregon Islands, 21 acres; Malheur, 50,600 acres.

Alaska — Bering Sea, 41,113; Bogosloff, 160,000; Tuxedni, 6,406; St. Lazaria, 62; Hazy Islands, 42; Forrester Island, 2,630.

Washington — Washington Islands, 250.

New Mexico — Salt Creek, 8,500.

Demands Job Security for Witness on C-5 Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., demanded Saturday that the Air Force provide assurance it will not fire a civilian employee who told Congress that costs of the C-5 cargo plane have run $2 billion over estimates.

In a telegram to Secretary of the Air Force Harold Brown, Proxmire accused the Air Force of "a determined effort to punish a courageous public servant," A. E. Fitzgerald.

The message continued: "It will be a sad day indeed for the United States of America if a public servant who tells the truth, gives the facts, and act in the public interest immediately finds that his job is in jeopardy."

"In addition, Congress simply must have the right to get appropriate information if it is to do its job. This cannot be done if the threat of dismissal hangs over the head of any public servant who tells the truth when called before it."

Fatal Airliner Crash Attributed to Whorls of Air

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Tribune said Saturday that turbulence caused by another plane has been pinpointed by federal investigators as the probable cause of a North Central Airlines plane crash in Chicago Dec. 27. The accident cost the lives of 28 persons.

The newspaper, in a copyrighted story, said "heavy vortex turbulence off the wing tips" of a jet that was leaving O'Hare International Airport struck the incoming Convair.

"The invisible whorls of air—much like horizontal cyclones—slammed into the Convair as it was slowing down and was within 100 feet of the ground in what otherwise was a safe and excellent approach," the story said.

The story by Wayne Thomis, aviation editor, included a partial reproduction of remarks taped by the plane's cockpit recorder.

The quotations as related in the story:

First Officer Gerald R. LeValley said calmly: "Skipper, I have the approach lights and runway lights in view straight ahead."

Capt. Marvin A. Payne replied: "Okay, I have them clearly in sight too."

Shortly afterward Payne said: "What's that?"

There was no reply.

Then Payne said: "Power—give me all the power."

LeValley replied: "Dad, you've got all the power there is."

George J. Green, supervisory safety investigator of the Chicago office of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the investigation of the crash is continuing.

"All the groups are still working," he told a reporter. "We haven't made any conclusions."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A National Transportation

Safety Board spokesman said Saturday heavy vortex turbulence off the wing tips is "one of several possibilities" being considered as cause of the fatal crash of a North Central Airlines plane Dec. 27 at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago.

The spokesman said, however, that vortex turbulence has not been pinpointed as cause of the crash.

Reports that vortex turbulence has been pinpointed as the cause were of a speculative nature, the board spokesman said, adding the board's findings have not been made public and the cause will not be divulged until they are.

LT. COL. H. J. TOSO
Information Director

Space PR Unit Gets New Chief

A Torrance Air Force officer has been named director of information for the Space and Missile Systems Organization in El Segundo.

He is Lt. Col. Henry J. Toso, a veteran of 25 years of military service. Col. Toso replaces Lt. Col. Ward M. Miller who recently retired.

Col. Toso previously served as a briefing officer for the Military Assistance Command-Vietnam. In that capacity he was responsible for informing international news media on the day to day activities of the Air Force.

During World War II, he served with the Eighth Air Force in England, amassing 25 combat missions as a B-17 flight engineer.

Col. Toso holds a bachelor's degree from Ohio State University.

The YMCA of Greater Long Beach will launch its 1969 Membership Campaign Monday with a goal of signing up 5,890 new members in the next three weeks.

Timed to coincide with the national membership drive, the all-out effort will begin with kick-off dinners scheduled during the week by the five branches of the YMCA of Greater Long Beach.

More than 800 volunteer workers will be involved in signing up new members with emphasis on enlisting sustaining members who, instead of taking a membership for themselves, agree to sponsor a membership for a deserving boy or girl.

Citywide chairman of the campaign this year is Atty. Clyde Bronn; assistant chairman is Bill George.

BRANCHES and their chairmen are: Downtown; Dale Fly; Lakewood; co-chairmen William Thomas and Tim Tyler; Los Altos, Gary Tidwell; Los Cerritos, Felix Hefflin, and North Community, Kenneth Baustian.

"We are emphasizing the person-to-person approach in this year's drive," said Bronn, "to give our members a chance to contact friends and acquaintances and make them familiar with how the Y operates and what it does."

Weekly report dinners, at which progress toward branch goals will be told, will be held every week at the five branches, Bronn said.

Further information on the campaign, which will end Feb. 15, may be obtained by contacting the various branches: Downtown at 600 Long Beach Blvd.; Lakewood, 5425 Centralia Ave.; Los Altos, 1720 Bellflower Blvd.; Los Cerritos, 15530 S. Woodruff Ave.; Bellflower, and North Community, 6095 California.

Final Recognition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Johnson Friday received the credentials of Columbia's new ambassador, Misael Pastrana Borrero, the last such ceremony of his presidency.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: New people come into your life from all directions, providing interesting relationships. After the start of spring, the main factor in your own desire to develop. Today's natives often have an abiding enthusiasm for humane causes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Just because you meet little resistance doesn't mean you don't work; clear out that backlog! Details pile up in the next couple of weeks. Avoid arguments with women this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on routines for even headway. Enjoy an interlude of pleasant, impersonal contact with associates, neighbors. Plan for a quiet evening at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Nothing serious is going to interfere with your life from the outside. You can be disruptive with a bit of boredom or a tantrum; don't. Catch up with yourself for a change.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): You may have the feeling that something is brewing and you're left out of it. If you will be patient and abstain from even thinking about crying questions, all will come to your attention in due course.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): Conduct yourself so that anything unfavorable said behind your back will appear preposterous.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Criticism

Will get you nowhere. Work on plans already underway. Keep various activities fairly concurrent, switch back and forth if the situation permits your movement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): With so many items of correction to make, your notebook may be your best tool today. Poignant emotion may have to be contained and concealed deeper than public notice. Don't be misled by people posing as confidants.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," lest you lose both the sum and the friend who borrows it, or vice versa. If jealousy or gossip arises out of a casual flirtation, the results involve repercussions you hadn't thought about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Everybody around you seems to want to fight. Just stay out of it until it's time to be a peacemaker. Spend time at your hobby this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Continue your efforts to get projects organized. Today you can, with a few calm requests, get aid that usually would be beyond your reach without a major negotiation. Use the opportunity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might call this "accountant's day," since it mainly is. Expect associates to lack some of their normal drive. Wait for better times to start large operations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): People arouse your sympathy, but understanding their intricacies and jealousy does not give you peace of mind or control over their problems. Hold your imagination to positive lines.

EX-CON, WARDEN DUFFY AGREE:

Capital Punishment No Deterrent

By TONY CILLO
Staff Writer

"We have an argument, Duffy and I," said Bill Sands Saturday night in Long Beach. "I think capital punishment should be abolished right now. He thinks it should be done — yesterday!"

Ex-convict Sands and former San Quentin Warden Clinton T. Duffy — who combined are the "heart" of the 7th Step Foundation — reiterated ideas on capital punishment and conjugal visitation for convicts.

The two men are attending the national foundation's annual board of governors meeting in Hyatt's Edgewater Inn.

The 7th Step Foundation is a group of interested citizens and reformed ex-convicts with the aim of helping the ex-convict to help himself through direct action.

"It's not a deterrent," said Sands of capital punishment. "I think it's an incentive . . . after any brutal murder, there's liable to be three more."

Sands knocked down the argument for capital punishment which uses the Biblical quotation, "... an eye for an eye . . ."

"I'll quote all of that for you," said Sands. "That's a half quote . . . and it's out of context. The whole quotation begins with Christ speaking, 'Ye have heard it said . . .'" and then He spoke of turning the other cheek. Christ rejected the idea of an eye for an eye."

Duffy, 70, observed that an execution cost the public more than keeping a man for life.

Duffy, who has authored several books, repeated some of his written ideas about conjugal visitation for prisoners. He proposes setting up a "prison town" in prison camps already established in mountain sites.

There, the former warden said, prisoners could set up a community of their own and, "most important of all, there would be counseling."

On the problem of homosexuality in prisons — currently being spotlighted by national magazines — Sands said Duffy had an answer. "He did arrange for large numbers of good-looking women to come through the prison all the time . . . workers, entertainers . . ."

"For most men, it was just impossible to see a good looking woman go by during the day and then go back and have a

INAUGURATION tomorrow, but I still find it hard to believe that Dick Nixon, who was campaigning around here when I came to town nearly 20 years ago, is going to be President of the United States.

The country boy from Whittier and Yorba Linda has done it, in classic American style.

It's a story of ambition and determination, of exciting ups and devastating downs, and a magnificent second effort in the presidential arena where in modern times first-time losers have invariably bitten the dust on second tries. (Thomas Dewey, Adlai Stevenson.)

In fact, in U.S. history, only five other first-time defeats have been avenged by subsequent victories, all in the last century. Nixon scored against 20th-century tradition, an angle worth special attention.

MY FIRST personal contact with Nixon came in 1949, when he came to L.B. to speak at an organization meeting of the "Committee of 100" that pushed the then young Craig Hlosmer into the political limelight as a congressional candidate.

A year later, Nixon was campaigning for the U.S. Senate against Helen Gahagan Douglas. His local manager was his great personal friend, Jack Drown, who set up a campaign office in a little building on Sixth between Pacific and Pine, no longer standing.

I had the political desk at the P-T then, and Drown and Nixon were there now and then. Nixon won that memorable contest and the stage was set for what happened in 1952.

THAT WAS the year Dwight Eisenhower, at Chicago, tabbed Nixon as his vice presidential running mate. It was the incident that propelled Nixon into the field of presidential possibilities; if Ike had made another choice, would Dick be taking the oath tomorrow?

Little has been said about today's significance in that 1952 decision.

Nixon had gone to the convention at Chicago as a member of the Calif. delegation pledged to Gov. Earl Warren's presidential candidacy.

Warren dropped out only after Ike had won the first-ballot votes for nomination — a fact that galloped some Californians, among them some Nixon friends.

After the nomination, there was a recess, Ike huddled with his people, and Henry Cabot Lodge announced the Nixon v.p. choice. This had been well-rumored in advance, however; I was there and had asked Nixon about it, getting a non-committal answer.

NIXON WAS then 39, very young for a major nominee at that time. Listed among his assets was an appeal to youth and a recognition of the West. Believing Ike's strength lay mainly in the east, Ike's leaders were looking to the Midwest or West. No doubt there were other considerations not openly revealed.

But that was really a big turning point. After eight years in the vice-presidency, Nixon ran for pres. in '60, lost; ran for gov. of Calif. in '62, lost, and then made that successful second effort for president that brackets him with second-try winners Thomas Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, William Henry Harrison, Grover Cleveland.

And also, for the football fan, with such famed second-effort men as O.J. Simpson, Dick Bass, and Matt Simpson who did it so beautifully for the N.Y. Jets just last Sunday, Nixon, a grid enthusiast, would probably like that comparison.

Students Convene 'Congress'

By JACK McFARREN
Staff Writer

A bill calling for the declaration of a state of war between the United States and North Vietnam and for the resumption of bombing in North Vietnam was soundly defeated by a student mock congress Saturday.

The war declaration was just one of several bills handled by the 3rd Paramount Student Congress in an all-day session in which over 500 students representing over 25 Southern California High Schools participated.

The "Congress" — sponsored by the speech club of Paramount High School — met at Alondra Junior High in Paramount.

The students were divided into a "Senate" and a "House"—435 students to the "House" and 100 to the "Senate" just as in the real Congress. Other students served as clerks, page boys and other congressional officials.

"Senate" and "House" were then divided into two "Senate" committees

OUTLOOK FOR '69 Building Experts Discuss Industry

Three authorities of the real estate-building market will give a 1969 "overview" of the industry at a conference Jan. 23 at Newport Beach.

Sponsored by the University of California Irvine Extension, the program will be at the Newport Inn from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. It is designed to help real estate developers and investors to plan their activities, UCI said.

Preston Martin, the state's savings and loan commissioner, will discuss their problems of finding capital for mortgage investments.

Strong opposition to the location of a Sentinel antimissile-missile site in Compton may be beginning to have effect. The Air Defense Command has initiated a new series of site studies of other areas for the missile base.

This does not mean that Compton, or the other currently-considered site in Bell, has been eliminated, according to Col. William R. Wray of the Sentinel System Command in Huntsville, Ala.

In a meeting Friday between Col. Wray, Compton city officials and other civic leaders, Wray explained that the selection of a site hinges on three factors:

—The tactical effectiveness of the location, which requires that it be within ten to 30 miles of the center of the area to be protected and that the northern horizon not be obscured by mountains or tall buildings.

—Engineering feasibility, which includes the question of cost—both for land acquisition and construction.

—The community impact, a matter of prime concern with the Compton site. "We try to minimize the displacement of people and facilities in the selection of the site," Col. Wray said.

IN THE CASE of the Compton site, the prime dislocation would be to the tax base. The 250-acre Sentinel site is proposed for the eastern half of a 540-acre industrial park now under development and recently annexed to the city.

By 1975 when it is fully developed, the Cabot, Cabot and Forbes Industrial Center would provide between 6,300 and 8,500 jobs, have an annual payroll of $53.7 million and pay an estimated $3.5 million in property taxes.

Educational neglect halts child growth

EVEN BABIES can share in the new reaches of education, and with benefits that can be objectively measured.

A three-year study just completed by the National Institute for Mental Health, in collaboration with Catholic University, shows that skillful teaching can raise I.Q. levels between the age of 15 months and three years. And it can be done without much strain.

CHOSEN FOR THE TEST were 64 15-month-old boys from a poverty neighborhood in Washington, D.C. Thirty-two in the group were tutored an hour each day, the other 32 were not. After 21 months, the tutored youngsters scored an intelligence quotient of 106, compared with 89 for the others.

The volunteer tutors supervised play activity designed to stimulate mental and verbal capacity, read to the children, talked and played with them and took them on walks or short trips. Nobody suffered.

In fact, the test proved that learning can be made natural and enjoyable for the very young. That it will remain so in later school years may reasonably be expected, if the conditions continue favorable.

Neglect is the villain of the piece. In a follow-up study, researchers are discovering that when the tutoring stops the child's I.Q. begins to decline, although his language skills do not.

The lesson seems to be clear: If improving the people's mental capacity is the objective, there is no substitute for high-quality education. And it should begin early and continue over a long period.

$$$ drainage problem for new Cal Expo

THE CALIFORNIA Exposition is plagued by a drainage problem, according to a member of its executive committee, Woodrow A. Miller.

He had in mind the new site, but Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post was thinking of the balance sheet when he spoke of another kind of drainage. Cal Expo ran up a $1.5 million deficit in its first year, and it will continue to prove expensive if it operates again in 1969, Post told the Assembly Government Organization Committee.

He believes the fair could recoup some of its investment if a convention center to serve the Sacramento area were built on the grounds. But representatives of the city of Sacramento want the center situated downtown, where presumably it would be more lucrative to local business.

So the question of what to do about the unfinished, costly and not very popular exposition will soon come before the Legislature.

Post says a fiscal rescue would amount to pouring good money after bad.

The lawmakers must ask themselves three questions, among others:

—Despite the 144-year record of the State Fair, predecessor to Cal Expo, isn't it possible that the public has grown a bit too sophisticated to turn out in profitable numbers for a third-rate modernized version?

—In view of the urgent requirements of education and public health, can the state budget be easily stretched to supply the $2.4 million which the Cal Expo executive committee says it wants?

—If the state as a whole must supply the funds, should the convenience of the Sacramento business community dictate the location of a convention center?

Unless new facts are developed, it is going to be hard for the Legislature to accentuate the positive on any one of the three questions.

What went wrong?

WASHINGTON — Between packing up and handling daily problems which won't go away until the last minute a lot of people in the White House have spent the last few weeks trying to figure out What Went Wrong.

There was Vietnam of course. But President Johnson and his aides feel they are leaving Washington more maligned than their domestic efforts merited. And, among themselves, they have been trying to figure it out. For them it is Saturday night quarterbacking, but it isn't useless because it does show shifting problems that will face the new administration.

THE PROBLEM of consensus, it was felt, wasn't that Johnson tried for too much to start with and so faced an inevitable break-up, but that the nation's sense of unity in 1964 was an illusion. The view from inside now is that reaction to President Kennedy's assassination brought people together in shock but not, after all, in real agreement about how to proceed. When the shock wore off the pendulum reversed. Bitterness was all the greater as both left and right discovered how deep and strong their opposition remained.

HOPE FADING, on one side for dramatic change and on the other side for calm, left hope soured.

If that is right, Richard Nixon's prospects for a more pleasant climate are better than predictable by the thin plurality of his victory. There was not the least illusion of unity in 1968. The new administration aims at consolidating itself in a broad center as President Eisenhower did. It is the consensus idea once

What LBJ hath joined, Nixon must now put asunder

WASHINGTON — We begin to get a hint of what the Nixon administration will be like. It will be in the first instance, a clean-up job of immense proportions — a war to be finished, a poverty program to be reoriented, social programs to be reconstructed, a new approach on law enforcement, to mention only a few of the clean-up jobs.

It is a staggering prospect as anyone who will take the trouble to look through President Johnson's final budget for the fiscal year 1969-70 will quickly discover. For example, in the last five years more than 40 new laws affecting federally supported health programs have been enacted, increasing costs four-fold since 1964.

Manpower and training programs have increased five-fold since 1964. Outlays for education are to increase three times. Model cities and urban development costs are to be sent skyrocketing. Crime control alone would mount to the $1 billion mark and head higher. Outlays for food assistance to the poor are scheduled for three and a half times the amount spent in 1964. Total federal aid to the poor is calculated at $27 billion in 1970, or more than the cost of the Vietnam war.

THIS IS ONLY the beginning. If left unchecked the Johnson programs will triple and quadruple during the Nixon Administration and it is quite evident to the Nixon administrators that somehow and some way the avalanche started in the Johnson Administration has got to be brought under control.

Some heroic and perhaps unpopular action may be called for, and this is clearly hinted by the task force reports which are now being submitted to Nixon. As an example, one task force report recommends the elimination of income tax exemptions on mortgages as a fiscal and social equalizer.

Proposals have been tossed on the table for sharing the federal government's income with the states to dispose of as they wished, for a "negative income tax" to assure everyone a minimum income — anything to get the federal government out from under the impossible burden of running the welfare and poverty programs in the 50 states.

IN ALL HIS PRIDE and humility, President Johnson has left to Nixon an awesome legacy of unfinished business, half-formed programs, uncontrolled projects. Even Johnson confesses that something is wrong with the poverty program. Something is indeed wrong with a program which finances murderous street gangs, underwrites the teaching of race hatred, and has administrators who plot to transfer more than $1 million in public funds to a numbered account in a Swiss bank.

Something is wrong also with an attorney general's office which will not use its full powers to conduct the fight against brutal crimes.

President Nixon's problem, therefore, is to bring some order into the fantastic expansion of every phase of the government in the Johnson years, either that, or accept the expansion and watch it grow to monstrous proportions which can never be brought under control.

Closed mind on open housing

From Our L. A. Bureau

"Is your neighborhood all white or all-American?" is a slogan that was aimed at integration in housing and has produced a house divided.

When the County Human Relations Commission opened its current $250,000 campaign and the rhetorical question began to appear on automobile bumper strips and billboards, somebody complained to Director Herbert Carter. Like this:

"What Jew thought that one up? My neighborhood is all white and very much American. We intend to keep it from becoming an AFRO-AMERICAN CRIME INFESTED GHETTO. People make ghettos. Ghettos do not make people."

THAT BIT OF deathless prose was handprinted with such careful precision that it gave no clue to the author's identity, and he did not sign his name.

Carter is a Negro but he was undismayed. He learned early about the affronts men reserve for their own species. In 1956, when he came to Los Angeles from Little Rock with a sociology degree, the only job offered him was washing dishes. He took it, and the experience did not shatter his poise.

So when he got the hate letter,

Carter framed it and hung it, for any visitor to see, on his office wall.

"I DON'T MIND the slurs," he said. "You see, the response to our campaign has been 90 per cent favorable."

But there was the other 10 per cent, and not all of them were anymous. Some county supervisors — of whom Warren Dorn talked longest and most emphatically — did not think the "all-American" phrase was in good taste.

Although the slogan did not say so, Dorn seemed to sense in it a suggestion that unless you had black or brown neighbors, you were somehow un-American.

THE SUPERVISORS, in their customary excess of timidity, probably would have burned all the bumper strips and splintered all the billboards, but they could not do it. The money had come from private sources.

As it turned out, most people apparently saw in the slogan only the idea that no ghetto, white or black or other, promotes an atmosphere of happy citizenship.

In the first month of the campaign, there were requests for more than 16,000 bumper stickers — the "all-American" one and the other, reading "Good neighbors come in all colors." People asked for some 15,000 of the booklets arguing the advantages of open housing. The commission got 257 telephone calls applauding its labors and only 29 abusing those efforts in foul and blistering language.

THERE WERE THE millions of other people, of course. In a passive way many — not all of them white — no doubt are wary of open housing. These are the people the commission is trying to reach — the vast, silent, and largely uncommitted, multitude.

Nobody knows better than Carter that it won't be easy.

"I don't expect a miracle from this campaign," he said.

Maybe not. But some time in the past 20 or 30 years something extraordinary has happened among the racist. How would you explain it that a man who clamors for a lily-white neighborhood for himself is too ashamed to sign his name?

Tips for Nixon in LBJ file again, but the outgoing team's assessment of its own troubles would seem to imply that it has a better chance of working this time. Four years will tell.

Even more important, from the inside view, was the problem of communications which, in this sense, meant explaining to the country what the President was trying to do. President Johnson, aides said, was always intensely concerned with paving the way for his programs through Congress.

THAT, AT LEAST, is the reason given for the secrecy in preparing and presenting his plans. Congress had to know all about it first. Congress had to get credit, they say. And when the aides objected, Johnson told them it was more important to get things done than to get them talked about. Now the insiders feel the country at large never had a chance to understand the real scope of such programs as model cities, housing, education aid, and therefore broad public enthusiasm never developed. They regret so much secrecy now.

They complain too that the press didn't like Johnson and used anything available as a weapon of assault, justified or not. That is true on the whole, but I think there may be a hidden reason for it.

The press, by a sense of obligation and propriety, tends to shield a president, any president, from over-exposure of human frailties. They watch him so closely that they are bound to harvest reams of unimportant but unflattering facts.

WHEN THE PEESIDENT, as all presidents do at some point, knocks the press publicly with his own complaints, the press cannot answer back in kind. It is frustrating. And, in addition, if the man in the White House isn't one to inspire warm affection, the reporters tend to narrow their eyes as they look at everything he does. It isn't revenge, it is feeling seeping out, unwittingly. Reporters don't tell all the things they know about the private man in the White House, but what they do know can color the things they do say when they talk about the public activities of the President.

Rightist pull checked by regionalism

PLEBISCITES of discontent in 1964 gave former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace a false reading of strength. When he tested that strength nationally four years later, his failure proved his appeal to have been "Radicalism—Southern Style."

That is the conclusion of a booklet by that title, "a commentary on regional extremism," authored by Reese Cleghorn, associate editor of the Atlanta Journal and issued jointly by the American Jewish Committee and the Southern Regional Council.

"If the nation is soon to be led to the extreme right by a demagogue, as it may be," said Cleghorn, "he will have to be something more than a demagogue of provincial thought processes, rhetoric and spirit. Right wing radicalism in the South may help him substantially, but in its provincialism, it has peculiarities that only Southerners can identify with."

WALLACE'S 1968 presidential vote of 65 per cent in Alabama, 63 in Mississippi, 48 in Louisiana, 43 in Georgia and 40 in Arkansas showed little difference from the vote 20 years earlier for Strom Thurmond, "an easily identifiable Southern sectional candidate."

Conservatives outside the South took part in that 1964 "plebiscite of discontent" but saw Wallace, when the presidential chips were down, primarily as a Southern radical. And so, in the 1964 Democratic primary Wallace got 43 per cent of the vote in Maryland, but only 15 per cent in 1968. In Indiana his 30 per cent in 1964 shrank to 12, and in Wisconsin it dropped from 34 per cent in 1964 to 8 per cent in 1968.

Blue collar support seemed to be strong in the "rhetorical protest" stage of the campaign, but dwindled at the moment of truth. Wallace scored poorly in all industrial states: Michigan 10 per cent; Ohio 12; New Jersey 9; Illinois and Pennsylvania 8; California 7.

CLEGHORN FIXES Wallace as an example of the Southern politics of irrationalism which "has become a public way of life in the South since early in the 19th century, when the region had to begin reconciling its devotion to democracy with its denial of democracy to Negroes."

The South's need to embrace American ideals while defending first slavery and later rigid white supremacy, resulted in those familiar "irrational mechanisms," e.g. "our Negroes are happy and don't want any of this agitation," and "the 14th Amendment is really illegal," and "the Supreme Court's decisions are unconstitutional," and "the South is not racist, it is just for states rights and freedom of association."

The South's paranoia made it not difficult to link the Communist scare with the Negro scare as an explanation of why "our Negroes are upset."

Cleghorn contends that religion also has played a major role in shaping the South's "apartness," noting that its three major Protestant denominations became the "state church of the South, defending the status quo." Its most bizarre and anti-Christian instance, he says, was in church defenses of slavery, extending right through the decline of segregation.

THUS MONDAY newspapers would show ushers blocking church doorways to Negroes while, inside, ministers talked of love and sin.

Cleghorn says that although the South has a vulnerability to right wing doctrine, it also "shows resistance to formal organizations of the John Birch kind. The Birch Society is alien, with a limited middle class appeal, though it may yet have greater impact. The Ku Klux Klan is a small fossil from the not-so-distant past. The Citizens Councils, created in the post-1954 convulsion, have been steadily dying and are of little consequence today even in Mississippi."

The pure ideology of other political extremist groups outside the South is too complex, the author says, except for a few paranoid Southerners. What it would take to really catch hold on a national level would be an extremist philosophy that could combine the national appeal "with the emotional set and the religious forms indigenous to the South."

L. A. C. SAYS

As Nixon takes the top job

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

AS RICHARD NIXON takes the oath of office tomorrow many Long Beach men and women will with great pride recall their association with him over his political years. Some are doctors who traveled with him on many of his campaigns. Others have been on his committees and met with him on many occasions. Many have met with him during his recent campaign. The great satisfaction these people have enjoyed is in finding he is the same decent, dedicated, humble individual they have enjoyed over these 20 years.

It was 21 years ago when I was publisher of the Independent that I looked up from my desk and saw a young hatless man walking up and down in front of my office. My secretary was away from my desk. So I went out and asked if I could do anything for him. His reply was: "I am Dick Nixon running for the Senate and would like to talk to Mr. Collins." We had a fine talk and on many future occasions when he was passing through he would drop in for a talk about his campaign and issues.

TWO WEEKS AGO I was privileged to meet with him and a small group when he was here for his physical checkup. It was thrilling to talk to him and watch his actions and listen to him. He was the same decent, modest and dedicated individual I had known during that Senate campaign. His opponent was Helen Gahagan Douglas who was a far left winger from the theatrical world. Because of his two years in Congress — where he fought against Communist influences which culminated in the Alger Hiss-Chambers conspiracy disclosures by him — he was a natural candidate for the Republican party.

I have had the opportunity to meet with him on other occasions when he was senator, vice president and candidate for governor. During all those meetings and years he has remained the same kind of man despite some of the most virulent personal attacks experienced by anyone involved in office-seeking during those years. He has been successful because he has been fearless and loyal to the principles he laid out in seeking his first office.

It will be recalled how he took over when President Eisenhower suffered his many heart attacks while in office. Here again he showed his decency and loyalty. He did not try to build up Nixon but rather to do all he could to carry on the Eisenhower policies. It will be remembered how he courageously stood up in his car and faced the mobs in South America that threatened him. And his kitchen debate with Khrushchev in the Moscow industrial show. Because of his wide travels as vice president and since then on legal business it is probable he is the best informed man on foreign affairs ever to enter the White House.

Walter Lippmann observed a few weeks ago that the presidency "is the most powerful and glittering office on earth — and there are other times like this one when the president must realize how big are the problems and how limited are his powers."

There is good reason to believe Nixon recognizes these limitations. But reports from those close to him indicate he assumes office with the same vigor and dedication he has shown on many occasions during his service in both houses of Congress as vice president and his many campaigns.

IT IS NOT ONLY his political office experience that is remembered by those who have known him for most of his life. They remember him as a helper in his father's Whittier store — how he drove to market at four o'clock each weekday morning to get the vegetables for the store. How he worked his way through college and enlisted in the Navy although as a Quaker he was eligible for deferment.

This is the man who will become president tomorrow. He has some of the greatest problems ever faced by a new president. He needs and deserves the prayers of all our people. He is a fine, decent, capable man for the job.

Hearts in Long Beach

EDITOR:

November, 1951, has a special meaning for all our family. This is the year we moved from Chicago to Long Beach. If someone would ask me then, where is the next place to heaven, I would truthfully answer, I am living in it right now.

It was unbelievable to see flowers blooming in December and have a summer in the winter time. I was most impressed by the ocean. Often I wondered how could anyone drive without stopping to admire the majestic sight and the mysterious sound of the sea.

Another thing which made Long Beach like the next place to heaven was the people. We never experienced so much friendship before. Our oldest son Anthony, 12, was given opportunity to be a Newspaper Boy for the Press-Telegram and he received reward for doing his job well. He was named "newspaper boy of the month" and my husband and I were invited to dinner together with Anthony, on this special occasion.

In Long Beach we found good schools for our five children and we were well accepted to the church of our faith. We also have been very fortunate to find right people in the business field.

Today, even though seven hundred miles away, quite often, we find ourselves walking along the shore and observing beautiful sunset. Before too many years, we shall return. Oregon is a beautiful country, but in our hearts, Long Beach remains as a next place to heaven.

Stage is set for peace solutions

WASHINGTON — Lyndon Johnson is not a very patient man. "There's so much to be done," he used to confide, "and so little time left to do it in."

Lyndon said this a year before the big announcement of March 31, 1968, and it was an early tip-off that he was not going to run again.

Much of his impatience dealt with the desire to get legislation passed, get his Great Society program launched. But there gradually developed in the President an impatient patience regarding foreign affairs. And though current historians are writing about Johnson's accomplishments on the domestic front, future historians may consider as more important his goals on the foreign front.

Unfortunately he was not able to achieve some of these goals. But he laid the foundation, and that was behind his emphasis on peace in his State of the Union message.

LYNDON JOHNSON used to get even more irritated with the Russians. Editorial after editorial in Pravda and Izvestia excoriated him. He knew that Russian newspapers are run by the Kremlin. However, he didn't answer back.

Instead, he invited Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to Washington, and the two men had a long talk, in which the President from Texas gave the Foreign Minister from Moscow — whom Khrushchev used to kid by telling him he looked like Nixon — his blunt views on the fact that the two major powers had to work together or else blow up the world together.

To show his sincerity the President got a consular treaty with Russia ratified by the Senate despite the opposition of J. Edgar Hoover. The Russians read the papers. They knew what his obstacles were. They knew that he was determined to keep his word.

What Johnson especially wanted was to get Russian support for peace in Vietnam. They were of considerable help in getting the North Vietnamese to the Paris talks. Johnson was hoping to make some progress before he left office. He failed.

BUT THE SET-UP is there in Paris ready for President Nixon to cash in on peace.

Equally important, the outgoing President has reached an informal understanding with the Kremlin to work together to prevent war in the Near East. The Russians have even offered, in writing, to send Soviet troops to the Near East as part of a peacekeeping force.

This is considered by the few who

Requiem for survivors of the Satevepost

N. Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON—None of the obituaries on the death of the Saturday Evening Post saw fit to salute those of us who began our careers in its service. In those days, which must have been, oh, about 1935. Tuesday morning invariably began with a depressing bundle of Saturday Evening Posts, neatly bound in brown paper and smelling of fresh ink, lying on the front steps, a dead weight on a soul that yearned to soar.

That depressing bundle represented duty — hideous, distasteful and loathsome to the 9-year-old who would have to sell its contents, would have to find 35 or 40 unbelievably beneficent adults willing each to part with the sum of 5 cents before there could be any stickball playing, or snowball fighting, or ringalievio after school that week.

OLDER HEADS assured us that the sacrifice of freedom was well made in that cause of learning about work — this was the Depression — but as we sat in school Tuesdays, dreading the 3 p.m. bell that would propel us into capitalistic activity, we cultivated a distaste for work that has stayed with us the rest of our lives, and a distaste for the Saturday Evening Post that lingered into middle age.

The Post was not a hot seller, at least in the type of community where 9-year-olds were expected to help earn their keep. True Story was what the ladies of the community wanted; its confessions about rendezvous in rumble seats that came to no good — invariably illustrated with posed photographs revealing a flash of garter — must have spoken of a remote romantic world to women sitting under unshaded light bulbs in kitchens of landlord green.

In any case, the Post, with its Norman Rockwell vision of sweet-greening America and Iowa Republicanism, was hard selling. The men preferred Liberty (reading time for this story: 3 minutes, 17 seconds) defunct these many years.

THIS SOCIOLOGICAL wisdom was embedded in the mind as you put on roller skates on Tuesday afternoon, slung the canvas bag of Posts over the shoulder and set off to ring doorbells. "Want to buy a Saturday Evening Post?" (The sales pitch was distinctively soft, when not downright defeated.) "Haven't you got True Story?" "The Post? Never read it. Why don't you sell Liberty?"

In a town of 30,000 persons, 35 door-to-door sales was a good week. It usually took four or five days to sell off the whole bundle, and the net profit was 25 cents. (Not bad in the economy of the 1930's; you could buy three apples for a nickel.)

The Post outlived a great many things that we associate with it in remembering the ordeal of having to sell it. Things like Liberty magazine and three apples for a nickel and roller skates. (Why don't children roller-skate any more?)

IT ALSO OUTLIVED landlord green, the unshaded light bulb, the rumble seat and the boy peddler. Recalling that time, those of us who endured it will probably remember that it was supposed that unpleasant work, like selling the Saturday Evening Post in a society hungering for True Story, would ultimately prove beneficial to us.

We were misled. There were undoubtedly a few benefits. We learned early that poor people living in ugliness and despair prefer romantic escapism to hard-headed Republican virtues, and we learned that work is not all it's cracked up to be when it is imposed on you, like a sentence, by the economy.

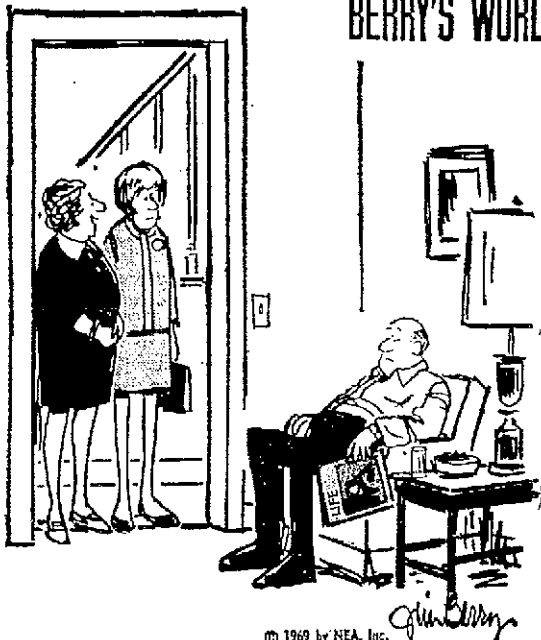

Yet many persons, who endured it during the Depression, will protest, and do so regularly to their children, that young people today would be a superior lot if they had had some practical experience of hardship. This is the traditional boast of the parent, heard down through the generations, that he is a better fellow than his offspring because things were harder when he was a child.

It is not to be taken seriously, yet it has become such a commonplace among parents who spent their childhood in the Depression that many of their children have developed a sentimental longing for the Depression. You see them all over town trying to re-create the Depression through simulated poverty, as though suspicious that the accident of birth in good times has deprived them of an edifying experience.

IRONICALLY, THE Depression is expensive nowadays. Ragged old imitation furs from the 1930's now retail in the flossier boutiques at twice their original cost. Rentals on imitation slum housing around campuses are three and four times a laborer's salary in 1935. And what do the seekers have for their money? A plastic Depression, its phoniness betrayed by their own preference for Ramparts over True Story.

The Depression was not everybody having a ball and being picturesque. It was not being able to play ringalievio until you sold 35 copies of the Saturday Evening Post. It was a dead weight on souls that yearned to soar.

Columnists on the opinion pages are chosen to represent diverse viewpoints and do not necessarily reflect the editorial position of this newspaper.

Collector's Dog Bottle Valued Most

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

MRS. A. H. SANBORN AND TWO POOCHES
Real-life Dog Approves of Bottled Bowser

—Staff Photo

Perhaps the most extensive private collection of Jim Beam bottles in the United States is the one assembled by Mrs. A. H. Sanborn, 4365 Clubhouse Drive, Lakewood.

Collectors have bid as high as $1,800 for her Chicago First National Bank bottle — one of 100 issued in 1966 before the distilling company destroyed the mold.

BUT TO MRS. Sanborn, the most cherished bottle in her collection of 90 Beam containers is the prototype of one yet to be issued.

Most people would glance past its canine shape to focus on the unusual lines of the San Francisco cable car bottle or ornate gold-embossed creations of the executive series. But not dog lovers like Mrs. Sanborn, a prominent figure in the Humane Society of the United States, California Branch.

The bottle is the shape of a sitting poodle with one upraised paw resting on a ball inscribed "Penny."

As yet it is undecided how many of the poodle trophy bottles will be issued for distribution in the fall.

ONE THING THAT has been determined is a percentage of royalties from each case of the commemorative bottles sold will be donated to the Humane Society.

This was confirmed Thursday in the Sanborn home by Martin Lewin, executive vice president of the James B. Beam Distilling Co.

En route to Australia, Lewin stopped in the Southland to address a joint meeting of Long Beach and Los Angeles Beam bottle collectors' clubs at Long Beach Elks Lodge.

Highlight of the banquet was presentation of the 1969 Elks Club Centennial bottle to Robert Shaw, grand exalted ruler of the Long Beach lodge.

Accompanying Lewin from Chicago was David Nissen, designer of the more than 120 custom specialty bottles issued in the past 15 years by the distilling company.

Mrs. Sanborn's interest in collecting the Beam bottles began in 1964 and led to her personal correspondence with Jeremiah T. Beam.

As a result, she received an invitation from Lewin to visit the Kentucky distillery and tour the china factory in Antioch, Ill., where the bottles are manufactured.

HER VISIT WAS made shortly after her pet poodle, Penny, expired following surgery in December 1966.

While at the Beam executive offices in Chicago Mrs. Sanborn discussed her desire to channel a percentage of profits from the collectors' bottles to charity. Her conclusion was the idea of a trophy bottle to benefit the Humane Society.

Her suggestion was approved and Nissen designed and presented her two handmade samples of the bottle one year ago. A production mold is tentatively scheduled for May.

Perhaps the demise of Penny, the miniature black poodle who died at 7½ years old will serve to help countless thousands of dogs deprived of the love and attention Mrs. Sanborn lavished upon Penny.

NONPARTISAN COMMISSION STUDY URGED Needs of Minority Students

The Faculty Council of California State College at Fullerton asked Gov. Reagan Saturday to name "a nonpartisan, blue-ribbon commission" to solve "... the real and too-long-ignored educational needs of minority groups."

Individual state colleges cannot meet the need, the Faculty Council declared, because they have neither the resources nor the authority.

"Recent events in the state college system amply demonstrate that... such education... is the most serious problem facing higher education in California... These events also indicate that the needs are so extensive and complex that they cannot be dealt with on a campus-by-campus ad hoc basis, nor within the framework of existing or currently-proposed funding."

"What is needed, instead, is a large-scale statewide approach, which views the problem in its entirety and which provides the authority and funding necessary to a solution."

The blue-ribbon commission could make an objective investigation to outline the nature and scope of the problem, and provide information "which will enable meaningful and effective programs for solutions."

The Faculty Council said that "no single state college, nor the state college system as a whole, can mount this kind of an attack on the problem, for the reason that they have neither the resources nor the authority."

If Gov. Reagan appoints the study commission, it should report to the Legislature and request appropriation of funds sufficient to fulfill its recommendation, the professors insisted.

"To insure that the commission and its recommendations will enjoy broad public support, such commission should include members from the minority community, the educational system, both political parties and the public at large," the Faculty Council advised.

If a study commission were so organized, it would not be "overly influenced by local events and the locally applied pressures from vested interests," the professors counseled.

Dr. Lee R. Kerschner, chairman of the Faculty Council, said he will meet with Gov. Reagan if invited to more fully explain the proposals. He said the recommendations were adopted unanimously by the Faculty Council.

NORWALK OFFICIAL RESIGNS

A letter of resignation from City Attorney Louis Gordon was received by members of the Norwalk city council, it was disclosed Friday.

Gordon, who becomes the third top-level official to resign from city government in the past six months, reportedly said in his letter that he was resigning effective Feb. 4 for personal reasons.

Mayor Arthur Gerdes, late Friday, confirmed that the city attorney, who is paid $17,500 a year, had submitted his resignation to council members.

and 16 "House" committees for introduction and discussion of bills.

In the committees the students introduced their own bills as well as bills actually handled by the 90th Congress. Unlike the real Congress, each committee handled all bills.

Bills introduced included housing bills, free mailing privileges for certain members of the armed services, GI education and airline passenger taxes.

Rich Robinson of Los Angeles High School explained why the war declaration bill failed in his committee. First, he said, students feared that such a declaration would lead to war with the Soviet Union. Second, the students reasoned that it would definitely end the peace talks. Besides, said Robinson, with the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, the President already has all the power he needs.

The students, while they defeated the war resolu-

Juvenile Post for McKone

Alan N. McKone, 45, of Westminster, a deputy district attorney for Orange County, will go to work Monday as an Orange County Juvenile Court referee.

His appointment was announced by Juvenile Court Judge Bruce W. Sumner, who said he was chosen from almost 50 applicants from throughout the southland who sought the post after the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram announced that a fifth referee would be named for the court.

McKone, who lives at 14351 Middleton Lane with his wife and their three children, helped found the West Orange County Boys' Club and is a director of the organization.

tion, did support bills that aided servicemen.

The students played their roles well. In fact, they became for a while their real counterparts, complete with arguments and filibustering. One student later said he understood why Congress had "such a hard time getting anything done."

The "Congress" was advised by Herb La Bin, speech instructor at Paramount High School. Paramount High School students Jerry Towbridge and Kerry Riddle handled the arrangements for the program, from providing for a two man communications team to ready election results to the news media, to providing a chair for the Senate election.

Saturday evening an awards assembly featured the local chapter of the "Up With People" singing group. Gavel was presented to the best speakers of the session.

Duffy also fought the problem, Sands said, by changing cell assignments.

Sands was a prisoner in San Quentin during the time Duffy was warden. Sands, who spent considerable time in the Duffy home, still calls the warden "Pop."

One of the problems many ex-convicts once had after rejoining society was finding a job. Some complain of the same problem today.

"We don't box with a man," said Sands. "We just say this guy needs a job."

The 7th Step Foundation encourages ex-convicts to be honest in their approach to employers, and it seeks out the help of citizens in finding ex-convicts jobs. Most of the people directly approached are reasonable, according to Sands.

In an aside while speaking of honesty, Sands quipped, "Here we are in this hotel, and nobody's counting the silver."

During the day Saturday, the board of governors revamped its organizational set-up to reduce the number of members to seven. The reduction, Sands said, was in order to add to the foundation's effectiveness.

The seven include Joe Wallace, of Phoenix, president, and Sands, Lee Bart, retired San Francisco millionaire; Duffy; Horace Ash, of Phoenix; Tobe Peek, of Kansas City; and Fred Feldman, of Long Beach.

The board also has been working on rewriting affiliate agreements and national by-laws as well as on fund-raising matters and record-keeping procedures.

Tonight, at the Edgewater, Sands and Duffy will speak at an open-to-the-public dinner. Also headlined for the event is Dan Blocker, "Hoss" of the television series, "Bonanza."

Tickets for the event, which includes entertainment, are available to the public at the door at $10 a person. Funds from the dinner will go to aid the foundation.

Policeman Answers Student Doubts

By CHUCK CHEATHAM

A new program to increase communication and understanding between police and high school students has been inaugurated at Millikan High school.

Called "Person to Person," the program has been in effect two weeks and preliminary results have been so favorable that the plan may be extended to other high schools next fall, Lt. John C. Cowan, commanding officer of the police Community Relations bureau, said.

Sgt. Charles B. Ussery, a 10-year veteran on the department, has been assigned an office at Millikan and from 8 a.m. to noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays he is there to "answer all questions of students concerning law enforcement and to discuss any problem where my background in law enforcement can provide answers," Sgt. Ussery declared.

"I most emphatically am not on campus in a law enforcement capacity but I am there as an information officer and to emphasize the positive aspects of law enforcement. It is unfortunate but most young men and adults come into contact with policemen under negative circumstances when getting a traffic ticket or for violating other laws," Sgt. Ussery said.

Sgt. Ussery's hours on campus are flexible and he is accepting invitations to discuss with classes laws and law enforcement.

Questions from concerned students have covered a wide range, Sgt. Ussery said.

Then include:
"Are police picking on kids?"

"Generally no."
"What is legal conduct and illegal conduct under the loitering law?"

"The loitering law prohibits any person under 18 from loitering in any public place, including street, park, pier, beach, cafe, theater, store building, school ground or other place where the public has access.

"You are not loitering if you are attending public affairs, theaters, sponsored parties, school functions or attending to any legitimate business errand."

"If a person under 18 is arrested but not convicted or arrested and convicted does he have to carry that record for the rest of his life?"

"No. If he is arrested and is innocent he can have the record sealed and when asked if he has been arrested for a felony he can legally answer 'no.'"

"If he is arrested and convicted he can have the record sealed if he leads a blameless life for five years. In both instances this is done by petitioning the Municipal Court and can be done by an attorney or by a private party filling out the proper legal forms and submitting them to the court."

Sgt. Ussery said he has also been asked numerous questions concerning specific traffic laws and is glad to answer all such questions.

Lt. Cowan said the program was started in cooperation with the Long Beach Unified School District's Board of Education and Robert A. Wood, Millikan principal.

"Through other programs now in effect," Lt. Cowan said, "we are now reaching students in grammar and junior high schools with a positive law enforcement program and we hope this pilot program will be a success so that we will have contact with all of our students."

"I will be glad to meet with any individual or group in my office, on campus or in classrooms at any time when I can be of help," Sgt. Ussery said.

Fun's Gone Gone

LONDON, N.J. (UPI) — It was fun while it lasted, but Linden's go-go dancers have agreed to stop their see-through lunchtime gyrations in two restaurants which had been getting quite a play from tired businessmen.

"The girls weren't breaking any law," Gregorio said, "but the whole thing was giving the town a bad name."

3 Southland Men Held on Gun Count

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Three men were held Saturday on federal charges of possessing unregistered machine guns after agents seized a trailer loaded with 90 semiautomatic weapons.

The suspects were arrested by federal agents who followed them from Southern California to an empty San Francisco warehouse. The officers said they seized the M-1 carbines plus kits to convert them to fully automatic fire.

The men were identified as Albert C. Holbert, 31, Newport Beach; James Winterbourne, 29, Capistrano Beach; and Michael Malone, 20, Sausalito.

Compton Antimissile Site

ture would be more like this:

Annual tax revenues of $1.5 to $1.75 million, about 3,400 jobs—including the 250 for civilian workers at the missile base—and an annual payroll of about $25 to $30 million.

Location of the site on the Cabot, Cabot and Forbes property would also require the rerouting of two freeways. The interchange for the Route 91 (Artesia) Freeway and the Route 47 (Industrial Freeway) is expected to fall in the eastern half of the proposed missile site.

Construction is scheduled to begin on the Artesia Freeway next year and relocation of the interchange would delay the project as much as six years, according to the California Division of Highways.

FINAL ROUTE adoption for the Industrial Freeway is expected later this month and any change would delay that route by a like period of time.

The school systems—Compton City Schools, Compton Union High School District and Compton College—have an additional objection that while the industrial park would provide taxes and not pupils the missile base would provide pupils and not taxes.

Of the 650 personnel at the missile site, according to Col. Wray, only about 150 to 200 are expected to be single military personnel. The others, presumably, would have children to be educated in the already overcrowded Compton schools.

To quote a letter from Leonard C. Erickson, superintendent of the Compton City (elementary) Schools, which was included in a 35-page compilation of objects presented to Col. Wray and his staff:

"The district has no funds for building additional classrooms, nor for acquiring additional school sites, nor for employing additional personnel to teach these students... The district has no school sites within the proposed area, and, therefore, children in the area would have to be bussed to schools that are already filled to capacity."

COL. WRAY was scheduled to hold his meeting with the Compton officials last Dec. 16, but he was delayed a month by similar meetings with irate citizens at sites proposed for Chicago, Boston, Detroit and Seattle.

At each of those meetings, he has begun with an explanation of the Sentinel Defense System,

SENTINEL MISSILE
Dwarfs G1 Alongside

which is designed to protect the entire United States from a over-the-pole nuclear attack by the Chinese Communist regime through the 1970s.

The system would also provide the basis for an expanded anti-missile system after that if one is then deemed necessary, Col. Wray said.

The system would include extreme-range radar-tracking stations along the U.S.-Canada border, missile sites for the long-range Spartan and short-range Sprint missiles, and on-site radar installations to track attacking missiles and guide the intercepting missiles.

The Spartan is a 55-foot-long, three-stage, solid-propellant rocket designed to intercept incoming ballistic missiles above the atmosphere by exploding its one-megaton nuclear warhead near the enemy missile.

GUIDING THE Spartan to the intercept would be the responsibility of a 90-foot complex of radar transmitter-receivers, with only the top 30 feet above ground.

These advanced radar devices do not move to track their target. Instead the direction of the radar beam is controlled by varying the impulses to electronic equipment imbedded in the concrete walls of the unit.

A support area provides administrative quarters for the entire site as well as barracks for single service personnel. Married service personnel and civilian employees would have to provide their own quarters off the site.

Fifteen such complexes, each requiring 250 acres of land and providing an egg-shaped zone of defense 450 miles wide and 800 miles long, are proposed for the United States—with one of those in Hawaii.

"The ideal location for each of these sites is as near as possible to the prime target in the area—in your case, the Los Angeles urban and defense complex," explained Col. Wray.

"Since the attack is expected from the north, the preferred location would be somewhat north of the target area. But in Los Angeles that presents some special problems because of the surrounding mountains to the north that would mask the radar horizon," he continued.

Because of these two conflicting requirements, the Compton site and Chelli Air Force Base (now a military warehouse facility) near Bell were the two prime sites selected from 60 investigated when the Sentinel system was approved by former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara in December, 1967.

HOWEVER, WRAY conceded, "We recently decided we may possibly have made a mistake and are going back and looking again at some other sites and investigating some new ones."

The final decision on a recommended location for the base is still "several months away," Col. Wray said. When that recommendation is made, it must be submitted to Congress for consideration, he said. Unless Congress takes some action to alter in 30 days after submission, the Air Defense Command is automatically authorized to proceed with that site.

Orange County Land Record

A record number of real estate transactions yielding Orange County $2 million in fees were logged by the office of County Recorder J. Wylie Carlyle, it was learned Friday.

Carlyle said 277,287 documents passed through his office in 1968—14,000 more than in the year before. In addition, fees totaling $675,546, as compared with $627,276 in 1967, were received.

A total of $1,382,666 was received from property transfer taxes, which in 1968 began supplanting federal documentary taxes, Carlyle said. The federal tax has been discontinued. The transfer tax is at the same rate as the document tax—$1.10 per $1,000 in valuation.

LOS ALTOS Y OFFERING 3 NEW CLASSES

Three classes of family interest are being offered by the Los Altos YMCA, 1720 Bellflower Blvd.

Starting Tuesday at 1 p.m. a special class in yoga will be offered. In addition, a class on investment securities will be offered starting Monday at 1 p.m. and group guitar classes will begin Feb. 3 at 5 p.m.

The concert will be free to the public. The performer has been furnished to the Chamber by Western Concerts Association under whose auspices he performed with the Petroff Strings.

The young Los Angeles-born artist began violin lessons when he was 3½ years of age, and made his concerto debut with symphony orchestra at 6. He has performed as soloist with more than 20 symphony orchestras, and is the first American to receive the Yehudi Menuhin Scholarship for study in London where he augmented his education in 1964 under Menuhin's personal guidance.

Since 1965 he has been studying under Mehli Mehta, professor of music at UCLA.

$250,000 Drug Raid Nets Five

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (UPI) — Five young men were arrested Friday night at a Tamlpais Valley antique shop by narcotics agents who seized marijuana, hashish and LSD.

Marin County agents, acting on a tip from San Francisco police, swooped in on the shoreline highway shop. They found seven pounds of hashish, 17 1/2 pounds of marijuana and 1,000 LSD capsules in the building and an additional 700 LSD capsules, a pound of hashish and small amounts of marijuana in a car parked nearby.

Officers, who said the drugs were worth $250,000 on the retail market, held Richard Argento, 21, and Robert F. Black, 27, both of San Rafael; Jeffrey Forcier, 20, Belmont; Charles N. Hess, 26, Oakland; and Richard C. Pace, 24, owner of the shop.

Cary Grant Reaches 65, Still Tops as Movie Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Cary Grant turned 65 today, still unsurpassed as the movies' leading player of romantic comedy.

Women who were teenagers when Grant began his movie career have become grandmothers while Grant has continued as the screen lover of the world's most glamorous stars.

Since 1933, when Mae West invited him to "come up and see me some time" in the film "She Done Him Wrong," Grant has appeared in more than 60 movies opposite such leading ladies as Loretta Young, Katharine Hepburn, Irene Dunne, Rosalind Russell, Carole Lombard (to whom he delivered the often mimicked line, "Julie, Julie"), Rita Hayworth, Ingrid Bergman, Myrna Loy, Marilyn Monroe, Grace Kelly, Sophia Loren, Audrey Hepburn, Doris Day and Leslie Caron, among others.

Grant once picked the age of 35 as life's break-even point, saying that things got better after that. He scored his most memorable movie triumphs after the age of 40.

Grant has been married four times. His fourth wife gave birth to his only child in 1966, when Grant was 62. The marriage ended in divorce.

Grant's most recent movie triumph was "The Graduate" (United Artists), in which he played a 30-year-old man who seduces a 19-year-old girl.

Martin to Leave Sands for Piece of Vegas Riviera

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Dean Martin filed an application Friday with the State Gaming Control Board to purchase 10 percent of the Riviera Hotel on the Las Vegas Strip.

A spokesman for the board said the board will act on the 50-year-old entertainer's application at its next meeting.

Martin is expected to perform at the Riviera Hotel in May. His contract with the Sands Hotel expires April 29.

Martin will pay $80,000 for his piece of the Riviera. The deal is considered part of his offer to leave the Sands, the only hotel-casino he has appeared at on the glittering strip.

He will be the second big star to leave the Sands. Frank Sinatra left in 1967 after an altercation with a Sands official.

Sinatra went to the Caesar's Palace, making his first appearance there last month.

Sammy Davis Jr. is the last member of the Sinatra clan still with the Sands.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

'Fiddler' Writer Shuns the Limelight

NEW YORK — A small, vital, middle-aged man with bushy hair that flared out at the sides and at the back was rushing along W. 57th St. a cold day recently carrying a guitar case.

"Do you know who that is?" I said to a girl trotting along in the cold. "That's Joe Stein..."

"Joe Stein?"

"The millionaire writer who wrote 'Fiddler on the Roof' and 'Zorba' and 'Plain and Fancy' and recently produced 'We Bombed in New Haven.'"

Joe doesn't seek fame. He has a little workshop hideaway in the mid-50s. The guitar case that suggested he might be a musician really contained a guitar he'd bought for one of his three sons. Joe has been around Broadway writing since 1945 when he and Alan Jay Lerner composed the funnies for Hildegarde in NBC's "The Raleigh Room" on radio.

Until then he had been a psychiatrist case worker after getting out of Columbia University.

"Fiddler" really brought the modest little Joe to the world's attention.

"I've found that the most dangerous thing to do in writing is to figure what's commercial," Joe said the other day in Gallagher's. "Fiddler" was the least commercial show imaginable. What was it about? A lot of old Jews who were poor and oppressed! Who'd buy that?"

JOE HAS SINCE attended "Fiddler" openings in eight countries including Japan where the Japanese exclaimed, "Do they really understand this in America?"

"The Japanese said 'This is very Japanese.' I told them, 'I guess this is very everybody.'"

Joe and his wife don't care about the Celebrity Whirl and while he may be seen around the Beverly Hills Hotel pool (while doing the movie script for "Fiddler"), he says, "I am not a coast fellow."

"A lot of people play games with their lives trying to be at the right place at the right time with the right people," he says. "There are enormously successful people who are worrying about trivia."

"I try to live my life as fully as I can. You're just around once and you should use the time well."

So they live in Westchester — when they're not off attending "Fiddler" openings abroad. "I just signed a contract for it to be done in Spain," Joe said. "I don't live a very exciting life. I don't want a yacht — I get seasick."

Joe and writer Will Glickman, now a San Franciscan, broke into B'way a long time ago when Richard Kollmar, impressed with the success of "Oklahoma," suggested they do an equally successful show about such a state as Pennsylvania.

"We investigated the Amish people," Joe recalled. "They wouldn't talk to us. They ran away, they wouldn't let us take pictures." The show, "Plain and Fancy," nevertheless brought first recognition to Morton De Costa, directing for the first time, and to Shirl Conway and Barbara Cook. And it cast Joe Stein forever in Broadway stage writing.

JOE WENT ON to "Mr. Wonderful," "Juno," "Enter Laughing," and then "Fiddler," which eventually intrigued Producer Hal Prince — and after that came "Zorba."

"I enjoyed doing 'Zorba,'" Joe nodded, over a glass of vodka and tomato juice. "It says something about why we're walking around. It has a lot of comedy and yet a serious theme. I think that's the way we go through life... tragedy and comedy. That's why I like the work of Sean O'Casey so much. Zorba is a statement about vitality and making every minute of your life count."

Joe is a close friend of Carl Reiner, Alan Arkin and others, and in his time he was involved in writing projects with Neil Simon.

Not long ago he happened to encounter Neil Simon coming out of a fancy East Side building. Once upon a time neither was so rich. Simon had just left Jamaica.

"Left it? Why didn't you buy it and bring it back with you?" asked Joe.

"Ha ha" chuckled Simon. "And what are you doing here, Joe?"

"Well," said Joe, "my dog just rented an apartment in this building."

Private Schools Form Classes For Spring Term

Private schools and nurseries in the Long Beach area at midyear are forming classes and taking registration for the spring semester.

Chadwick School, a co-educational, country day school on the Palos Verdes Peninsula, now in its 34th year, emphasizes development of the potential of each student from pre-1st to the 12th grades. The school's curriculum is designed to meet the requirements of the nation's leading colleges and universities.

Chadwick's small classes (12 to 18 students in an average recitation class, and as few as 5 or 8 in specialized classes) promotes instructors' interest in the progress and problems of each student. In addition, each student has a faculty advisor.

The school's program also offers competitive sports and a variety of extracurricular activities, including drama and public speaking. A six-week summer session also is offered.

Transportation is provided by a fleet of school station wagons and by chartered bus. C. Brett Boocock is headmaster of the school which occupies 50 acres at 4040 Palos Verdes Drive, North.

Belmont Heights Preschool, and expansion of Mrs. Robison's School, 3621 E. Broadway, offers a new building especially designed for preschool and kindergarten use.

The interior is described as completely modern, with a home-like atmosphere.

Patios, trees and flowers provide a garden-type play area complete with specially designed play equipment.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Robison, who operated the school the past 10 years on a half-day basis, now are accepting full-day children.

Well planned hot lunches are served.

Kohn School for Educational Therapy and the Reading Development Center specializes in diagnostic, learning, reading, perceptual, language and speech problems of school age children and college students.

The Center now offers a full-time program for children from kindergarten age through junior high school, and a part-time program for children and adults.

The School and Center have a unique perception laboratory for the use of neurologically handicapped, "learning disabled individuals," and persons interested in speed reading.

The School is directed by Gerhard Kohn, Ph.D., Licensed Psychologist. Interviews for diagnostic appointments may be made by phoning (213) 597-2405 or (714) 892-0611.

Carousel preschool and kindergarten, 366 Cherry Ave., is for 2 to 6-year-old children.

Advanced kindergarten has been added to programs in kindergarten, handicraft, music and drawing. Hot meals are served daily.

A large supervised playground with a special "2-year-old yard" enables children to play with others of their own ages.

Features for older children include a weekly "Adventure day," build a balanced personal-

Classes are from 6:45 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

Progress School, in its 35th year, offers instruction for normal and superior students from the primary grades through high school. A testing program includes the National Educational Development Tests in the secondary segment.

The individual's needs are analyzed and special instruction is given to build a balanced personality. The academic is emphasized with instruction in the basic skills and development of good study patterns.

A Reading Clinic for all ages and a Spanish program from primary through high school also are featured.

Escuela de Montessori, under the guidance of the American Montessori Society, has facilities in Redondo Beach for 2½ to 9-year-old children, and for 2½ to 7-year-olds at Long Beach and Westchester.

Each classroom is staffed with a trained teacher and an assistant for overlapping groups of 20-25 children. Regular semester schedules, including summer school, follow those of local public schools.

Children, in specially prepared classrooms, are free to develop at their own rate, and spontaneously learn basic skills in language arts, writing, reading, mathematics, natural science and geography.

Programs including music, movement and graphic arts provide opportunities for creative expression.

Del Amo Christian Preschool, directed by the Long Beach Adventist School on an interdenominational basis, is for children who require preschool care from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The recently opened school serves the Long Beach, Lakewood, Compton, Dominguez and adjoining areas. The facility has a licensed staff, new playground equipment and spacious accommodations.

The facility at 4851 Oregon Ave., is one block east of the Long Beach Freeway at the Del Amo off-ramp.

Registration information can be obtained by phoning the school at 428-5132. Present accommodations are limited to 20 students, but the school plans to expand as enrollment increases.

Long Beach Valley College of Medical-Dental Assistants, 4439 Atlantic Ave., has been deemed eligible to participate in federally insured deferred student loan programs.

New day and evening classes have been scheduled for women seeking careers as medical or dental assistants. The curriculum is supervised by members of medical and dental associations.

The college reports that much class time is of a "practical nature," and that after classroom and laboratory instruction graduates serve internships in physicians' or dentists' offices.

Los Angeles College of Medical & Dental Assistants, at 3633 Long Beach Blvd., offers courses to women of all ages.

Graduates are awarded diplomas following concentrated classroom studies and clinical experience as interns in approved medical or dental offices.

The college reports that a brochure describing medical or dental assistant careers may be obtained by phoning GARFIELD 6-8388.

L.B. Spotlight Award Fete Slated

By LES RODNEY
Staff Writer

Long Beach's annual Spotlight Award dinner, honoring the area's leading churchmen and churchwomen, will be addressed by the man widely regarded as the nation's number one layman — Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, president of the National Council of Churches and leading educator.

Dr. Flemming, who served in the Eisenhower Cabinet as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, is currently president of Macalester College of St. Paul, Minn. after serving in a similar capacity at Ohio Wesleyan and the University of Oregon.

The Jan. 30 event at First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue, this year adds a fourth category — Youth of the Year — to the leading pastor, layman and churchwoman awards.

Mrs. Ray (Wilma) Sites will be installed for her second successive term as president of the Long Beach Area Council of Churches — only the second person so honored in the Council's history. Dr. Jesse L. Boyd, pastor of Grant Chapel A.M.E. Church, and 1969 Council vice president, will be chairman of the evening.

Seating for the dinner is restricted to 400, it was announced, with reservations (at $5 per person) necessary by Jan. 27.

A worship service featuring Dr. Flemming will be held in the Sanctuary at 8 p.m., enabling those unable to attend the dinner to hear the visiting church leader.

Russ Seaman Defects

LAS PALMA, Canary Islands (AP)—A Soviet seaman who left a fishing vessel, identified as Viktor Shibalikin, 28, of Kaliningrad, asked for political asylum, authorities reported Saturday.

Prague 'Torches' Promised

New York Times Service

PRAGUE — The 21-year-old student who set himself afire in a protest for freedom insisted to his doctor Saturday that other students would follow his example.

Jan Palach, in critical condition in a hospital here, said "It was my duty to do it, and there will be others." The letter he left, signed "Torch No. 1," suggested that a group of students had agreed on self-immolation to protest the loss of Czechoslovak freedoms.

The attending physician also reported that the youth's mind was "clear and logical."

The physician, who requested anonymity, said Palach sees himself as "another Hus, as the second Czech in our history to burn for truth." Jan Hus, whose statue stands in the Old Town Square, is the Czech reform preacher who was burned at the stake in the 15th Century as a heretic after pleading his case before the Catholic Church.

"Hus let himself be burned for truth," said the physician, "and Jan thought it was his duty to do the same. Jan said he has no regrets."

At the Old Bethlehem Temple, where Hus preached, a young girl Saturday afternoon chalked a flaming chalice on the wall with the words: "Truth will triumph."

ADM. W. C. CHAMBLISS
MOWW Speaker

Admiral to Talk on Mideast

Rear Adm. William C. Chambliss, USN, (ret.), will speak to the Long Beach Chapter, Military Order of the World Wars, at a dinner meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Allen Center on the Long Beach Naval Station.

Subject of his address will be "Middle East Perspective." He will point up various political, economic and military factors which have contributed to the Israeli-Arab problem and the tensions built up over a long period of time to the explosive situation existing at present.

Adm. Chambliss is a graduate of Columbia Law School and one of his assignments in World War II, was as legal counsel to Adm. Husband Kimmel at the court of inquiry into the attack on Pearl Harbor.

He served on the staff of Adm. William F. Halsey in 1940 and later was navigator of Task Force 18 for the invasion of Guadalcanal. He was aboard the carrier Wasp when it was sunk by enemy action off Guadalcanal. Since retirement from the Navy he has been a corporation consultant and lecturer at UCLA.

A social hour for members and guests will precede the dinner. Lt. Cmdr. Floyd E. Webster, USCGR, chapter commander, will preside.

Island Hotel Chain

Sold for $20 Million

HONOLULU (UPI)—Amfac Inc. announced Saturday it has agreed to buy the Island Holidays Hotel chain in exchange for $20-million worth of Amfac stock.

The agreement was announced by Amfac President Henry A. Walker Jr. and Island Holidays President Lyle L. Guslander. It has been approved by the directors of both firms, but still needs approval of the hotel chain's stockholders.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Johnson Delivers Last Messages

By DON HASTINGS

President Johnson delivered his last messages to Congress last week. He proposed a budget which he expects will provide a surplus of $3.4 billion—if the income tax surcharge is continued for another year.

The President also called for increased Social Security benefits, beginning in 1970, and correspondingly higher taxes to pay for them. He suggested a 1 per cent increase in first-class postal rates and a 3-cent reduction in the airmail rate. Postage for letters of either type would be 7 cents under this plan.

Johnson delivered his State of the Union message in person. He was interrupted dozens of times by the applause of the nation's lawmakers.

ALL BUT ONE OF THE CABINET appointees of President-elect Richard Nixon appeared headed for early Senate approval after being OK'd by Senate committees. The only one facing opposition is Alaska Gov. Walter Hickel, nominated to be secretary of the interior.

A TELEVISION NETWORK EXECUTIVE who was Nixon's campaign TV adviser was appointed director of the U.S. Information Agency by the President-elect. Frank Shakespeare will be in charge of the government's overseas news and broadcasting operations.

TWO RAILROAD STRIKES were headed off by President Johnson last week as he appointed presidential emergency boards to investigate disputes between the nation's railroads and three unions, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen and the Brotherhood of Railway Signalmen. Appointment of the boards automatically prohibits the strikes for 60 days.

THE NATIONWIDE OIL STRIKE dragged on. At week's end, only three settlements had been reached—one with a major company and two with independents.

UNION AND INDUSTRY NEGOTIATORS reached agreement on handling containerized cargo and job guarantees, but East Coast longshoremen still refused to return to work. More than 100 ships were tied up.

EXPLOSIONS AND FIRES SWEEPED the flight deck of the nuclear aircraft carrier USS Enterprise Tuesday, killing 25 crewmen and injuring 85. Cause of the tragedy has not been given by the Navy, but it is known the blasts which started the fires occurred as planes were being loaded with live rockets and bombs. The ship was on a bombing training exercise 75 miles southwest of Hawaii at the time.

A SCANDINAVIAN JETLINER splashed into the sea, 8 miles off Los Angeles International Airport Monday night. Fifteen of the 45 persons aboard perished. The others were plucked from the water by Coast Guard, lifeguard and private vessels. The plane had been delayed 90 minutes by poor weather and the pilot had radioed he was having difficulty with the landing gear, but there was no explanation for the plane setting down in the ocean.

ALTHOUGH HE WAS HOLDING a sawed-off shotgun, the would-be hijacker looked so meek that Delta Airlines Capt. Harold Rowley ignored an order to fly to Cuba and set his jetliner down at Miami as scheduled. The plane, on a flight from Detroit, carried 77 passengers and crewmen. Capt. Rowley radioed the Miami airport of the situation and police met the plane. They arrested Kenneth McPeck, 31, of Orchard Lake, Mich., who surrendered meekly. His three-year-old son, who was with him, was placed in protective custody.

CALIFORNIA STATE COLLEGE campuses continued in turmoil last week with San Jose State taking the brunt of the protests. Demonstrations at San Francisco State became less violent. At California State College at Long Beach, Black Students Union members demonstrated for their demands. Their rallies and marches were mainly noisy.

POSING AS UTILITY REPAIRMEN, two men entered the Whittier home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. McGinnis Tuesday morning, tied up the housekeeper and abducted the McGinnis' 3-year-old daughter, Paula. The child was found that evening, wandering alone, on Imperial Highway in La Mirada. There was no trace of the kidnappers.

THE WAR

The long-stalled peace negotiations resumed Saturday after the deadlock over the shape of the conference table was broken Thursday.

Negotiators for the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Communist National Liberation Front will sit at a round table, as the Reds demanded, to indicate four participants with equal status. But at opposite sides of the table will be tables for aides, satisfying South Vietnam's demands for the appearance of a two-sided conference. U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman indicated everyone saved face by the agreement and expressed the hope the talks could move quickly ahead to the substance of peace, possibly by the time Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge succeeds him.

THE COMBAT TOLL ROSE AGAIN, according to figures released by the U.S. Command in Saigon. One hundred and fifty-one Americans were killed during the week ended Jan. 11. The week's casualties also included 1,398 wounded. Allied forces reported killing 2,102 North Vietnam regulars and Viet Cong guerrillas.

COMMUNIST "SAPPER" UNITS burst through defenses at Can Tho air base in Mekong Delta Monday and hurled satchel charges into 18 American helicopters before being driven off. Eight Americans were killed and 15 wounded in the engagement. Five Communist bodies were found after the minutes-long raid in which three choppers were destroyed and 15 damaged.

VIET CONG RAIDERS KIDNAPED 40 South Vietnamese from a refugee camp near Quang Ngai City. It was the second mass kidnap by Red guerrillas this month.

Vikings' Downpour Routs El Camino

By DAVE DANIEL

El Camino College was left high and dry despite Saturday night's downpour as Long Beach City College floated to an 81-59 Metropolitan Conference basketball victory.

The Vikings, with their patented balanced scoring attack and heads-up defense working at its best, completely stymied the Warriors in taking their 16th win of the year against only four setbacks.

Kirby Gordon scored the first 11 points for the Vikings, including the first four baskets on smooth assists from Sammy Washington, and that alone broke El Camino's spirit with only five minutes gone.

For the night, Washington was at his peak with 17 points and 11 assists, his personal high for the year and tying him with S.L. Neal's team high for the season.

Gordon scored 15 points, all in the first half, and pulled down 10 rebounds. Co-captain, Jon Borchert had identical statistics with 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Chuck Terry, playing his usual consistent game from the corner, put in 13 points as coach Rex Hughes substituted freely. Hughes got another fine night's work from reserve guard Jim Ferguson, who scored but 2 points, but played outstanding defense and contributed five assists.

The Vikings pulled out to an early lead on the hot shooting of Gordon and when the half was over held a 40-28 lead by hitting on 17 of 32 field shots.

The pace kept up in the second half and the Vikings finished with a good 36 of 69 shots from the field. El Camino couldn't put the ball in with any consistency, and connected on only 22 of 81 field goal attempts, 11 in each half.

The game was a fast-paced affair with only 11 fouls called on El Camino during the game, three in the second half.

Chuck Fernandez of El Camino was the high scorer of the game with 18 points, but hit only seven of 21 shots from the field from his guard position.

Danny Daniel added 17 for the Warriors before leaving the game with a rib injury in the second half as Edgar Cheltenham, usually the big scorer, was off with only a 2-of-15 performance and five points.

The Vikings take nearly a two-week layoff for final exams and do not return to the Metro scene until Jan. 31 when they travel to Santa Monica City College to resume first-round play.

FOOTBALL'S FINAL GASP West 4-Point Pick in Pro Bowl

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Football's final gasp of the long, long season comes today, and none too soon.

The 19th Pro Bowl goes on in the Coliseum, featuring the East and West squads—35 selected stars from the Western and Eastern conferences of the National Football League.

The struggle figures to attract 60,000 live humans for the 1 o'clock kickoff if the weather improves. The game will be televised nationally over CBS, with Southern California screened out.

It's been suggested today's winner play the AFL All-Star champ, with the victor then meeting the kingpins of hockey next Easter. The winner of that contest would play the NBA champions.

The publicized heroes are the quarterbacks, Don Meredith and Fran Tarkenton for the East, Earl Morrall and Roman Gabriel for the West.

But listen for the ovation George Allen receives when he's introduced. It will be the first time in Pro Bowl's colorful history that a coach gets more cheers than his all-star players.

Only the bravest would dare predict the winner today. Events in Miami a week ago sent hundreds of experts underground.

They haven't surfaced yet. Remember the Super Bowl?

However, Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder has cast the West as 4-point favorites. They've prevailed in

LARSON'S LINE

11 games, the East in seven.

There will be a sudden-death playoff in the event of a tie.

Although a knee injury prevents Gale Sayers' appearance, the star talent is indeed deep. The starter include Morrall, John Mackey, Tom Matte, Ken Willard and Clifton McNeil on offense. According to Joe Namath, Morrall can't carry the helmets of four AFL quarterbacks, including his. The Colt signal-caller yearns for a big afternoon.

For the defense, Deacon Jones, Merlin Olsen, Dick Butkus, Tommy Nobis and Mike Curtis will lead the West's cause.

The place kickers, who might decide it all, are Sam Baker, a four-time

'L.B. STRONGER THAN EVANSVILLE' 49ers Pummel Pumas by 20

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Cal State Long Beach got what it needed Saturday night, an impressive victory over St. Joseph's of Indiana.

"You can bet I'll speak highly of Long Beach," St. Joseph's coach Jim Holstein promised after watching the 49ers dispatch his Pumas, 88-68.

"I was really impressed with Long Beach," Holstein added. "They are one of the three best clubs we have faced this year."

The 49ers also impressed a noisy crowd of 2,189 that turned the Cal State gym into an echo chamber while cheering the home team to its 16th victory in 17 games this season.

"The only clubs we have played that compare to Long Beach," Holstein recalled, "are DePaul of Chicago and Evansville."

"I know you want a comparison between Long Beach and Evansville and off of the games this year, I'd have to say Long Beach is better."

"But," Holstein quickly added, "I have to qualify that. We lost to Evansville, 74-72 in our gym. We lost to Long Beach in their gym; it makes some difference."

"Still, I don't think I've ever seen a club that shoots as well and rebounds as well as Long Beach."

The 49ers did have a great night shooting. They zipped away to a 43-32 halftime lead by making 19 of 33 floor shots (58 per cent), including nine baskets from at least 18 feet.

The Pumas were deadlocked with the 49ers, 10-10, when Holstein got his first look at Cal State's long-range shooting.

Sam Robinson gave Cal State a three-point advantage on a three-point play and then Sleepy Montgomery canned a 20-footer, Sam matched that and Ray Gritton hit from 26 feet.

After a fast break bucket by Dick Nelson, Shawn Johnson dropped in one from 19 feet and the 49ers had outscored their visitors, 13-2.

"I thought we had a chance at halftime," Holstein declared. "We were down only 11 and I was sure Long Beach couldn't keep shooting that well."

"I was wrong, this is the best long-range shooting team I have ever seen."

For the first five minutes of the second half, Holstein was right. The 49ers couldn't keep up their torrid pace.

During a cold spell that saw only three Cal State field goals, St. Joseph's cut the 49ers' lead to five, 51-46.

Then the 49ers cut loose again. They outscored St. Joseph's, 17-6 to take a 68-52 lead into the final eight minutes of the game. Johnson keyed that explosion with six points, including a pair of 22-footers.

For the night, the 49ers hit 38 of 75 floor shots (51 per cent) and collected 56 rebounds.

Robinson tied St. Joseph's Fran Pohlgeers for high honors with 20 points. Johnson and Gritton added 16 apiece for the 49ers and Ted Hillary, the Pumas' leading scorer, finished with 15.

Houston Falls to Second Half Bruin Barrage

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

If revenge is what UCLA had in mind, it obtained ample retribution Saturday night.

The Bruins buried Houston, 100-64, for their 28th consecutive victory before a record Pauley Pavilion crowd of 12,896 and millions of television viewers on a 175-station network.

Surely the 71-69 disaster in the Astrodome a year ago can now be forgotten.

Saturday night's win was achieved with Lew Alcindor playing only 17 minutes and 14 seconds. Alcindor, who was handicapped by an eye injury in UCLA's lone loss in 75 games last year in Houston, picked up three early fouls and also was used sparingly because of his flu-weakened condition.

Alcindor made only eight points, the lowest of his career, but Curtis Rowe, John Vallely and Bill Sweek provided ample punch for the Bruins, who blew the game open with a wicked flurry at the start of the second half.

Leading by only 36-30 at halftime, the Bruins spurred to a 15-point margin in the first five minutes of the second half, then assured the victory with another 10-point spurge in less than two minutes.

Bruin coach John Wooden went to reserves for the remainder of the game.

Sweek, who played poorly in the first half, provided the punch for the early explosion after the intermission, scoring seven of the first 11 points.

The record crowd got an additional kick when Sidney Wicks sank two free throws with five seconds remaining to reach the 100 level. It was UCLA's first 100-point game of the season.

Houston warmed up as though it expected a quick execution. But looks were deceiving.

The muscular Cougars were relaxed and waiting. Using their board power, they stayed right with the Bruins in the early minutes when the capacity crowd chanted for a fast kill.

Most startling of all, they took an 8-4 lead on baskets by Theodis Lee and George Reynolds.

Alcindor had gone to the bench with his third foul before the Bruins finally pulled in front, where they remained for the rest of the half.

Their biggest lead was achieved in the final minute of the first half when Steve Patterson's second tip-in within 90 seconds gave them a 36-28 margin.

It was 36-30 for UCLA at halftime.

John Vallely's outside shooting and Curtis Rowe's strong inside work gave the Bruins their working margin.

Lack of Sugar Caused Collapse of Ranger Coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Geoffrion, coach of the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, will be released from an Oakland hospital today and flown home to recuperate following his collapse after his 3-1 victory over the Seals Friday night.

During Geoffrion's absence, Emile Francis, the club's general manager who also coached the club last year, will direct the play.

After a thorough examination by doctors in Oakland early Saturday, it was reported that Geoffrion had collapsed because of a lack of sugar in his blood stream. He recently recovered from the flu and last May had half his stomach removed because of ulcers.

RICH ROBERTS

Football's
No. 1 Agitator

"It just comes naturally, like a reaction. Somethin' happens and the words just flow out. When they start to talk back to me, that's when I can tell I'm really gettin' close to 'em."—Johnny Sample.

With all of its hotshot commentators assembled for the Super Bowl, NBC didn't even have the one that counted wired for sound.

Super Mouth, alias cornerback Johnny Sample of the Jets, is the only man to offer a running account of a game while playing it. Of course, his account is geared to a limited audience, in this instance the Baltimore Colts.

"Well, like (Tom) Matte," Sample says, "I told him a couple of times, 'You couldn't even make our ball club . . . they talk about how you can do everything . . . can you do anything well?'"

"He really got mad. He lost his head a couple of times and fought at me. I could tell it was botherin' him."

Matte's version is that Sample was doing more than just talking; he also has a repertoire of annoying little antics he uses between the whistle and the next play . . . like stepping on your hand as he untangles from a pile, or tapping you on the head with a pass that was intended for you. A couple of times he had the audacity to pull this in front of the Colts' bench, managing to beat his retreat just as the lynch mob approached.

THE POINT IS that Sample, football's most effective agitator, got to the Colts, a team of cool, seasoned pros that nobody thought could be rattled.

"Unitas, Lyles, Shinnick . . . they were Colts when I was there," says Sample, who played for Baltimore's NFL championship clubs in 1958 and '59. "They know how I play and they knew exactly what I was gonna do. I know all week they told these guys I was really gonna needle 'em — 'Don't let it bother you,' they said. But comes the game and it bothers 'em."

The scam on Sample, 31, was that "his legs are gone but he talks a pretty good game." He resents that.

"I've been playing football 11 years, and I've PLAYED 11 years," he declares. "I've been a starter for every team I've played for. You have to have some ability to do that. I'm proud of my career."

Sample also is immensely proud of his role as the Jets' defensive captain, especially because his teammates elected him.

"A lot of teams just appoint captains," he points out, "but when you're voted the captain you know the team is behind you" . . . which must be a comforting thought when Sample's psychological warfare takes effect.

JOHNNY DOES ADMIT, though, that he started talking to opponents to overcome defensive deficiencies while playing at Maryland State College.

"When I was a sophomore in college you had to play both ways," he says. "I was doin' okay offensively but defensively they were really chewin' me up. So the coach told me he was gonna get me out of there if I didn't start makin' some tackles or somethin'."

"So he said, 'If you try to talk to the people you're supposed to be coverin', maybe they'll start thinkin' about you instead of what they're supposed to do. I've been doin' it ever since, and it's been workin' for 11 years."

Sample's nonstop needling seldom falls on deaf ears, but he has met his match.

"The person that it least bothers is Lance Alworth," Johnny frowns in reference to the Chargers' all-pro flanker. "It doesn't seem to bother him one bit. Sometimes I don't think he hears me. My words bounce off his helmet like drops of rain."

"When I can't bother him, it bothers me. But Lance is a good ballplayer. He has the perfect approach to play against me. He pays no attention to nothin' I say."

Sample lists among his more attentive audience Gary Collins of the Browns and Tommy McDonald, when he played with the Eagles. "Those two guys it bothered more than anyone else," John says with satisfaction.

SAMPLE, QUITE a celebrity since the Super Bowl with appearances on the Johnny Carson and Joey Bishop shows, is really a pleasant fellow to meet in conversation. Off the field, there isn't the slightest compulsion to bust him in the teeth. Around home, especially, he is a turned-off talker.

"She does it all," he says of his lovely wife. "I can't say very much there. I try to leave football behind when I come home, anyway."

At his age, Sample has been urged by friends to quit before he finds himself in a situation he can't talk himself out of.

"I talked to Jim Brown before the Super Bowl," he says, "and he told me, 'If you win the ball game, you should quit while you're on top, like I did.'"

"But I know I'm gonna come back and play in the College All-Star game. That's a big thrill. This will be my fourth one—once for the All Stars and twice against 'em. And then we have an exhibition game against the New York Giants in the Yale Bowl, and I wanta play in that. So I know I'm gonna play at least one more year."

Against the collegians next August in Chicago, Sample will be working on Ron Sellers, the all-America flanker from Florida State.

"The guy that plays against me is going to have a lot of things going through his mind," Sample says, relishing the prospect. "A rookie, a kid that's just comin' out of college . . . I know when I played in that game I was scared to death."

"But if we happen to be lucky enough to get the game under control right away . . . you know, I wouldn't want to do anything to hurt a young guy's career."

AFL HAS THE FOOTBALL, BUT THERE'LL BE . . .

Super Benefits for Both Leagues

By FRANK ECK

NEW YORK (AP) —

There was a time when people in the National Football League told owners of teams in the fledgling American Football League to go get a football before they started talking about playing with the big boys. That's all changed now.

The AFL stock has risen to its giddy heights all because of the New York Jets, a team that couldn't give away tickets when they were known as the Titans and played in the old Polo Grounds.

When the Jets crushed the supposedly unbeatable Baltimore Colts in last Sunday's Super Bowl game it was David slaying Goliath all over again.

The Colts had won 15 of 16 games and in five of them their opposition didn't know what the goal line looked like. Their only setback came at the hands of the Cleveland Browns, a team they later shellacked. People were saying the Colts were better than the Green Bay Packers when they were humiliating AFL teams in the first two Super Bowl games.

The Jets, on the other hand, had trouble holding a lead in a number of their games. They just eked through in their AFL title game with the Oakland Raiders. And before that the Jets were beaten by the Buffalo Bills, the team with the poorest record in all of pro football. It was the only game Buffalo won all season.

The Jets' stunning upset of the Colts, favored by as many as 20 points and as high as 10-1 in straight bets, is pictured as a big shot in the arm for pro football. Both leagues figure to benefit although you can't tell that to anyone in the NFL.

Here are some of the things to look for in the near future: 1. A television contract that could bring pro and college football as much as $200 million yearly.

2. A desire by the NFL to play as many AFL teams as possible when the two leagues complete their merger in 1970.

3. The drafting of more college defense stars than usual when the two pro leagues make their selections in New York, Jan. 28-29.

4. Heisman Award winner O. J. Simpson of Southern California changing his thinking about the AFL and signing with the Buffalo Bills.

Television last year went for more than $100 million for football but only about 60 per cent was sold to sponsors. It appears that the game now will attract more firms willing to pay $60,000 a minute or more to advertise their products.

One game is hardly any evidence that the AFL is stronger than the NFL. However, the Jets were almost perfect on defense against the Colts and the average fan believes that when the pros draft 442 collegians, more than half of them will be big defensive linemen, fleet linebackers and agile safeties.

"Pro coaches always draft a lot of defensive players," Jet coach Weeb Ewbank said. "Any good pro coach knows that defense is the backbone of a team."

Now that the AFL is riding high it could be that Simpson, regarded by many coaches as the finest running back they ever have seen, will change his mind and sign with Buffalo.

Simpson has said he preferred to play his pro football in the National League, possibly with the Rams or San Francisco 49ers because it was the more established league.

However, under the 1966 NFL-AFL merger agreement which cost the AFL $18 million, Simpson must sign with the team that drafts him. Buffalo gets first pick in the draft and with their record the Bills can hardly make anybody but O. J. No. 1. And Buffalo can't deal him to the NFL, not until the pro football merger is completed for the 1970 season.

So it begins to look as if the AFL has more than the Super Bowl trophy. They have the football, they have Joe Namath and first crack at Orange Juice Simpson.

SUPER BOWL COACHES REAP MORE HONORS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Super Bowl coaches Weeb Ewbank of the New York Jets and Don Shula of the Baltimore Colts Saturday were selected American and National Football League coaches of the year, respectively, by the Professional Football Writers of America.

Ewbank, who guided the Jets to their first AFL championship and then on to a stunning 16-7 upset over the Colts in the Super Bowl, and Shula both received about 80 per cent of the votes cast by the writers according to secretary-treasurer Bill Guthrie.

Ewbank will be presented with his award at half-time of the Jets exhibition game against the College All-Stars at Chicago in August while Shula will be honored during one of the Colts' home games next season.

Last year's winners were Vince Lombardi of the Green Bay Packers in the NFL and Johnny Rauch of the Oakland Raiders in the AFL.

WEEB EWANK

Namath's Prestige on Line Again in AFL Joust Today

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Namath and 10 more of the world champion New York Jets are faced with a renewed demand today to prove that the East is better than the West in the American Football League All-Star game.

No matter that the Jets upset the Baltimore Colts in the Super Bowl, and put the AFL in first class status for the first time, they still have to convince the boys from Oakland, Kansas City, San Diego, Denver and Cincinnati that the East is best in their own league.

Coach Hank Stram of Kansas City has taken this All-Star game as seriously as if it were the Super Bowl. He prepared an elaborate playbook and worked his 33 players twice a day through Wednesday to be sure they learned it.

"This is a prestige game with prestige people at every position," Stram said. "They have a great deal of decisional pride and will play with a strong purpose."

On the coaching seat for the East, Wally Lemm of the Houston Oilers practiced only once a day, and the New York players didn't join the squad until Wednesday.

That was enough, the coach said, since they had a playing edge from last Sunday's Super Bowl, and the stars of the pros have the pride and ability to do their best.

Lemm thinks his quarterbacks are the best in football. He won't get much argument about Namath. Bob Griese of the Miami Dolphins, with only two years of pro experience, the coach says, is not far behind.

On the West, Stram is filled with praise for Namath's ability but doesn't concede East superiority over his pair John Hadl of San Diego and Len Dawson of Kansas City.

Hadl and Namath have familiar receivers and, along with a special rule preventing linebackers or safety men from blitzing the quarterback, passing is expected to dominate.

Namath will start but concurred with Lemm in saying "how long I remain in the game depends on my right knee."

Rich Only Get Richer; Colts Hold Most Rights in Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Baltimore Colts will make the most selections, the New York Jets will be the first American Football League team to pick last and the Rams will make a record three first-round choices at the third combined pro football draft.

The Colts by virtue of trades, hold 22 draft picks for the 17-round selection meeting to be held in New York, Jan. 28-29, according to an announcement by pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The Jets, first AFL team to win the Super Bowl, automatically become the first AFL team to pick last in the draft. In the draft setup, the Super Bowl champions select last regardless of their regular season record; the Super Bowl losers next to last.

The Rams have acquired two first-round choices besides their own, getting Washington's No. 1 in a trade for quarterback Gary Beban and Detroit's No. 1 in a trade for quarterback Bill Munson.

Only two other teams will have more than one No. 1 selection.

The San Diego Chargers acquired Denver's in a trade for quarterback Steve Tensi and the San Francisco 49ers acquired New Orleans' in return for receiver Dave Parks, who played out his option and signed with the Saints.

The Saints, however, still will make a first-round selection. They acquired Minnesota's in a trade for quarterback Gary Cuozzo.

The AFL's Buffalo Bills will make the first of 442 selections in the draft, and are certain to tap O. J. Simpson, the USC running back and Heisman Trophy winner.

The order of the first round after that is as follows:

2, Atlanta, 3, Philadelphia, 4, Pittsburgh, 5, Cincinnati, 6, Boston, 7, San Francisco, on choice acquired from New Orleans, 8, Rams on choice acquired from Detroit, 9, San Diego, on choice acquired from Denver, 10, Rams, on choice acquired from Washington, 11, Miami, 12, Green Bay, 13, Chicago, 14, New York Giants, 15, Houston, 16, San Francisco, 17, New Orleans, on choice acquired from Minnesota, 18, San Diego, 19, St. Louis, 20, Cleveland, 21, Rams, 22, Oakland, 23, Kansas City, 24, Dallas, 25, Baltimore, 26, New York Jets.

JET FULLBACK GOES FROM GRID TO RING

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (UPI) — Burley Matt Snell, the fullback for the Super Bowl champion New York Jets, went from football to boxing Saturday when he sparred one round with Buster Mathis.

Snell, with two years of ring experience as a Golden Gloves some 12 years ago, handled himself well during his three-minute session with Mathis, who is training for a Feb. 3 bout against George Chuvalo of Canada. Following the workout, however, Snell said he would stick to football.

Los Angeles to Honor Allen

The city of Los Angeles will honor Rams coach George Allen today as he leads the West team in Pro Bowl at the Coliseum.

Mayor Sam Yorty proclaimed today as "George Allen Day" in Los Angeles. He presented Allen with a proclamation praising him and the "Dedication of the Ram football team to their coach and his ideals."

WEST FAVORED--

Pro Bowler, and Bruce Gossett, who accepted his second invitation.

Nine Rams are aboard with five scheduled to open for the West in which starters is merely a term and not a classification of talent.

Since blitzing by linebacking is not permitted, nor may defensive linemen loop on the pass rush, Allen foresees a high-scoring affair.

"I think the Pro Bowl is an offensive type of game," said Allen. "You know the fans love to see points scored."

Tarkenton, who probably will direct the East attack the second half, is looking forward to the game as a chance to redeem himself. Last year Tarkenton felt he was the goat because of his fumble and an interception of one of his passes that led to the 38-20 West victory.

For nearly three weeks now, this part of the country has been void of football, but that all ends today.

SPORTS NIGHT THURSDAY

Rams, Dodgers Join Banquet

A host of new guests have joined the list of persons who will be in attendance at the Long Beach Century Club's 13th Sports Award banquet Thursday night at the Lafayette Hotel.

The list includes Dodger pitcher Don Sutton, Dodger coach Jim Gilliam, USC's defensive backfield star Mike Battle, Ram assistant coaches Howard Schnellenberger and Ray Prochaska, former Alabama all-America quarterback Dixie Howell, Paul Schwegler, former U. of Washington all-America and retiring president of the National Football Hall of Fame, and ex-USC quarterback Jim Callahan, member of the Hall of Fame.

The above will join John McKay, Tommy Prothro, John Ralston, Ray Willsey, Eddie Meador, Jack Snow, Johnny Morris, Bob Lemon, Ben Agajanian, Morley Drury, and Greta Andersen as head table guests who will be on hand to honor Long Beach's athlete-of-the-year, Gene Washington, Stanford's all-Coast flanker and Pacific-8 pass receiving record-holder.

Five teams—the Long Beach Nitehawks, Pacific Coast Club's national indoor track champions, Cal State Long Beach's NCAA swimming champs, City College's state baseball titlists, and Lakewood High's CIF gymnastic kingpins—will be honored, as will be Long Beach athletes who have distinguished themselves in the past year.

NAPA — You've undoubtedly seen the fellow in the TV commercial who can't get the name of a wine right. He keeps calling it Sanapanoma.

Well, we're right in the middle of the country where the wine is made.

The Kaiser International Golf Tournament is being played just a half-dozen miles from the center of one of the world's greatest grape-growing and wine making centers.

Napa County is the No. 1 producer of wine in this country, turning some 40,000 tons of grapes into nearly eight million gallons of table wines and champagne, enough to float a most "happy" fleet of ships.

Kaiser's sponsorship of a PGA tournament was motivated by the desire to raise funds for much needed boys' clubs in the east and north bay areas; and Silverado Country Club, with its two championship courses, was a natural setting for the links event.

International headquarters for the Kaiser empire is located in Oakland just a few minutes from Napa. There, they keep track of the far-flung operations of the giant industrial complex which includes aluminum, chemicals, steel, engineering for large projects such as dams, etc., production of jeeps, shipbuilding, a network of UHF television stations, hotels, and the non-profit Kaiser Foundation hospitals, the first and largest private pre-paid health plan in the world.

You name it, Kaiser's got it. That is, everything but grapes and wine. But, as one executive remarked after looking over the latest wine-production figures, "Maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea to get a little piece of that action."

"DESIRE UNDER THE OAKS" is the way one Kaiser man describes the tournament as the world's greatest golfers vie for $135,000 in prize money on the wooded Silverado layout with its many oak trees which are more than a hundred years old. They help make it a picturesque setting.

We have done research on early California history as a hobby and hit the jackpot here. The site was one of the social centers of northern California during the state's formative years from 1850 through 1880.

U.S. presidents and military leaders were among those whose names can be found in the history of this beautiful piece of land which is now part of a $100 million project which will include a 10-story hotel, condominiums and 900 estate homes.

Napa was one of the original counties formed in 1850 when California became a state. Named after the Nappa Indian tribe, the city itself was laid out in 1848 on property purchased from the holders of the original Mexican land grant.

The gold and silver rush of the 1850's enabled Napa to prosper. The most noted mine in the area was the Silverado silver mine on nearby Mt. Helena which was described by the immortal Robert Louis Stevenson in "The Silverado Squatters."

THE CIVIL WAR AND THE PRE-STATEHOOD ERA of California history brought much activity to Napa and the land known as Silverado, which originally was a part of the Mexican ranch, "Yajome."

General Mariano Vallejo, for whom the nearby city of Vallejo was named, gave the Silverado property to his daughter when she married U.S. General John C. Frisbie.

After the Civil War, some 1,080 acres of the land was purchased by another military man, General John T. Miller. This is the Silverado of today.

Miller, who selected the property for its beauty and climate, was assisted in its purchase by then Vice President Andrew Johnson, a close friend. Johnson later became President.

Among the grantors of the deed in the transaction was President Ulysses S. Grant.

Miller planted vineyards and prune trees on part of the land and devoted the remainder of the territory to dairying.

Miller, incidentally, was the youngster general in the Union Army during the Civil War and he named the property Laverne after a battle in which he lost the sight of one eye. During the same battle, a bullet penetrated his skull and he carried it for the rest of his life.

AN ADOBE STRUCTURE STOOD ON THE SITE where Miller and his wife planned their 14-room mansion. The general adhered to the legend that anyone who caused adobe to fall would be struck by ill fortune. Thus, he built the house around the adobe and the three-foot thick adobe walls are still part of the beautiful colonial clubhouse at Silverado.

One of Miller's children, Eudora, married Admiral Richardson Clover and they reportedly entertained lavishly in Washington, D.C., as well as the Napa home.

The Miller home was a showplace in those days and guests included President Theodore Roosevelt and General John J. Pershing of World War I fame.

Mrs. Vest Peak Maxwell purchased the home and property from Miller's granddaughter in 1932. Many Hollywood personalities were frequent guests in the 1930's and 1940's, including the late Clark Gable and his wife, Carole Lombard.

She sold the property in 1953 for golf course development.

Bakersfield Bowler Wins Rich Tourney

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Don Glover, Bakersfield, won the $6,000 first prize in the Valley of the Sun Professional Bowlers Ass. Tournament Saturday.

Glover, 22, the top qualifier, defeated Don McCune, Munster, Ind., 230 to 219 in the championship game. Glover started with four strikes, spared the fifth and sixth, struck on the next three and left the final frame open with a 3-8 split.

The five finalists in the nationally televised tourney finished exactly as they qualified with Jimmy Mack, Dover, N.J., fifth, Dick Ritger, Hartford, Wis., fourth and Ralph Engan, Monsey, N.Y., third.

All of the final games were close with the exception of the Engan-McCune match for second place. Ritger had the high game when he defeated Mack 253 to 246. Engan edged Ritger 232 to 227 and McCune beat Engan 207 to 172. McCune won $3,500, Engan $2,000, Ritger $1,800 and Mack $1,600.

This was Glover's third tournament win. He is in his fourth year on the PBA tour.

GANGLING MEL BACK IN LAKERS' LINEUP

Mel Counts will return to the Laker starting lineup tonight against the Cincinnati Royals at the Forum. He scored 20 points in 23 minutes Friday before being ejected.

"I don't care if I start or not, just so I play 30 minutes or so," said Counts, who has never started unless Elgin Baylor was injured. The gangling 7-footer replaced Tommy Hawkins in Friday's game.

Laker skipper Bill van Breda Kolff says Counts gives his club more firepower but makes it harder to match up defensively. Neither Counts nor Baylor are capable of defending an opposing forward with much speed.

The Lakers have won 18 of 22 at the Forum, including two in a row over Cincinnati. The Royals played without Jerry Lucas the first time and lost Oscar Robertson on fouls with 21½ minutes remaining Friday.

Tipoff is at 7 o'clock.

Masters Goof Still Haunts Pair

NAPA (AP) — The great Masters goof last April continues to haunt Bob Goalby and Tommy Aaron. They were paired for the first round of the $135,000 Kaiser International Golf Tournament here.

"I don't mind discussing the Masters," said Goalby. He said he is asked on almost every sloop on the tour.

"I won but sometimes I have to wonder," he said. "Robert deVincenzo didn't sign his card properly and after all the publicity, you'd think I lost."

Goalby's final round was complete and deVincenzo tied him, setting up a playoff. Aaron, keeping deVincenzo's scoreboard, marked in a 4 instead of a 3.

"I was thinking par 4 and wrote it in," said Aaron. "It was incorrect; certainly, and I am sorry. However, mistakes like that happen often on the tour. It is up to the player to check it carefully."

Goalby agreed that deVincenzo gained more notoriety and endorsement benefits than the winner.

"I talked it over with manufacturer-sponsor and we decided the unusual circumstances prevented us from making a big thing out of the victory," said Goalby.

RAIN FORCES POSTPONEMENT BUT ...Palmer Not 'Washed Up'

By DAVE LEWIS
Staff Writer

NAPA — Weather forecasts for the weekend called for cloudy skies but no rain.

The cloudy skies turned out to be overflowing with moisture.

It started to pour just before the first threesome teed off in the Kaiser International Golf Tournament Saturday morning and by the time the final threesome of Miller Barber, Arnold Palmer and Bob Lunn left the tee at noon, the situation was grim.

Finally at 12:15 p.m. the word was flashed that play had been cancelled because of the rain.

The barometer still was falling Saturday afternoon, indicating that rain would continue intermittently through today. If so, the final two rounds would be pushed back to Monday and Tuesday.

Tuesday is the last day they could get in a round because of the next scheduled tournament at Pebble Beach starting on Thursday.

If the weather forces the tournament to be shortened, the golfers will be playing for reduced purse. If it goes only the 36 holes already finished, the prize money of $135,000 would be cut in half to $67,500. If they are able to get in three rounds, the purse would be 75 per cent of the total, $101,250.

When play was suspended only one golfer was making any kind of a run. He was Terry Dill, the lanky Texan who was one of the first to tee off. He played the front nine in 33, three under par. This put him six under par and moved him into a tie for fourth, just three strokes off the pace. But when rain cancelled the round, his scored reverted to 141 for 36 holes.

Barber retains the lead after 36 holes with a 135, nine under par. Bruce Devlin is second at 136, Arnold Palmer third at 137, and Bob Lunn and Chuck Cody tied for fourth at 138.

Barber, Palmer and Lunn played only one hole, all getting pars. Even though Barber and Devlin are ahead of him at the halfway point, all eyes here are on Palmer, who is in a position to make one of his great charges if the weather clears.

A Bay Area reporter threw a curve at Palmer when he bluntly asked Arnie if he felt he was "washed up" in topflight golf.

Arnie was at a loss for words for a moment but after the initial shock, it struck him funny and he laughed.

"No, I'm not starting to phase out of championship golf," he said. "I'm not going to do as much traveling on non-golf matters this year to concentrate a little more on my golf, and I probably will play in about 20 tournaments. No more than that. And I will play in only one foreign event."

Palmer said 1968 was one of his poorest on the tour in recent seasons, but only because it wasn't anywhere near what I would have liked.

Brown's 67 Snares
Virginia Sweeps

Roy Brown shot 76-9-67 to win Class A low net honors in Virginia Country Club's Saturday Sweepstakes. Alvin Anderson's 95-24-71 won Class B competition.

Class A low net—Roy Brown 76-9-67. Bill Cook 81-13-69. Blind bogey (14) — Ralph Murray, Tom McCarthy, Earl Groves, Fred Yeager, Clark Hespania.

Class B low net — Alvin Anderson 95-24-71. He bet. Adrian Marshall 8-16-72 and C.E. Van De Water 87-15-72. Blind bogey (16) — Lauren Conley, Guy Klime, James Williamson.

"I can't say it was bad because only six men finished ahead of me in the money standings and I won two tournaments (Palm Springs and Kemper Open) and finished second three times.

"That doesn't sound like a poor year. But my performances in the major championships were not good and the U.S. Open, PGA and Masters are the ones in which all pro golfers are most interested.

"My only good tournament among those three was the PGA, in which I finished second. But I was next to last in the Open and missed the cut in the Masters."

Palmer went on to say, "Nothing is wrong with my swing as some people have said. In fact, I'd say it was a little improved in 1968. The worst thing about my game last year was putting. And my short game was atrocious at times. That's what I'm working on right now."

"My putting in the Los Angeles Open last week was very bad, but it started to come around in Friday's round here and I'm hopeful that things will be better."

day's round here and I'm hopeful that things will be better."

Palmer got off to a slow start last winter, yet won the fourth tournament of the year—the Bob Hope Desert Classic in Palm Springs. And he admits that "overall, my game is a little ahead of what it was at this time a year ago."

That's why everyone is keeping an eye on Arnie.

The Pacers' Steve Chubbin had put Indiana in front 128-126 with eight seconds to go on a driving layup.

Boach Bobby Leonard was yelling for his team to intentionally foul Miller as he crossed the 10 second line, but the team didn't respond.

George Stone led the Stars with 30 points while Miller had 26 and Jim Jarvis 25. Mel Daniels had 33 for Indiana, followed by Freddie Lewis with 25.

Warren Armstrong scored 38 points as the Oakland Oaks tied the ABA record of 15 consecutive wins, 111-108 over Minnesota.

Argos Still Perfect, Win 17th in Row

It is not a question of who will win the Garden Grove League, it is by how much the Garden Grove High Argonauts will rout their opposition.

This was plainly evident Friday night in the league opener as the Argos easily won their 17th game without a loss, 72-45, over La Quinta.

The score was 24-6 at-

Saxons Remain in Lead

North Torrance, Hawthorne and Redondo surged to the forefront in the hot race for the Bay League lead Friday night.

The defending champion Saxons made their record 4-0 with a 72-59 win over Mira Costa, while Hawthorne and Redondo triumphed to extend their records to 3-1.

Hawthorne's win over Santa Monica wasn't easy, 69-54, while Redondo breezed past Inglewood, 61-40.

Mira Costa held North's front line in check, but guards Harlan Peet and Bill Thomas took charge and the Saxons led by as much as 18 points in the second half.

Paul Crowell and Tom Engel combined for 42 points in Hawthorne's win, while Tom Box scored 20 for Redondo, which broke away in the second half.

South Torrance nipped rival West, 76-72, to run its record to 2-2. Brent Barron led the victory with 20 points. Bill Kolodziejczak had 24 and Tom Smalley 22 for the losing Warriors.

The teams met at Sunny Hills this weekend and the Lancers are expected to show why they are rated No. 3 in the CIF. Four players hit in double figures Friday, led by Brad McNamara (20) and Don Paul (19) as they won their 13th game in 14 outings.

Magnolia High, ranked high in the CIF, won its 13th game of the season and opened the Irvine League successfully with a 49-37 win over Fountain Valley Friday night. Jan Adamson led the Sentinels with 15 points.

BOYD HITS 29; SHERWIN HOT FOR KATELLA

Foothill of the Crestview League and Katella of the Orange League boosted their records to 4-0 Friday night, thanks to the sensational shooting of two players.

Center Bill Boyd, son of the USC basketball coach, netted 29 points to lead Foothill to a 65-57 victory over Villa Park.

Guard Bob Sherwin was the hero for Katella, scoring 23 points in an 86-83 win over El Dorado. His running mate, Rick Abernethy, netted 20 points.

Lancers, Troy Tied

Sunny Hills, a heavy favorite to win the Freeway League, can't seem to shake Troy as both clubs won their fourth game without a loss Friday night.

The difference was the way in which they won. The Lancers, as expected, routed Lowell, 78-47, while Troy, also as expected, barely squeaked by Savanna, 66-65.

The teams met at Sunny Hills this weekend and the Lancers are expected to show why they are rated No. 3 in the CIF. Four players hit in double figures Friday, led by Brad McNamara (20) and Don Paul (19) as they won their 13th game in 14 outings.

Both teams enter the game following big wins. Aviation, No. 5 ranked in CIF, walloped Lennox 93-49 behind a 28-point effort by forward Garrick Barr. Jim Tough poured in 23 points to pace Beverly Hills to a 92-51 win over Miraleste.

Morningside took over undisputed first place in the Sky League with an 80-67 win over Palos Verdes.

The Monarchs led by only five at halftime, but Bill Boyes and Bill Ingram collected 43 points to pace the win.

Laker coach Bill van Breda Kolf's son, Jan, led the Sea Kings in scoring with 18.

Brethren Romps

Four players scored in double figures Friday night as Brethren posted a 77-22 win over Western Christian in an Academy League opener for both schools.

Pressure on as Compton's Streak at 47

Compton High made it 47 wins in a row in its fantastic streak Friday night, but for the first time in two years the Tarbabs showed the strain of seeking to break a long-standing record.

Compton teams of 1950-51-52 won 53 in a row, and that's the target set by coach Bill Armstrong, whose club won 31 in succession last season and made it 16 without defeat this year, via a 64-52 win over Warren.

The margin of victory was hardly impressive, but it was the Coast League opener for both schools and competition in this league may be the toughest in CIF.

In another big game, Centennial, led by Lee McDougal, nipped Dominguez, 53-51. Both schools are rated in the top 20 in CIF, and Warren may make that list soon.

NARROW WIN FOR IRVINE

UC Irvine owns its 11th win in 16 outings today, but the Anteaters had to survive an official's ruling to beat Chapman, 72-70, Friday night.

Chapman's Doug Eckert hit a basket at the buzzer, but the referees ruled the ball did not leave his hand in time and the points were disallowed.

SUB COMES OFF BENCH TO PACE TARTAR WIN

Flashy James Dunn came off the bench to score 31 points Friday night as Compton College got its running game in gear and streaked past Harbor, 90-86.

It was a four-man offensive show as Dunn (31) and Harold Little (23) led the Tartars, while John Dearman (31) and John Pickney (28) sparked the Hawks.

Compton led by 14 at halftime and 21 at one time in the second half, but Harbor rallied behind the marksmanship of center Dearman.

In other jaycee games, Ted Harper scored 28 points as unbeaten Fullerton (6-0) shipped Mt. San Antonio, 61-56. Harper took 17 shots and made 12, including 9 in a row.

A dramatic demonstration of the fast erection technique in a West Germany concept in low-cost housing, being introduced in the United States and Canada, was a highlight of the American Home Builders Association convention in Houston last week.

A group of Dallas, Houston and California investors have secured the patent and resale rights to the low-cost factory pre-engineered homes originated by Pola Fertighauser of Stuttgart.

More than 15,000 of the homes are now in use in Western Free Europe.

The American company, Fairchild-Pola International, Inc., Dallas, is headed by W. A. Morel, vice president.

He is a real estate broker and investor. Henry

New, Fast Housing For Poor Shown

Seale, Dallas, is director and president of Dallas Aero Service, banker and rancher.

Warren A. Fairchild, of Houston, builder and business executive, is president. The initial factory and personnel training center is in Houston.

DURING THE FIRST PUBLIC exposition of the new homes concept in North America, three homes were erected on South Main Street, not far from the Astrodome and the convention.

One was completely finished, landscaped and furnished.

A second was finished and a third — of 1,520 square feet, erected and "dried in" in 24 hours.

The homes, according to Morel, range from 384 to 3,200 square feet and thirty floor plans are provided.

All will have a minimum of two bedrooms.

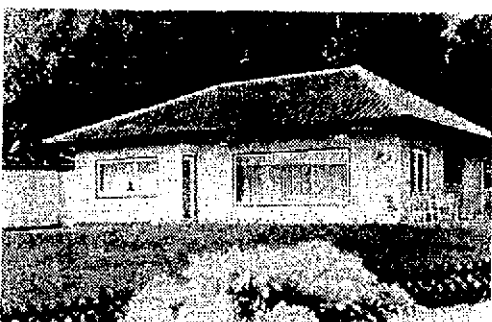

Fairchild-Pola Homes can be erected in from one to two days following concrete foundation setting. The home can be occupied in two to three weeks. A variety of architecture is available from contemporary to continental.

LABOR COSTS ARE expected to be materially lowered because of factory pre-engineered production, Morel said, utilizing research, technologies and material developments which have been tested in thousands of homes.

To this, American production methods are added.

Many of the accessories, accounting for more than half the cost, will be brought from West Germany, Morel said.

ZENITH MODEL . . . 1,300 Square Feet

West German techniques in the use of sandwich panels and stressed skins in structures demanding tremendous strength have been adapted to the construction of these homes.

The usual on-site construction methods have been eliminated. The components, exterior and interior are factory pre-engineered.

Exteriors are of polyresins combined with crushed stone in which permanent color has been added.

Few nails are used in the homes; synthetic adhesives are used in the interiors and patented steel bolts for joining of walls, roof and foundations.

ROOFS ARE CONCRETE TILE in the better homes and aluminum tile in others. The color of both exterior and roof never requires repainting.

While the company will serve a select market of finer homes, it will concentrate on public and industrial housing developments as well as meet the needs for housing individual low income families in homes of 384 to 1,000 square feet.

'Pulse' from Fidelity Federal Plaza Strong

Independent Press-Telegram
Progress
REAL ESTATE BUSINESS

ECONOMIC VIBRATIONS OF MODERN COMPLEX . . . Gives Beat to Downtown Long Beach

Special to the Progress Section

Full economic impact from the new Fidelity Federal Plaza, 555 E. Ocean Blvd., Long Beach, is yet to be felt.

Already nearby businesses are benefitting from the purchasing power of the Plaza employees — and the complex is but 70 per cent leased.

When fully occupied — this expected by mid-year — more than 1,100 persons will be employed there.

"The concept of a financially oriented complex . . . with its prime location in downtown Long Beach . . . have been strong selling points in the selection of the Plaza by business firms," says project manager W. David Joyce.

SPENCER SCOTT, executive vice president of Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan Association, owner of the major office complex, last week said leasing of space is expected to reach the 90 per cent level by May 1.

The development has 110,000 square feet of office space, was completed and opened last July.

A total of 35 firms are now headquartered there.

To attract new firms to the development, statistics relating to the availability of employees, housing, economic potential of the community and projected growth are assembled and presented to prospective tenants.

According to Fred Drosch, president of F.P. Drosch & Associates, exclusive leasing representatives for Fidelity Federal Plaza.

"You don't just build a high-rise office complex and wait for tenants. You initiate an aggressive leasing program to sell the benefits of the community and the advantages of the development to the prospect."

AN ADDITIONAL INCENTIVE to attract new businesses to Long Beach and Fidelity Federal Plaza is a 4,000-square-foot health club to be installed on the enclosed upper level of the tower.

It will contain a handball court, golf practice range, sauna bath, shower and locker facilities and a fully equipped workout room. Plans are near completion and construction is expected to begin within 30 days. The facility will be for the exclusive use of tenants and their guests.

In addition, lease agreements have been signed for the construction of the 5,500 square-foot Lombardo's Restaurant.

Leonard Lombardo, formerly of the Embers, and Loren McCannon, former assistant city manager, are associated in the venture.

Entrance to the new dining facility will be on Linden Avenue. The menu will feature extensive continental cuisine.

JETWAY EQUIPMENT CORP., Lynwood, a division of Stanray (listed on the New York Stock Exchange) completed arrangements last week for its move to Fidelity Federal Plaza.

Jetway is the major manufacturer of passenger funnel tubes for air terminals throughout the world. The firm will occupy 3,871 square feet of office space.

"Fidelity Federal Plaza has also stimulated interest and growth among the existing businesses of Long Beach," says Drosch. "The Traveler's Insurance Company recently leased one and one-third floors (13,200 square feet) of office space. Traveler's had been in their former location since 1923," he added.

"Mason, Kinley, Bergmann and Waestmann, attorneys, now occupy 2,200 square feet in the Plaza, the first move for that firm since 1928.

Another example of the appeal of Fidelity Federal Plaza to local firms is the move-in of the Bill Wilson Company, Inc., a major general insurance firm in Long Beach for 27 years.

The company, specializing in personalized insurance service, occupies 2,100 square feet of office space in the tower.

THIS INDICATES the need for new developments of this nature," Drosch says. Another new firm attracted to Long Beach and to the high-rise complex is Fulwider, Patton, Rieber, Lee and Uchtl, specializing in patent law. Although headquartered in Los Angeles, the firm selected Fidelity Federal Plaza as the location for its Long Beach office.

A second major law firm recently locating in the development is Pray, Price, Williams & Russell, with 2,638 square feet of office space. Occupancy by the firm was effective Jan. 1.

Primary tenants on the ground level providing complete financial services for the development are Security Pacific Bank, 6,500 square feet; Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, Inc., investment brokerage firm, 4,400 square feet; and Fidelity Federal Savings and Loan Association, 9,140 square feet.

IN ADDITION TO LEGAL, financial and insurance firms, businesses in other fields have also selected Fidelity Federal Plaza as their headquarters.

These include Formations, Inc., and two of its subsidiaries, Precise Power, designer of total power systems for industry and commercial developments and Lu-Ten Trading Company, dealing in imports and exports.

Rogers Lake Clay Co.; U.S. Fidelity and Guaranty, insurance; Salter Professional Schools; Founders Mutual Depositor Corporation, Pragmadyn, Inc.; and Allen Warren Agency, employment, are recent tenants of the project.

Personal service firms and selected retail shops have also been attracted to the high-rise facility.

Now located there are La Parasol Beauty Salon; Samuel Josephs, men's grooming; and The Dressing Room, boutique shop.

SOON TO BE UNDER construction will be a new coffee and sandwich shop by Employee Food Service, Inc., a fast food service operation. The location of the new facility will be on the mezzanine level.

"Lease negotiations are also now under way with additional firms," Drosch said.

Private Mortgage Insurance Helping Young in Buying Home

New York Times Service

How do young married couples get a home of their own when they don't have the 20 or 25 per cent down payment that many lending institutions require?

How do they get a better home than they might otherwise qualify for on the small amount of money they have?

A relatively new development in mortgage lending — private mortgage insurance — has been demonstrating in the last few years that it may have the answer.

Before the advent of private mortgage insurance, anyone looking for a mortgage loan with less than a 20 per cent down payment simply shopped around for the best deal he could make.

IF HE was lucky and found a lender willing to work with him, he often could get a mortgage with monthly payments he could afford and still get by with a small down payment.

Some lending institutions have granted conventional mortgages with 10 per cent down payments when the borrower and his house met basic minimum standards but most want much higher down payments.

When the risk seemed too great, they also have had the option of using government-insured loans under the FHA (Federal Housing Administration) and the VA (Veteran's Administration).

NOW, WITH private mortgage insurance, lenders have a new option, which is expected to make home owners of thousands who might otherwise never qualify.

Although government insurance continues to meet a real need for both borrowers and lenders, in many ways private insurance offers a distinct advantage, considerably less red tape and substantially more flexibility.

FHA, for example, insures the full amount of mortgage loans up to 97 per cent of appraised property value. Private mortgage insurance covers only the top 20 per cent of the loan, where the risk is. Therefore, the private insurance costs much less.

Southland Worker's Buying Power Slipped in '68

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Section Editor

For some, the economic game is called "catch up." An over-the-year gain in average weekly earnings of Los Angeles-Long Beach manufacturing production workers by last November was unable to neutralize the effects of spiraling prices and tax increases, according to a report by Albert C. Beeson, director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

Weekly earnings of factory workers in the state's largest metropolitan area reached $138.79, a rise $3.24, or 2.4 per cent, from the November 1967 average.

The year-to-year gain of 2.4 per cent, which was the smallest such margin of growth since last spring, reflected a relatively small over-the-year increase in hourly earnings coupled with a shortened workweek.

After modification for tax and price hikes, the buying power of these earnings for a factory worker with three dependents dropped 2.7 per cent below the November 1967 level.

The decline in buying power of a single worker's earnings was even more pronounced — a loss of 3.6 per cent over the year.

BROADWAY-HALE STORES, Inc., has completed the acquisition of Sunset House, the nation's largest specialty mail-order firm selling gifts and novelty merchandise, according to Eaton W. Ballard, executive vice president.

The merger action previously was approved by both Broadway-Hale and Sunset House shareholders. Sunset House will operate under its present management as an autonomous subsidiary of Broadway-Hale.

With 47 stores in California, Arizona and Nevada, Broadway-Hale is the West's largest department store group.

WHAT WILL tomorrow's modern apartments offer? According to a survey of apartment dwellers, multi-unit developments with lavish landscaping, recreational facilities, swimming pool and ample living space are here to stay.

The survey, made by the Jim Cox Co., a Southern California advertising agency, also listed access to shopping, schools and freeways as basic factors in the selection of an apartment.

However, a surprising product of the survey, ranking second only to the size of the apartment, was a tenant preference to have all utilities paid by the management of the building.

Apartment residents expressed a desire to write one monthly check for the total cost of rent and utilities. They would welcome this reduction in bookkeeping, the survey indicated.

DESPIITE THE INFLATION and tightening money conditions currently clouding housing prospects for early 1969, there could well be some easing in the home-financing picture later in the spring.

Howard Edgerton, chairman of the board of California Federal Savings and Loan Association, has said in many respects the first few months of the new year "could duplicate the tight-money crunch of 1966."

But he held out hopes for improvement in the home-financing picture in time for the normal spring-time buying season, and added that the stage is being set for rising levels of residential construction after the money market settles down.

"IT'LL BE UP TO THE NEW administration to take action on the present shortage of lumber and rising prices of the material for new housing."

So declares David Young, president of the Building Industry Association, after receipt of a "no action at this time" letter from the U.S. Department of Commerce signed by Rodney L. Borum, administrator.

"From other information sources, we understand the last time the control of softwood log export was considered by the government was a year and a half ago," Young said.

Since that time prices generally have risen 75 per cent with 50 to 60 percent increase to home builders.

"In light of this new evidence of heavy export of our lumber, there is a compelling need to re-consider the Export Control Act," the BIA president said.

EVERY MAN, WOMAN OR CHILD who has ever had trouble starting charcoal for a barbecue will want to pay attention to this:

G. B. Byars, president of Auto Fire Corporation, Corinth, Miss., announces the corporation has filed for increase in capital stock to 300,000 shares of common in order to handle major expansion in production of a new charcoal lighter and camp stove on which it holds patents.

The "Auto Fire Charcoal Lighter" is reputed to be the world's fastest method to light and ignite charcoal without the use of dangerous lighter fluids.

The lighter will ignite charcoal in 90 seconds with one piece of newspaper and is 300 percent faster than all previous methods.

Byars said the Auto Fire is now being merchandised by Sears, Montgomery Ward, J. C. Penny, B. F. Goodrich stores and many other large retail outlets and estimates that sales will reach $10 million annually.

The corporation is planning an extensive newspaper advertising program.

THE ESTABLISHMENT of a "full scope" real estate training program has been announced by Frank R. Hart, president of Walker & Lee, Orange County residential real estate specialists.

The program is designed as a continuous effort by the firm to "up date" salesmen and women in new marketing methods, appraising, investment market trends, in-depth financing, how to benefit from title company services and even such basics as telephone techniques and "service after sale."

"The fast pace of the current, ever-changing real estate market has placed a demand on the real estate industry to produce a knowledgeable, service-minded salesman," commented Hart, "and our answer is our 'continuous training program.'"

The need to put the training program on a full time basis has been due to company expansion and a considerable increase in the sales staff.

The training program is being offered to new Walker & Lee recruits as well as long time salesmen and managers of both the company's New House Division and Resale Homes Division.

TIMBERLINE RANCH

Mad River, California

At Timberline Ranch, located on the Mad River, in Northern California's scenic SIX RIVERS NATIONAL FOREST, 9,200 acres have been set aside to provide for an outdoor recreation wonderland.

Here, you can retire, build a summer home or camp out on your own 40-acre forested ranch sites priced from $9,000.00 to $25,000 with payments monthly from $45.

The Mad River, named by Oregon Explorer Josiah Gregg in 1849, is the lair of Rainbow Trout. In this wilderness paradise, amid groves of towering pine trees, the deer and grouse are wildlife companions. LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TRADE TIPS ON THE WORLD MARKET

By REVAN KOMAROFF

Would Pacific seafood go down well in Woolloomooloo?

Several years ago, the sales manager of a Los Angeles distributor of frozen Pacific Seafoods visited Sydney and Melbourne to investigate the prospects for export of his company's products.

As a result of statistical information prefurnished by his local Chamber of Commerce and the U. S. Department of Commerce, trade agreements were signed and fish from the West Coast went on sale in Australia that year.

The company anticipates the value of its sales to Australia, in the current financial year, will top $1 million.

More and more American companies are discovering Australia and its possibilities.

Mowery-Thomason, Inc., Los Angeles, has been named franchise applicator-dealer representative for the Los Angeles area by the Upjohn Company's CPR Division at Torrance.

George Meadows and Alan Swift, representatives of Mowery-Thomason, recently completed the certified technical training course for CPR franchise applicator-dealers, held at the Torrance facility.

URETHANE foam, a rigid cellular plastic and a principle product of The Upjohn's CPR Division, is causing a revolution in the insulation industry. It is furnished as two liquids (a system or wet-peck) that, when mixed, form a rigid foamed mass thirty times the original volume, having almost twice the insulation capability of its nearest competition.

When these same liquids are foamed in place, a retentive bond to the facing materials provides additional structural stability.

THE CPR franchise program teaches the latest installation technology. Urethane foam has true application versatility, in that it can be sprayed, frothed, or poured to meet stringent insulation requirements.

The advanced system formulations, furnished by The CPR Division, yield foams with low K factors, resulting in insulation efficiency, with great savings in weight, space and cost.

1914 DODGE ... Named A Town

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

In the days of horse-drawn carriages and farm wagons, a pioneering North Carolinian named J. Franklin Dunlap bought a Dodge automobile.

At this time, he was operating a country store at a rural crossroad about half way between Winston-Salem and the Virginia line. The store was a meeting place for the young folk, the spot where they gather to talk about crops, local politics, and the new horseless carriages.

One of the frequent visitors to the store was Alex Finchum. He liked Dunlap's car and bought a Dodge just like it.

The fact that there were two cars there was news. The fact that both cars were Dodes caused the people to refer to that crossroad as Dodge town.

Fifty years later local residents and state maps still do.

AS THE AUTO INDUSTRY sets one sales record after another, one trend is evident: the sports-type cars are leading the way.

Although they come in a variety of shapes and sizes, each of these sporty machines is easily recognized by the enthusiasts. They can spot a "Charger R/T" faster than most anti-aircraft crews can spot an enemy plane.

Among the greatest enthusiasts, car-watching is as popular as the older, more established sport of girl-watching. And while the girl-watcher has only three basic dimensions to consider, the car enthusiast must know a host of specifications.

The happy note for the manufacturers is that these are cars which really appeal to that ever-elusive youth market.

Good torque figures, hood scoops, rumbling exhausts, bumble-bee stripes, and wide tires are the turn-of-agents of these sports machines.

HOW MUCH YOUNGER is the owner of a sports machine? While the median average age of a Dart owner is 44, the "Swinger" owners are just 24.

As one goes up the cost ladder, the age increases a bit but the spread is quite similar.

Median age for Corvair buyers is 41 but Super Bee buyers are 26, and the R/T (Road and Track) buyers are 28.

Charger, an all-sports series has an average age of just 32.

Dodge calls their sporty cars the "Scatpack," and this year these cars accounted for 17 per cent of sales, versus only nine per cent a year ago.

Sports may always be a young man's game, but right now more drivers are thinking young than ever before.

New Rayco AutoService to Open Thursday in L.B.

Rayco AutoService, a division of the B. F. Goodrich Company, will celebrate the grand opening Thursday under company management of its automotive center at 1940 Long Beach Blvd., Long Beach.

The Rayco center, one of the largest of 21 in Southern California, will offer complete automotive services and products all days of the week except Sunday.

It will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, and from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday and Friday.

ED YOUNG has been appointed manager.

Special sale prices will be offered to customers to commemorate the opening, according to Frank Clement, western regional sales manager for Rayco.

Clement said the center has eight service bays and will feature fast, convenient service.

The store will offer specialized service in brake work and front-end alignment as well as a complete line of Rayco automotive products and services.

Products include tires, convertible tops, mufflers, brakes, seat covers, shock absorbers and accessory items.

Seal Beach B of A in Renovation

Construction has begun on a $130,000 modernization project for Bank of America's Seal Beach branch, 208 Main St.

Major phase of the work will be a complete face-lifting of the building's exterior which will be redesigned in a colonial New England fishing village motif, according to manager Edward Halsey.

The project also includes renovating the interior with modern, low, windowless teller counters, full carpeting for the officers area and the installation of new furnishings, fixtures and air conditioning system.

CONSTRUCTION is expected to last approximately three months.

By DON CAMPBELL

It never hurts to take a look under the cheese on the off chance that there's a trigger concealed by it. Many a mouse today is nursing the aftermath of a nasty karate chop incurred in the exploration of an "unloaded" trap.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I feel like such a big fool that I'm almost tempted to go through with this mess I'm in rather than make a fuss about it. But there's just too much money — my money — involved in it for that.

I recently made the down payment on a large, well-maintained home which I thought was perfect for my needs. My plans were for my wife and me to occupy the ground floor and rent out the upstairs which has been converted into two apartments. It was the same arrangement that the previous owner had had.

We had no sooner made the deal than I learned, in a round-about way, that the house violates local zoning ordinances and has been in violation of them for the past five years.

Naturally, I was furious and contacted the seller through his broker, and they both tried to shrug the whole thing off by pointing out that the house has been used for multiple occupancy for so long that it has been "accepted," and that it is very unlikely that anyone will ever call it to the city's attention.

I don't like to operate this way and told the seller so in no uncertain terms. Now he has offered to remove the partitions upstairs so that it complies with the zoning definition of a "one-family residence," and insists — with this work done — that I won't have any choice but to go ahead with the deal. I still say that I'm within my rights in trying to get out of this contract. Or am I? —MR. H.A.

ANSWER: You are, indeed. In the first place you didn't buy the property as a one-family residence, but as a multiple family apartment, and that re-converting it back to its original purpose is simply a dodge on the seller's part to try to get off a legal limb that won't hold his weight.

The crux of the case is that you were given assurances that you were buying a "marketable" title to the property, and the courts have almost unanimously held that this sort of substantial violation of zoning ordinances makes the title unmarketable. By all means turn this over to a lawyer and begin proceedings to have the sale set aside and the money advanced by you returned.

You have no place to go but down in trying to deal with these people on your own.

MR. CAMPBELL:

Please help us. We recently purchased a lake place with a right of ingress and egress clause written into the deed. We have to enter our property over a private road used by other parties except for about two blocks which is used only by us.

This last stretch is hard to manipulate, because we have to inch our way between trees. The trouble is the owner of the property refuses to remove a tree even when it is necessary. We bought our property from this person. Now, please, how can we cope with this problem? —MRS. W.M.

ANSWER: In general, the fact that A gives B an easement over A's property doesn't make him his brother's keeper as far as knocking himself out in making the easement convenient to B. At the same time, though, the law is pretty specific in giving

KLM Uses Buses

NEW YORK (UPI) — KLM Royal Dutch Airlines will offer 21-day unlimited bus service in Europe for $88 to Americans flying to Europe on KLM this summer. The bus service will be good in nearly all European countries except Greece, Spain and Portugal.

the easement owner ("B" in our little vignette) the right to take all necessary steps in making the easement usable.

In this respect, the law has held that B has a right to blast rocks, trim trees, or what-have-you, in order to make the easement meaningful — and, to my knowledge, it hasn't limited how far back A accomplish this.

I suggest that you point this fact of law out to your friend and then give him a reasonable time to accomplish it before taking the matter into your own hands.

MR. CAMPBELL:

My wife has gotten it into her head that we need a home safe for our valuable papers, and I say that this is a crazy waste of money — any good burglar could crack one of those things in a couple of minutes. Isn't that right? —MR. P.P.

ANSWER: Sure. As a matter of fact, even safe manufacturers, themselves, will admit that there isn't a safe made that a skilled safe cracker, with the right tools and enough time, can't get into.

But your wife has some pretty good arguments on her side. In the first place, most homeowners don't buy safes to protect papers against burglars, but against fire. Most good home safes carry an Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., rating indicating that it can withstand temperatures of 1700 degrees for an hour without the interior temperature of the safe exceeding 350 degrees — paper chars at about 450 degrees.

Bear in mind, too, that the professional burglar rarely tackles a home safe, because he knows that 99 out of 100 of them have nothing but papers in them — and that it may take the amateur a half an hour to crack it.

(Campbell welcomes letters. Unfortunately, he is unable to enter into correspondence with readers, but will answer as many letters as possible through this column.)

(Revised by The Register and Tribune Syndicate Inc. 1959)

What do they have that you don't?

- An S&S built home, NOT some other builder's house.
- An imported marble entry, NOT vinyl asbestos tile.
- Custom cut crystal chandeliers, NOT ordinary fixtures.
- Plush wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, NOT just in a few rooms and at extra cost.
- Beautiful and convenient architect designed plans and exterior, NOT 1949 plans with 1969 furniture.
- Double thick lath and plaster construction for better soundproofing, safety and maintenance, NOT drywall.
- Luminous ceilings in kitchens and baths, NOT wall mounted dime store fixtures.
- Huge walk-in pantry, NOT just a few shelves.
- Vinyl flooring in kitchens and baths, NOT asphalt tile.
- Generous ceramic tiling, NOT easily broken plastic tile.

Plus a home in a community where some 3,000 of their neighbors have shown their pleasure by awarding S&S an unsolicited citation of merit.

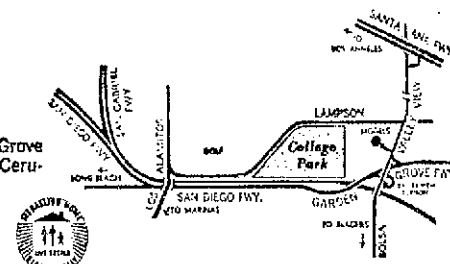

And that's not half of it! There are hundreds more!! We never cut corners on quality and we still give you a fabulous livable home priced from $29,990.

Don't you owe it to yourself to get what they've got?

DESPITE HIGHER COST

S&S College Park Homes Have Costly Lath and Plaster

Financial experts are in general agreement the money market is in a state of flux, reports Jerry Henderson, vice president of marketing for S & S construction Co., builders of College Park in Seal Beach.

"The prime rate has gone to the highest rate in history and mortgage rates are also on an upward spiral," Henderson said.

In view of this situation, Henderson points out now is the time to buy before interest rates climb still higher.

ALSO important to the homebuyer is the ever increasing cost of construction which is forcing builders to raise the basic purchase prices.

College Park has maintained the same high standards of quality which have won S & S several awards from homeowner's groups throughout the company's 15 year history.

While most other developers in the area have gone to drywall to cut costs, S & S has continued to build with lath and plaster wall construction for superior soundproofing, optimum safety and ease maintenance.

AMONG the other quality features which are standard in a College Park home are cast iron sinks and tubs, luminous ceilings and generous use of ceramic tile in "Flower Fresh" kitchen baths.

The fully built-in medalion kitchens also are appointed with Gaffers and Sattler double ovens and range, automatic dishwashers, triple sinks with mixing valve, choice of master crafted cabinets with fine furniture finishes and oversized walk-in pantries.

The same emphasis on excellence is maintained throughout the house.

College Park homes, offered in one story, two story and split level plans with 3 to 6 bedrooms, are available with excellent VA, FHA, or conventional financing terms.

More Americans Are Working -- And They're Spending More

By Associated Press
More than 76 million Americans are working — a record for this time of year — and they are spending money as never before.

This is the case despite the 10 per cent federal income tax surcharge imposed last July 1 in an effort to restrain the economy's headlong advance and to stem ballooning inflation.

The Labor Department reported total employment rose in November to 76.6 million, up 250,000 from October to a record for the month.

At the same time the unemployment rate fell to a 15-year low of 3.3 per cent of the labor force. The rate in October was 3.6 per cent, the average level for the year to date.

RETAIL sales climbed in November to a monthly record of $29.1 billion, a gain of 1.5 per cent above the October level.

The New York Stock Exchange estimated that consumer spending in 1968 topped the record 1967 total by 10 per cent. And it said consumer income rose 7.1 per cent between mid-1967 and mid-1968.

Economists said much of the rise in retail sales came from consumers dipping into their savings to offset the bite out of their paychecks from the tax increases.

The savings rate fell from 7.5 per cent of income before enactment of the surcharge to 6.25 per cent by September.

THE Federal Reserve Bank of New York said business activity remains strong and price increases "have continued at an excessive pace."

It said the price rise at the consumer level so far this year had amounted to 4.8 per cent on an annual basis. This was higher than for any full calendar-year since 1951.

Failure of the economy to cool off aroused conjecture as to whether the income tax boost would be allowed to expire next July 1, as scheduled, or would be extended.

In response to queries from the Commerce Department, most major manufacturing industries said they expected sales to increase in the first quarter of 1969 but at a slower rate than last year.

THEY forecast a sales gain of 1.5 per cent in the first three months of this year. The rise in the 1968 fourth quarter is estimated at 2 per cent.

There was considerable activity this past week on various sectors of the price front.

The steel price picture was muddled by seemingly unrelated moves by producers.

U.S. Steel Corp. and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. joined in a $7 a ton boost for long-term sheels, a small item, which was initiated by Armco Steel Corp.

National Steel Corp. raised its price for galvanized sheet $4 a ton after most major producers announced an $8 hike. Jones & Laughlin and Republic Steel joined.

INLAND Steel Co. increased its price for fully processed hot-rolled sheets and coils by $17 a ton.

Aluminum Corp. of America boosted prices on two grades of coiled litho sheet and foil by 1½ to 2 cents a pound.

Dow Chemical increased prices of dry-cleaning fluids and other solvents. Du Pont Co., Monsanto Co. and Rexall Drug & Chemical Co. boosted prices of polyethylene coating resins, used mainly for milk container coating.

Big El Ray Park Homes Popular

The distinctive new stylings and floor plans, coupled with the favorable financing programs at El Ray Park have been cited for the marked increase in sales recently at this new R. A. Watt Company, Inc. community being developed in Cerritos.

Officials at the project pointed out that the big, new homes are offered at prices ranging from $29,950 and may be purchased under financing arrangements with monthly payments as low as $168, including principal and interest.

A popular feature of the financing, and one that has been a big contributing force in the sales success according to a spokesman is the new trade program called the Equity Transfer Trade program which allows a buyer to transfer the equity in his present home as part of the financing arrangements in the purchase of a new El Ray Park home.

AVAILABLE in a variety of handsome one and two-story and split-level stylings, with floor plans providing three or four bedrooms and two or three baths, the spacious homes contain numerous luxury features and design innovations for comfort and convenience. Balanced Power kitchens contain a full complement of built-in appliances.

El Ray Park is in an established residential area, close to all urban services and facilities and within easy commuting distance of major business and commercial centers of the Southland, as well as recreational areas, by way of the nearby freeway.

The community may be reached from the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to the San Gabriel Freeway (605) continuing on Freeway 605 to the South St. off-ramp and west on South St. to Studebaker Rd. south on Studebaker to the model homes, just north of Del Amo Blvd.

Ashwill, Burke & Co. Now Doing Business

Bill Burke and Gene Ashwill, Southern California real estate executives, have formed a new realty firm: Ashwill, Burke & Co.

The firm specializes in the sale and leasing of industrial properties in South Los Angeles County and in Orange County.

According to Burke, the partners expect to negotiate $4 million dollars of industrial brokerage business during 1969.

GENERAL offices for the company have been established at 8100 Garden Grove Blvd., Garden Grove.

Branches will be opened near the Los Angeles-Long Beach Harbor area, Downtown Los Angeles and in Orange County, the partners said.

ASHWILL and Burke combine 17 years of industrial development experience.

Hacienda Homes Have Good Value, Terms

A combination of good value and terms is making sales move swiftly into the second unit of Hacienda Homes in Anaheim, the developers, Harvey A. Berger and George M. Holstein and Sons report.

Open just after the first of the year, the new group is now half sold, the sales agents, Walker and Lee, Inc. announced.

The three and four-bedroom Mediterranean-styled homes are priced from $23,495 and offer a score of family-oriented features.

Fireplaces, built-in kitchens, wall to wall carpet, landscaping, sprinklers and block walls may all be included.

ALONG with the low price, Hacienda Homes in Anaheim will continue to offer both FHA and Veteran terms. Veteran may purchase for no down payment.

The Hacienda Homes location is near the intersection of the Riverside and Newport Freeways.

Visitors take the Riverside Freeway to the Jefferson off-ramp and go south to Riverdale.

Riverdale bridges the freeway and brings the home shopper to the Hacienda model homes.

COMPLETE KITCHENS . . . Feature of Yorktowne Homes

Yorktowne's Newest Unit Now in Grand Opening

Grand opening of the newest unit at builder-developer Larry Shields' Yorktowne community in Huntington Beach is under way, it was announced by Frank McFarland Sr., head of the McFarland Company, sales agents for the new development.

Opening of this new unit, well ahead of the original construction schedule, is indicative of the continuing success of the project, which McFarland attributed to a number of important factors, two of these being the popular "turn key" merchandising concept now in effect, and the convenient location in Huntington Beach, one of Orange County's fastest growing communities.

The "turn key" program assures buyers that the homes are completely ready for immediate occupancy, with a variety of needed items already installed, such as carpeting and fencing.

McFarland also indicated that the realistic pricing schedule — the homes range in price from $27,500 to $29,400 — together with favorable financing programs — also has contributed to the overall success of the development. The homes in Yorktowne are available in a variety of one and two-story stylings with floorplans providing up to four bedrooms.

Yorktowne is located on the west side of Brookhurst Avenue opposite Constitution Avenue in Huntington Beach, and may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by driving south on Brookhurst.

The sales office is at 9962 Constitution Avenue. Model homes are open daily for inspection.

Maximum Homes Popular

Today marks the grand opening of the final Maximum Homes unit, Westminster.

The fashionable private community is close to both the San Diego and Garden Grove Freeways.

Three and four-bedroom homes, in the preceding unit, were sold at record pace, according to Mark Cain, sales representative.

He attributes the success of the project to Maximum's "no extra cost" policy, whereby many extras are included in the home price.

NONE of the homes are priced over $25,550, and some are as low as $24,990. Excellent terms are offered.

Maximum Homes may be reached by following the San Diego Freeway south to the Westminster-Springdale Street off-ramp. Go left on Springdale a half-mile to the development.

Huntington Shores Sets Sneak Preview of Homes

Huntington Shores, located at Edwards and Armada Drive in Huntington Beach is the first new home development to be introduced in the city by veteran California builder William Lyon in 1969.

The home series, of three to four-bedroom, one-story designs, are now having a series of special pre-completion sneak previews.

This weekend marks the first time sales personnel will be on hand to offer early bird buyers the best selection of lots available in this unit.

THE MODEL homes, designed by Phil Hove, are about to be furnished and landscaping begins shortly. "But now is the best time to shop for a new home," says Lyon's area manager, Don Gittelsohn, "because this is the first weekend we have manned the operation and home-buyers can have their pick of the best lot with the exterior design they want. "Once a new home community has officially opened, this choice is not always available."

Prices at Huntington Shores begin at $22,990 and go up to $25,900 for a four-bedroom, two-bath home.

Some of the architectural highlights which are especially appealing in this home series are the dramatic cathedral ceilings in the Plans No. 3 and No. 4. The high ceilings add an especially distinctive note of elegance.

NEW HOTEL FOR ORANGE COUNTY

A 250-unit hotel, Orange County's third largest and to be known as Airporter Inn Hotel, goes under construction this month on 70-acre site near main entrance to Orange County Airport. Owner of predicted $4 million hotel is Richard Duffy, who also owns Jolly Roger Inn Hotel, Anaheim. A large restaurant complex is planned at Airporter grounds.

PORTS O' PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

The California Public Utilities Commission (PUC) will hold a public hearing Wednesday to consider the application of Harbor Carriers, Inc., for a permit to operate a 149-passenger vessel between the Port of Long Beach and Avalon on Catalina Island.

The company is seeking authority to run four round trips daily between May 1 and September 30 and two round trips daily the rest of the year.

The hearing is to be held at 10 a.m. in the Veteran's Memorial Building, 241 W. Broadway. A second hearing is set for 10 a.m. Feb. 18 in the PUC courtroom, 107 S. Broadway in Los Angeles.

JOHN J. BRANGAN, general superintendent of Bethlehem Steel Corporation's Hoboken, N.J. ship repair yard for the past eight years, has been named assistant manager of the company's ship-building and repair yard on Terminal Island in the Port of Los Angeles.

The new assistant manager will succeed Joseph D. Ingham who has been appointed assistant manager of the corporation's Baltimore yard.

JOHN BRANGAN

DURING A "BON Voyage" and a "Welcome Aboard" luncheon at the Reef Restaurant last week Marvin Malmouth, president of Retla Steamship Co. who is moving to New York, announced the appointment of Paul W. Smith as the new vice president and general manager of the company's busy terminal operations on Pier F in the Port of Long Beach.

Retla handles more tonnage than any other tenant of the port.

Smith is a graduate of the U.S. Maritime Academy at King's Point, N.Y., and was superintendent of stevedoring and terminal operations for Marine Terminals for the past three years.

He was also manager of Port Hueneme for three years before joining Marine Terminals.

Apartment Managing Course Set

An apartment management course has been rescheduled for Cypress Junior College Campus with enrollment beginning Jan. 27 at 7 p.m., Building C-13.

The course has been designed to assist income property owners and managers to effectively attain income from the properties. The course will be for a 16-week period.

EUGENE L. Zechmeister, executive director, Apartment House Association, Long Beach-Southern Cities, has been reappointed by the North Orange County Junior College District as the class instructor.

Zechmeister is a resident of Cypress, and educator, administrator and retired Air Force Lt. Colonel.

Casa Corona Unit Is Half Sold Already

Nearly half of the homes planned for the newly opened 50-unit at Casa Corona are already sold as public response to the R. A. Watt Company development in Corona continues to climb, with work schedules being steadily advanced to meet the demand, officials announced.

The big, three and four-bedroom, two-bath homes are priced from $21,245 and may be purchased with down payments as low as 5 percent on conventional financing. Monthly payments, including principal and interest range from $179. VA financing is also available, featuring no down payments, only costs and impounds.

Casa Corona may be reached from the Riverside Freeway via the first Corona off-ramp (Sixth St.) continuing east on Sixth to Avenida del Vista and the model homes.

Accountants to Meet Monday

The Orange County Chapter, National Association of Accountants, will present its second member participation program of the year at Monday's meeting at the Disneyland Topic for the meeting, which will begin at 5:30 p.m., will be "To Lease or to Buy, That is the Question."

RAINBOW TROUT ABOUND... At Timberline Ranch Edge

AT MAD RIVER

One of State's Last Big Ranches Being Subdivided

Special to the Progress Section

MAD RIVER — Timberline Ranch, a sprawling 9,200-acre cattle and timber ranch on the Humboldt-Trinity Counties line at this scenic little community on the Mad River, is experiencing a metamorphosis of the times.

Abounding with Columbian black-tailed deer and with rainbow trout in the river, Timberline's vast acreage of mountains and meadows will be owned and shared by the public.

Tom Kier, Beverly Hills land developer and ranch owner, says he has decided to divide the ranch into 159 40-acre parcels and sell them as soon as possible.

"IT DOESN'T pay any longer as a cattle ranch or for the timber holdings," says Kier. "We have decided to cut up the ranch into 40-acre parcels and sell them as small ranches for those who are looking for the tranquility and outdoors attractions which have made the Timberline famous to many California visitors for years."

Timberline Ranch, bordered by four miles of the Mad River, is off State Highway 36 and just 200 miles from San Francisco and Sacramento.

The Mad River, with some of the best rainbow trout fishing in the State, is a controlled-flow river, pouring from Ruth Lake eight miles away.

"IT IS impossible to beat the trout fishing in the Mad River," Kier says. "Anglers who come to the ranch make this claim. I have seen fishermen sit on a rock and catch a limit of rainbows from one hole in a half-hour."

He says the ranch, located within the boundaries of the Six Rivers National Forest, is the home of more than 18,000 Columbian black-tailed deer, 1,500 bears and thousands of smaller wildlife species.

Yet he says, it has the attributes that make ranch-living comfortable.

"THE AREA really is one of the state's primary recreation areas," said Kier. "At the town of Mad River, less than one mile by road from the ranch, it is possible to buy anything from the makings of a Caesar salad to gasoline."

Kier says Timberline Ranch, with an elevation from 2,400 feet to 4,500 feet is being sold in three phases. The first will consist of the 40-acre parcels for purchasers who want to own a piece of ground for whatever the reason.

"Many of the buyers of these parcels," says Kier, "will want to retain the 40-acre parcels for their own little ranches. Timberline is for those who desire a remote way of life and outdoor recreation, but with utilities like natural gas and electricity.

"BUYERS OF the 40-acre parcels may subdivide, subject to Humboldt County ordinances, and sell three parcels and show a profit."

"The second phase will involve subdividing the remainder of the ranch land into smaller parcels, and then the third will be the development of the river front into an outdoors frontier."

Kier says the 40-acre parcels of the ranch sell from $9,000 to $25,000. Roads are in, which, with engineering, were completed at a cost of over $200,000.

"Timberline Ranch is instant recreation for private pilots," he says, "for they can land at the 2,400-ft. surfaced landing strip at Dinsmore, only 10 minutes from the ranch."

STRONG IN recreational developments, Kier has turned other huge land parcels into subdivisions similar to Timberline Ranch, including Porter Ranch at Oroville, Elysian Valley Estates at Janelle and Eagle Lake Highlands at Susanville.

He said his development firm has Southern California offices at 220 El Camino, Beverly Hills.

Darmel' Homes, North Tustin, Are Selling Swiftly

During the past 90 days, 26 Darmel homes have been sold at an average price of $55,000 for total sales of more than $1.4 million, according to David Melilli, builder-developer of the North Tustin homes in Orange County.

"This represents the sale of 26 of the 33 homes in the privately-walled community and is even more impressive when you consider that our homes are in the $49,900 to $58,900 category," Melilli said.

Elegant in design, Darmel' Homes offer from 2,459 to almost 4,000 square feet of living area with four, five and up to eight bedrooms. Three to five baths feature split levels and sunken Roman tubs.

Darmel' Homes may be reached from the Newport Freeway by driving east on 17th Street to Prospect, then north one mile to the development.

Or, from the Garden Grove Freeway, go south on Tustin to Fairhaven, then east to the site. Model homes are open from 10 a.m. to dusk daily.

Understands Living

Save up to $3,000

...that's the difference between our 3-bedroom, 2-bath home in Cerritos and the ones down the street.

What accounts for this saving? Simple. When we build a Heatherbrae home in Cerritos, we put our money where our house is. To give you the best value possible.

For example. You don't pay for the cost of a fancy sales office. You know the kind: with ornate furniture and plush carpets inside... plus bubbling fountains and exotic landscaping outside. The same thing goes for the furnishing of our models. It's nice, but realistic. Which cuts our cost and saves you more money.

Kaufman & Broad's vast size saves you money, too. (We're the largest publicly-held homebuilder in the nation, listed on the AMERICAN STOCK EXCHANGE.) We buy materials in such large quantities, that we get lower prices — plus our pick of the finest materials available. And our savings are passed on to you.

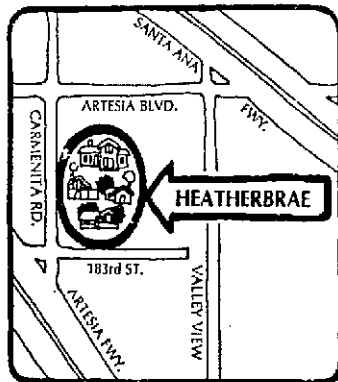

How much we can save you on a new 1969 home becomes crystal clear when you think about this: our 3-bedroom, 2-bath home in Cerritos costs about the same as our competitors' 2-bedroom, 1-bath homes in Cerritos. Check for yourself.

You get more for your money in other ways, too. Your new home is covered by our unique Five Year Warranty (which no other builder offers) and by our Customer Service Division. Both are yours at no extra cost. And both say you're getting one of the finest quality-built homes you can buy.

Like a home with a spacious, airy patio/kitchen. Deluxe floor coverings. Forced air heating. A 20-year roof. And a whole lot more that makes for great living. You get Cerritos, too. Where you'll be close to schools, churches, shopping, everything you'll need.

LUXURIOUS STAIRWAY... Feature Of Paradise Manor

Paradise Manor Buyers Own Home—and Land

The beautifully planned community of Paradise Manor, just north of the San Diego Freeway on Euclid Street, offers families the opportunity to move into two and three-bedroom, two and three-bath homes for only $500, according to the Trans-Robles Corporation, builders and developers.

Paradise Manor townhouse homes are priced from only $19,750 to $25,950 and purchasers own their home and land.

It is not lease land. With approximately 1,600 square feet of floor area, Paradise Manor features a finished 420-square-foot extra room above two car garages. The room may be used as a bedroom, guest room, playroom, parent's retreat, or whatever family requirements are.

FEATURES include all built-ins, wall-to-wall carpeting except in utility areas, ceramic tile countertops, cultured marble pullmans, breakfast bars, floating stairways, private patios and separate service areas in the garages.

All yard work and exterior maintenance is done for residents at the family-oriented community, so families are free to enjoy the easy way of life around two pools and the completely furnished and equipped recreation hall.

PARADISE Manor is just a mile from the almost-completed regional park, the largest, finest and newest in the county, at the corner of Warner Avenue and Brookhurst Street; 10 minutes from the ocean; and freeway close to the regional shopping centers of South Coast Plaza and the Huntington Center.

Models are open from 10 to dusk daily. From the Long Beach area, take the San Diego Freeway (605) south to the Euclid Street exit in Orange County. Turn left on Euclid about a half mile to Paradise Manor townhouse homes.

Landmark Opening Continues

Just into grand opening activity, the Landmark homesite is over half sold, reports sales director, R. B. Sheakley.

He announced the grand opening will continue at the Cerritos model area, where beautifully furnished model homes are now open for viewing.

Bob James, director of marketing for all Landmark Homes communities, reports tremendous acceptance shown by visitors who have previewed the new homesite in Cerritos.

FOUR BASIC plans and numerous exterior stylings are available.

The new community is entirely enclosed with a block wall insuring maximum privacy and security. New Landmark interior and exterior designs have been created for this site by noted designer R. J. Marvick & Associates.

Two-story homes feature four bedrooms with two and three baths.

SHEAKLEY added that the customary Landmark Homes package of family ready extras is also included in the purchase price at the new Cerritos homes: carpeting, landscaping, fencing, sprinklers, fireplaces, patio kitchens, underground utilities and concrete drives.

Prices range from $30,875 to $31,875 with a low 5 per cent down payment plan in effect.

The Cerritos homesite is located on Gridley Street, just north of 183rd Street.

The Lake Forest Activists will move into The Club House shortly

Lake Forest is a one-of-a-kind Orange County town. Woods and lakes, naturally. And a luxurious community beach and tennis club now abuilding that is so nearly ready that the activists can hardly wait. It's on the lake, with beaches, marina, tennis and an Olympic-size pool. Inside, beamed ceilings, big fireplaces, and fun places to socialize. If you live in Lake Forest, you're a member. Just like that.

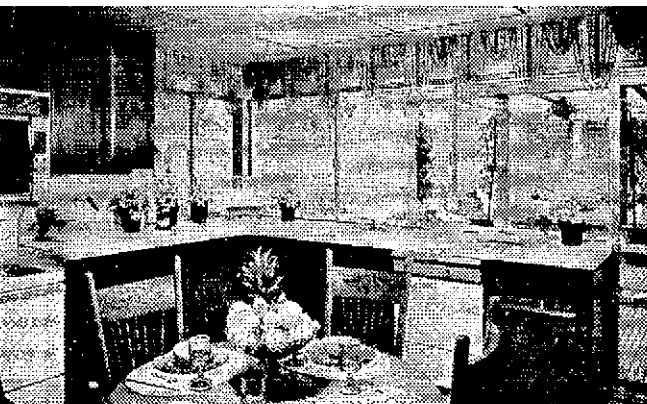

But the club at Lake Forest is almost insignificant compared to everything else. THE WOODS, for example, where homes are rising in a forest of mature trees. With places for picnics, riding, hiking and getting-away-from-it-all. Southern California country living, civilized-style. You can live here, relax here. Just pick your site and your style of living.

Water? Sixty million gallons start pouring in early January. Brand new lakes for swimming, sailing and fishing. Blue water glistening in the sun, and a slip of your own for a sailboat. A place to watch the moon come up over Saddleback Mountain. In early February you can visit LAKESHORE HOMES. Its models will excite your imagination and conclude your search for something more than just a "house."

Lake Forest is something special to come home to. Fifteen minutes from Santa Ana-Anaheim. Less than an hour from almost anyplace in metropolitan Southern California. A big small place that will have its own schools and Village Center. Big enough to keep you at home on weekends, small enough to be more neighborly.

There are all kinds of homes at Lake Forest. Two, three, four and five bedrooms. For couples craving privacy or families wanting the fun of new friendships.

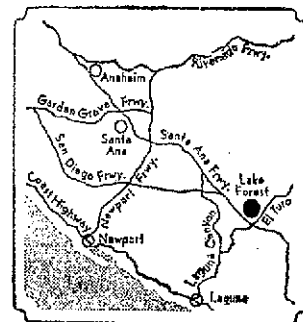

GARDEN HOMES—on projected cul-de-sac avenues where you are completely away-from-it-all within your own walls that encompass 5000 square feet of house and patio.

Or LAKE FOREST VILLAGE, where homes are rich with traditional dignity, on gently curving streets with generous backyards and spacious rooms for growing, going families. All within a stroll of the club and the Village Center.

Home prices start at $28,995 and you own your own land. Lake Forest has so much to share with you—trees, water, fresh air and the spell of the country—come see it today.

Lake Forest bound? Take the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeway to El Toro Road turnoff and follow the directional signs.

There's more a woman can learn about water than how to do dishes and laundry.

Safety at sea is their goal

By IOLA MASTERSON

"Good heavens, no! He wouldn't let me put my hands on those engines if he was still breathing!"

That was Lois (Mrs. Vern) Butts' reaction when asked if she ever repaired motors on their boat. Lois is one of very few women, locally, who successfully has completed a course in engine maintenance provided by Long Beach Unit of United States Power Squadrons.

Vern, an expert on motors, operates Fair Ships Marine Enterprises in Bellflower. He also lectures for LBPS courses in engine maintenance, seamanship and elementary piloting. So no wonder he does the repairing.

Nonetheless, in an emergency, Lois wouldn't panic if something went wrong on their 40-foot Sea Master during a cruise if the skipper, couldn't do repairs. If there was an at-sea solution, she's confident she could manage somehow.

A FRIEND OF hers mended a broken oil line with a balloon so cruiser could get back into port. Feminine ingenuity combined with basic knowledge can do wonders. As Vern said, "this course is first aid for motors — not intended to teach anyone how to do major overhauls."

Lois added, "A woman who isolates herself and does not participate in squadron learning with her husband loses the fun of boating.

Keeping up with the skipper means real companionship when boats and the sea are a husband's hobby."

The next series of free classes given by squadron will begin Monday, Feb. 3 at Wilson High and Feb. 6 for Thursday classes at Millikan High.

All men and women interested are invited. Only thing necessary to "sign aboard" is show up at 7:30 p.m. and register at either high school on night of choice.

Maurice Kent, past commander and long time teacher, explained that first timers begin with elementary piloting; can then go on through seamanship, advanced piloting, junior navigator and finally, at the top of the rung, navigator.

OPTIONAL COURSES include aforementioned engine work, sailboat handling, marine electronics and weather study.

As many women as men take elementary piloting—including a number of women who attend alone. Good example is Jan (Mrs. Frank) Leach. She and husband Frank are non-boaters but she took course on her own and described it as a "world of knowledge."

Exuberantly, Jan said, "The things they teach are great to know for anyone who lives in a seacoast city."

Undoubtedly most knowledgeable woman in Long Beach unit is Betty

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

Days are hectic with rehearsals and consultations as Camerata dei Musici readys a program of original music and ballet. Dancers, composer, technical staff, choreographers combine talents and don't count hours, but no one doubts that the production is marked for success.

'Frank Ahrold Night'

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

"Frank Ahrold Night" will follow some pretty hectic Frank Ahrold days.

Actually, "Frank Ahrold Night" is two nights — Friday and Saturday.

Camerata dei Musici, a remarkable company of highly trained musicians, will present the program of compositions and arrangements by Ahrold, conducted by Ahrold, each night at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College Auditorium.

The Camerata finances its productions with an annual fund-raising project and out of the pockets of its members. Hence, admission to its concerts is free.

The concerts are not only free, but also unusual. The group was formed to promote rare and original music.

The reason Ahrold's days are paced to spirited quickstep is that his career is four-faceted: composer, pianist, conductor, teacher, in that order.

Since 1949, the young composer (37) has written more than 135 masses, cantatas, sonatas, songs, chamber music compositions, concertos and ballets. Fifty-five of them have been published by Capitol Records, Jay Fischer and Theodore Presser.

HIS NEWEST ballet, "548-56-8037," will be premiered Friday and Saturday. Also on the program will be his arrangement of folk songs, "A-Roving," "On My Journey Home," "Follow the Drinking Gourd," and "Early One Morning."

The evening will conclude with another ballet, "The Spider and the Fly," which was premiered at LBCC in 1966. Sonya Newberg and Charles Flemmer will dance the leading roles.

This will be the first time Ahrold has conducted the premiere of one of his works but he has premiered compositions by Hor-moz Fahart and Morris Ruger.

"You can't help being nervous at a first performance," he admitted. "When I was conducting Ruger's choral work, 'A Leaf, a Stone, a Door,' suddenly the chorus and the

ADVENTURES IN GOURMET COOKING

League to present top chefs in series

"HMMM THAT smells good" say Mmes. Norman Scott (left), James Nagle of Assistance League as chefs Joe Alimorong of Puccini's and Ping Lee of Trader Vic's prepare to give them a sample of a gourmet delight.

SERIES chairman Mrs. David Eagleson (right) suggests you don't need to have a new stove to break old-fashioned cooking habits. Five chefs will bring guests up-to-date during league cooking lessons.

Tired of cooking the same old roasts, chops, mashed potatoes and carrots?

Then sign up for "Adventures in Gourmet Cooking," a series of five lecture-demonstrations which will be presented again this year by Assistance League of Long Beach. Classes will be conducted at League House, 394 Roswell Ave., beginning Monday, Feb. 3.

They will continue Feb. 10 and 17; March 3 and 10. Reservations are limited so early applications should be made with Mrs. David Eagleson, 5370 El Jardin, Long Beach (zip code - 90815), general chairman.

Five prominent chefs from Southern California restaurants will be presented. Each will give recipes of his restaurant's specialties. As in the past, the chefs will prepare food and, by use of big, slanted mirrors, those attending can see their hands at work and the method of preparation.

IT IS the visual impact of how to go through each step of a recipe and use of proper utensils that makes the series so informative.

In addition, the chefs disclose tricks of their trade to make gourmet cooking simpler and quicker.

Cost of the series is $20 and proceeds go to support the league's Girls' Clubs located on elementary and junior high school campuses in Long Beach. In some instances it is possible to attend just one or two of the classes without signing up for all five.

First to be featured will be Trader Vic's of Beverly Hills with Alex Kaluzny giving a running explanation as Ping Lee, the restaurant's executive chef, concocts some of his gourmet creations.

Ping Lee supervises a staff of 25 in cooking exotic cantonese and continental dishes.

On Feb. 10, Michael Morrell, manager, and Paul Perone, chef of the Princess Louise, Terminal Island, will demonstrate and share their knowledge in how to be a kitchen wizard. Perone served as chef for a chain of hotels in France, including the Paris Hilton, before coming to the U.S.

FEATURED Feb. 17 will be Chez

Cary in Orange, adjacent to Fashion Square. Geril Muller, designer-operator of the opulent restaurant, will narrate as chef Fred Hossli shows his finesse with food. Hossli, formerly of Zurich, Switzerland, received his apprentice training at Hotel de Bergues in Geneva and since has been chef at fine restaurants abroad and here.

C. B. (Nick) Nicolette, chef-owner of Puccini's of Long Beach, will be guest cooking artist Mar. 3. As a young boy he took apprenticeships at the Astor Hotel in New York and the Mayflower in Washington, D.C. Since then he has traveled around the world to seek out the formulas for all types of cooking.

Final restaurant in spotlight will be Senior Pico of Century City, Los Angeles. Oswaldo Llorens, manager, will discuss the means being used by executive chef Angel Bustamente during demonstration. Bustamente is from Sonora, Mexico, where he learned the subtleties of Sonora cuisine as well as from all parts of Mexico.

LLORENS, a recognized authority on Latin American and Mexican foods, has been in the restaurant business since retirement from the Peruvian Air Force.

Guest chefs donate their time and their restaurants provide all ingredients. Some prepare enough to serve snacks to guests during the coffee break. If not, the league serves coffee cake at the break.

Assisting Mrs. Eagleson are Mmes. Max Nichols, C. B. Lynd, Norman Jacques, Leslie Weed, Norman Scott and Robert Helms.

BRIGHT AS the colors of Mexico was the party cohosted by Betsy and Bix Bixby IV and Bill and Mary Klingensmith. It was for the crew who sailed with skipper Bix Bixby Jr. on his 48-foot sailboat, Typee, in the Mazatlan race.

Typee came in second overall in the race and was first in its class. Host Bix was navigator for his father and host Bill was on crew.

Party was progressive with margaritas being served at the Klingensmiths' and Mexican dinner at Bix and Betsy's. All Mexican, enchiladas were the main course and for desert she served a cake in the form of, and decorated like, a Mexican flag.

Both homes were lively with Mexican decorations and people in the same celebrating mood left over from south-of-the-border. Present were crew members John Bihy and wife, Tina, Mike Creamer, Dr. Bob McNeil and wife, Leone, Saint Cicero and Lu, and Jane Wolcott, who is Dr. Bob's secretary.

Also Ray and Jean Smith and Sam and Mil Cameron. The crew surprised the skipper with a silver tray as a token of their appreciation and the hosts had gag gifts for everyone. After dinner they watched movies of the race and re-lived the whole exciting episode.

LONG, DRAWN out oohs went around the room this week when committee of Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, working on forthcoming fashion show, heard a report by Helena (Mrs. Hal) Le Manuais.

She said for their big benefit Feb. 22 at Elks Club they may be lucky enough to have one of the most colorful, controversial designers in the business as guest narrator.

Theme of show will be "State of Things to Come in Fashion," based on the 200th anniversary of founding of the first missions in California in 1769 and forerunner of this state formally being admitted to the union in 1850.

Show coordinator Elaine Benesch of Bullocks' Lakewood will bring the word back on return from trip to New York. Among "oohers" at meeting were Lillian (Mrs. Don J.) Baker, who is auxiliary president, plus such committee members as Adele (Mrs. Leonard) Albrecht, Patty (Mrs. Les) McCreary, Vi (Mrs. Nevall) McCoy, Marian (Mrs. John) Parks, Bessie Block McCoy, Marjorie (Mrs. Howard) Link and Lois (Mrs. Vincent) Bailey, first v.p.

FRIENDS AND business associates all over town are going to miss Paul and Kit Staley and their four children. Paul resigned as manager of Proctor and Gamble and accepted a post as vice president in charge of manufacturing for Philadelphia Quartz.

Friday was Paul's last day at P&G and Monday he reports at new headquarters. They'll move to Philadelphia as soon as their home here is sold. Paul will be practically a commuter until then.

This will be their 13th move in 15 years and Kit, for one, hopes it's the last. He'll scout around for a house to buy in the Philly area and she'll fly back to OK the purchase when he finds some suitable ones.

Parents of the Raiders, boys football team at Los Altos YMCA which Paul has coached, gave them a farewell party at Allen Center and Dr. Bernie and Thelma Title entertained at a farewell for close friends Saturday.

Philadelphia Quartz has 14 plants with three of them on the West Coast (one in South Gate) which is why Paul will be out our way frequently.

GEM OF a bridal shower was given for Francie Reed, who weds John Davies Feb. 15. An evening dessert, it was given in home of Anabel (Mrs. Lisle) Wyatt and cohostesses with Anabel were Nelle (Mrs. Joseph) Read, Helen (Mrs. Donald) Plumb, Julia (Mrs. Robert) Helms and Lucille (Mrs. Donald) Anderson.

A Valentine motif was used. Dining room table was spread with white net over satin and there were clusters of fresh nosegays around the draped hem of camellias and ivy. Table was centered by an epergne with camellias, ivy, white doves and red hearts. Ice cream, molded in wedding bell form, and petit fours were served.

Among guests were Virginia Smith, Vivian Harre, Celia Henderson, Agnes Herbst, Clarice Innis, Denise Severson, Mary Cantor, Gail Alonzo, Lucy Still and daughter, Margaret, Carol Temple. Also the bride-elect's mother, Ann Reed of Hollywood, and the bridegroom-to-be's mother, Maxine (Mrs. John) Davies.

"MARVELOUS TIME!" That's what Dorothy Munn-holland said on return from month-long trip to France. She went to visit son and daughter-in-law, Kim and Ann Munn-holland, and their young son, Chris.

Kim, a professor of humanities at U. of Minnesota and a specialist on modern French history, is spending a year in Paris on a grant and writing a textbook on French history. They'll be in Paris until July when year will be up and book finished.

They all spent Christmas and the New Year at Megeve in the French Alps, which was great, visited in Geneva, Switzerland, before returning to Paris.

Originally, Dorothy had planned to fly home on a SAS flight but changed her mind and returned home Pan Am. If she had come back on SAS it would most likely have been on the plane that crashed off LA International.

ENTERTAINING at the famed, exclusive Henri Charpentier Restaurant, Redondo Beach, Thursday evening were Don and Sandy Gill. The late Chef Charpentier became renowned for his invention of crepes suzette which he first made and served to royalty while still in Europe.

The restaurant, now operated by two women whom Charpentier taught, is for private parties only and no more than 16 guests will be served on any given evening.

Don and Sandy made reservations last May — were fortunate to get in this soon and managed early only because of a cancellation.

Food is fabulous and dinner is served in a variety of courses over a period of four hours. It begins with a fruit dish goes on to lobster Victoria salad, spinach soup (out of this world), chateau briand steak with potatoes duchess, green salad and ends with crepes suzette. Guests may have as many crepes as they wish. The record, the Gills were told, ever eaten by an individual was 13.

A few of the guests eating like kings were Jim and Marilyn Thurmond, Kenny and Bev Wing Jr. and Bob and Karen Dumm.

WHILE Becky (Mrs. Paul) Sexson was here from Scottsdale, Ariz., to visit parents, Don and "Dud" Greer, she and close friends Diane (Mrs.

Harry) Hastain and Pal (Mrs. John) Weber had lunch at Ports O'Call.

To make day smashing success, they were there during filming of a TV commercial by members of "Laugh-In" cast including Artie Johnson, who does the "very interesting" German character, Judy Carne, the sock-it-to-me gal, the Goldiggers and Kent Smith of "Peyton Place."

In between takes they talked to the actors and were told it would take all day to do and they'd be lucky to wind up with a three minute sequence.

HAIR BRUSHING MAKES A GIRL FEEL GOOD
Carol Ann Burke pampers Lorra Gentle

She's special: here's why

In three years of gentle, loving guidance, Carol Ann Burke has given a mute, helpless child the help needed to speak, walk and attend school.

For her inspirational, patient work, the 21-year-old junior at California State College, Long Beach, was named "Woman of the Year" by the Long Beach Realtor Wives Club. Mrs. Clyde Brown presided at the annual meeting.

Her award was presented this week aboard the Princess Louise Restaurant by Mrs. Virginia C. Bohan, chairman of the award selection committee.

Carol is majoring in physical therapy and hopes to work with physically and mentally handicapped children when she is graduated.

She already has a headstart on her goal. Three years ago, when volunteering at the Intercommunity Exceptional Children's Home, she met Lorra Gentle, a nine-year-old girl who could neither speak nor walk.

"I FEEL THAT every child has a right to reach his or her maximum potential," Carol reflects, "and I felt a lot could be done for Lorra."

She received help for her little charge from the college's speech and hearing clinic.

A welcome gift for getting Lorra to and from the therapy was a wheel chair provided by the Long Beach-Lakewood Chapter, March of Dimes.

Twice a week for the past three years Carol has taken Lorra to the college clinic. In addition, she has provided her with clothing and during the summer months takes her regularly to Cerritos Community Pool for the Handicapped to provide her with water exercises.

Another challenge was met when Carol asked friends for contributions to buy new leg braces for her patient. Lorra, absorbing the love and hopes of her instructor, met the challenge and was immediately able to walk with assistance.

LAST FALL SHE was admitted to Tucker school where she is now receiving physical and occupational therapy. This month she began attending classes at Tucker.

The daughter of Mrs. Margaret Burke, 4741 Sunfield Ave., Carol now spends summer vacations working at the Intercommunity Exceptional Children's Home. Although still single, her enthusiasm and energy have led her to be a captain for the annual March of Dimes Mothers' March.

Engineers Wives set bridge fete orchestra weren't together. IT was a full minute before I could bring them back. I turned to jelly. It was frantic. I knew what action, there is fanfare and finally — the machine produces an insignificant egg.

AGAIN the machine begins its animation, but this time, from the background, a huge flower appears on stage, then, holding it, a poncho-and-bead clad flower girl. The machine violently rejects his flower — all except one girl who accepts it. They sing a love duet as she discards her machine trappings and he steps free of the poncho. Beneath their exteriors, each has the same markings. (Bill Carson dances the flower child, Jan Arbogast, the girl.)

"When they are free of their artificial roles, the discover how alike people are; each feels human compassion," Ahrold explained.

The machine senses the threat this implies and attacks the flower, but the flower clogs the machine which collapses with a terrible crash. In the end, it gradually reassembles itself, returns to its straining as the boy and girl go off together.

"THE POINT is," said the composer, "That love and confidence transcend machines. Love is the humanizing element. So many people spend their time in mindless activity, searching for shadow goals. It is silly, impossible and backwards to work for success.

"You must do your best. If success comes, that is frosting on the cake!"

Since Ahrold always has half-a-dozen projects in the fire at once, he never really catches up with Frank Ahrold days. In March, he'll be off on an African safari, will visit Ruger who now teaches at Roberts University in Istanbul, and will go to Europe where pianist Joanna Hodges of Long Beach has premiered his compositions during her concert tours.

"This is going to be a year full of good days," he said. "I can feel it!" Ruger was going through out there in the audience."

ALL CRISES ARENT at premieres, either. Ahrold remembers the time he was conducting Long Beach Civic Chorus in the venerable "Hallelujah Chorus." The mighty, stirring music ends with two resounding Hallelujahs, then there is a pause before the final HALLELUJAH!

"Just after the second Hallelujah my red cummerbund slipped and fell to the floor around my feet. The whole chorus saw it happen and stared transfixed. I thought they never would get that final HALLELUJAH out."

Ahrold's new ballet is a delightful spoof of The Establishment which pokes fun at extremes. It begins with people who behave like machines. Mechanical noises build to a terrific climax, the machine goes into violent

Women at the center of things

By ELISE EMERY

The big coffee pot will be steaming and fragrant. The welcome will be warm and friendly.

The place will be Room 423 in the new classroom wing in the northwest section of Long Beach City College's Business and Technology Campus between Walnut and May Streets. The time is next Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.

The occasion? The first open house for a new Continuing Education Center for Women.

Opening of the center is idea-become-reality for Beverly O'Neill, Women's Advisor at LBCC.

"I believe in education for women of all ages," she said firmly. Her golden red hair and green eyes hint of her determination, and her radiant smile makes anything seem possible.

Mrs. O'Neill, who pioneered the College Program for Mothers and a College and Career Opportunities for Women class at LBCC, and has conducted forums on "Women: The Changing Image," believes a vast number of women still are unreachable — women who want to further their education whether for personal, vocational or educational reasons.

"THERE'S A 'silent cry' going out from women," she explained in her office on the LBCC Lakewood campus. "But many women who have been away from school hesitate to go back. They think they won't fit in. They need encouragement, a way to get their feet wet."

With this in mind, Mrs. O'Neill gathered an advisory committee from the community, including Mrs. June Roper, manager of the Long Beach office of California State Employment Service; Mrs. Rosella Reinertson, division chairman of home economics at LBCC; Mrs. Drucilla Grenier from the education committee of the Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. LaVerne Spencer, president of the Long Beach Council of PTA.

THEN MRS. O'NEILL prepared a list of women who have taken her Career Opportunities class. These are special people — whose understanding and ability make them especially fitted to serve as counselors for women who want to come back to school. From the list, she hoped to find five volunteers.

The first five she asked

LBCC plots new course for women to continue education said yes — enthusiastically, yes!

And so next Sunday Harriet Mudd, Doris Parenteau, Claudia Kubecka, Lois Evans and Terry Ardizzone, with Mrs. O'Neill and Audre Martin, project director, will be ready to greet open house visitors. Thereafter, at least one of them will be at the center to give counseling assistance.

A MODERN cookbook — in 1871 — carried this advice to women from its author, Marion Harland: "I take it for granted that you are too intelligent to share in the vulgar prejudice against labor-saving machines. A raisin-seeder costs a trifle in comparison with the time and patience required to stone the fruit in the old way."

A good egg-beater — the Dover, for instance — is a treasure. So with farina-kettles, syllabub churns, apple-corers, potato-peelers and slicers, clothes wringers and sprinklers, and the like.

The Continuing Education Center for Women is based on the belief that women are too intelligent to pass up opportunities to live richer lives.

At the center, they may complete requirements for a two-year associate in arts degree, train for a vocation, study areas of special interest, take refresher courses, find new direction through testing and counseling, take transfer courses that will lead to a bachelor of arts degree.

COURSES will be held at the center Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Women may choose classes that fit the hours they can attend, or they may elect to take any course offered at LBCC.

Or they may, if they wish, just confer with advisors at the center. There's no obligation to enroll in college courses.

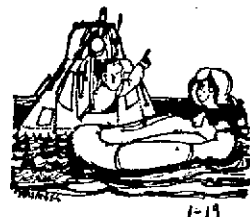

"We want to make available in one place information about education and jobs, to offer a total range of opportunities."

"All a woman needs to do is pick up the phone, call the LBCC Business and Technology Campus and ask for the Women's Center," said Mrs. O'Neill.

"And we hope that many women of all ages will drop in to see us and share a cup of coffee next Sunday at open house!"

By the way, even after the center is operating at full tilt, that big coffee pot will keep steaming with fragrant brew.

"It's a friendly thing," smiled Mrs. O'Neill.

AT WIT'S END

'We interrupt this moon orbit ...'

By ERMA BOMBECK

If Joe Namath wants to shave off his beard for a five-figure sum or Zsa Zsa wants to tell the world about her broken-down transmission, that's all right, but happily the Apollo 8 astronauts are not for sale. The beauty of these three heroes is that they have avoided commercialism.

Just imagine what you would see on your TV screen if NASA put its heroes up for grabs?

SCENE: At a launch site of Apollo 8, an hysterical woman runs across the field ignoring the shouts of security guards. She scales the side of the spaceship, shinies over to a window and shouts, "Frank Borman! You left your family defenseless! Lovell and Anders register disgust as they order him to leave the capsule. The two remaining astronauts blast off while Frank stands at attention with a can of deodorant over his heart.

SCENE: A recovery capsule bouncing around the Pacific. As frogmen wrestle with the hatch, an astronaut pops his head through the opening and grins, "I came back," and disappears into a helicopter. Next, Borman appears and smiles, "I came back" and follows Lovell. Finally Anders appears, "And I came back." At that moment a frogman takes off his helmet. It is Raquel Welch in disguise. "And I'm glad he did," she coos.

SCENE: Apollo 8 and a Russian spacecraft are shown racing toward the moon. Suddenly the Russian spaceship stops dead while Apollo 8 crashes through a paper hoop and continues. Later, on the moon, an astronaut announces clearly, "Folks, Platformate does make a difference."

SCENE: Inside Apollo 8 the astronauts are preparing to eat. Borman speaks, "Jim, I hate to tell you but your pizza had hard crust." Jim stops eating. "You certainly are blunt, Frank." Frank reaches inside his jump suit and sails a box of pizza over to Frank. "Next time, try this."

"Does NASA know you pad your suit with pizza mix, Frank?"

Later, it is the same scene as Frank speaks. "Jim, your pizza is delicious. Now could we talk about your breath?"

Jim replies, "How would you like a puncture in your pressurized mouth?"

SCENE: Anders is positioning his camera as Lovell goes by. "Are you sure there's film in this camera? Let me check it!" They grapple for the camera, as it falls and the film begins to float, exposed all over the capsule. "Would you get me a glass of water and a capsule?" asks Anders.

"Oh, do you have a headache?"

"I have an Excedrin headache," says Anders.

At this moment, something is safe from commercialism. So for the moment, eat your hearts out Katy Winters and Mrs. Olsen!

ORT to form L.B. chapter

Dr. and Mrs. Harold Stein will open their home at 63 Rivo Alto Canal for a luncheon program at 11 a.m. Thursday to organize a Long Beach Chapter of ORT, Organization for Rehabilitation through Training.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. Allan Carter, past president of Southern California Women's American ORT. The prize-winning film, "The Mellah," also will be shown.

ORT is the world's largest non-governmental training agency. It operates more than 600 vocational and technical training units in 22 nations for refugees and immigrants.

Gannons take trip to Hawaii

MRS. JAMES GANNON

Nuptial vows were exchanged Saturday in St. Barbara's Catholic Church between Sharon Frances Jameson and James Porter Gannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Gannon of Los Alamitos.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Jameson of Westminster wore an A-line peau de soie gown with an overlay of chantilly lace and chapel train.

In the bride's entourage were Mrs. William Golyer, matron of honor, Katherine Curiale and Janice MacIntosh. Gwendolyn Sue Bennetts was flower girl.

William T. Golyer was bestman. Ushering guests were Robert Keeling and John B. Jameson Jr. Theodore E. and Clifford M. Bennetts were ring bearers.

A reception honoring the couple was held at Plumbers and Steamfitters Union Hall in Santa Ana. Following a wedding trip to Hawaii the couple will make their first home in Long Beach.

LBMA's 'Microcosm '69' is diverse' challenging

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

"Microcosm '69" at the Long Beach Museum of Art provides an enormous number of impressions, challenges and ideas. The work looks strange and different and will require a number of visits.

Arthur Secunda selected the 80 works by 23 Southern California artists. The term "microcosm" implies that one drop of water will exhibit the same characteristics as a whole bowlful or ocean. I would not quarrel with this premise in regard to this show.

Southern California seems, philosophically and politically at least, to be a bellweather for the directions the rest of America will take, and America is surely the major pace-setter for the rest of the world.

Secunda, in his brilliant introduction to the show's catalogue, states: "I feel strongly that the day of significant regional identity in art vanished the moment the first TV dial was clicked on."

Let's take that thought a step further and say that if rapid and multiple communication is a significant factor in today's art, surely our area is over-endowed.

FLEXIBILITY is a marked and shared quality among these artists. For example, Arnold Mesches, long a strong draughtsman of the human person, has developed in his "Marchers" an abstraction in flat planes of high color harmonies. This series, diametrically opposed in philosophical approach as well as visual characteristics to his earlier work, is an exciting and positive way to reflect on a significant phenomenon of our day.

Lorser Feitelson, while retaining the classic elements of his style, reinforces their universality by stating them in the "turned-on" saturated colors of today as opposed to the cooler, "prettier" hues of previous years. Leonard Edmondson, distinguished and widely-recognized as a graphic artist, has risked all with the presentation here of two small bronze sculptures based on cylindrical forms and three canvases. The latter combine, on the same surface, hardedge geometric shapes and dimensional organic ones (like gaudy worms) with provocative effect.

EMERSON WOELFER'S canvases are enigmatic; immaculate in their ground painting, they bear finger smears and handprints in a random disposition. Are these the flut-terings of the individual still gasping in his programmed and polluted environment?

Noah Purifoy emerged from the Watts riots as an artist of assemblage of the wrecked, melting materials which resulted from the burning. His several works in this show assemble groups of objects, without slickness, to convey new meanings. His "Six Birds" flying over a barred black window is the least dense and complex.

Space prevents even fleeting treatment of the other 18 artists, each of whom has made an outstanding contribution to this cross-section of our time and place. They are: Kalman Aron, John Baldessari, Tony Berland, Hans Burkhardt, Tony Delap, William Dole, Max Finkelstein, Robert Fremont, Tom Fricano, Ynez Johnson, John Lees, Aage Pedersen, Reginald Pollack, Arnold Schiffrin, Jan Stussy, Kim Stussy, Robert Thomas and Gordon Wagner.

The show continues until Feb. 9 which is hardly time enough to absorb all its riches.

ACRYLIC ON CANVAS, 'THE MARCHERS' BY ARNOLD MESCHES

Visions of Heaven and Hell

By ELISE EMERY Arts Editor

He was born in Loten, Norway, in 1863 — when the United States was in the throes of the Civil War — and he died in 1944, while nations were still afire with World War II. All of his 80 years, Edvard Munch was haunted by the theme of death.

Two of his greatest works, "The Death Chamber" and "The Sick Child" are poignant cries of grief at the death of his sister from tuberculosis. Then came a greater tragedy — the death of his mother when he was only 5.

"The black angels of disease and insanity stood guard at my cradle — I always felt that I was treated unjustly, motherless, sick and threatened with punishment."

At his death, the municipality of Oslo received his bequest of 1,000 paintings, 15,400 prints, 4,500 drawings and watercolors, 6 sculptures.

An exhibition of 74 of Munch's graphic works, largest number ever to be shown in this country, will be on view from Jan. 29 through March 9 at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

Munch described his art as "simplifying, eliminating, leaving one burning, powerful symbol in the final print."

He said, "I paint not what I see but what I saw — the camera cannot compete with painting since it cannot be used in Heaven or Hell."

Universal terror and loneliness are in his prints — "The Kiss," "Anxiety," "Jealousy," "The Cry." He treats of love and death — themes of his contemporaries — Wagner in music, Nietzsche in philosophy, Mallarme and Baudelaire in poetry, Strindberg and Ibsen in drama.

Strindberg wrote of the artist's "Evening on the Beach": "As the sun sets, so falls the night, and twilight transforms mortals into specters and cadavers as they return home to dress in the shrouds of bed and abandon themselves to sleep. This seeming death reconstitutes life, this faculty to suffer originated in Heaven or Hell."

'THE DEATH CHAMBER' (1896) BY EDVARD MUNCH

Between 1889 and 1908, the Scandinavian rebel divided his time between Berlin and Paris. After a nervous breakdown in 1908, Munch moved to Denmark, then to an estate near Oslo. His great mural for the University of Oslo was unveiled in 1916. In 1934, during the Nazi regime, 82 of his works in public collections in Germany were branded degenerate and confiscated for public auction in Switzerland.

But Munch had had a tremendous influence on German painting and he was one of the great fore-runners of the Expressionist movement in Germany.

Wednesday, Dr. Peter Selz, director of the University Art Museum at UC, Berkeley, will lecture on Munch at 8:30 p.m. in the Bing Theater of the museum. Curator of the department of painting and sculpture exhibitions from 1958 to 1965 at the Museum of Modern Art, Dr. Selz is author of "German Expressionist Painting" and other publications. Lecture tickets are $2.20 for the general public; $1.10 for museum members; 55 cents for students.

THURSDAY at 8 p.m., Dr. and Mrs. Curtis Grove will open their home to show their pre-Columbian art collection. The evening is being sponsored by Downey Museum of Art as part of its Art a la Carte series. Tickets are $2 each. For further details, call the museum which is located at 10419 S. Rives Ave., Downey.

Pat Lowe, Bev Schreiber, Betty Randolph and Margo Hoffer are in charge of arrangements for another event which will benefit the museum's Art Exhibit Calendar.

This will be a "Wild, Wild West Ball" Saturday, Feb. 1, at Los Amigos country club, 7295 Quill Drive, Downey. Social hour will start at 7 p.m., dinner will be served at 8 o'clock and Don Peterson's orchestra will play for dancing. There will be door and costume prizes.

TO COMMEMORATE the 30th anniversary of the artist's death, Pasadena Art Museum has assembled 71 oils, 34 watercolors, pastels and drawings, 40 prints, and 2 sculptures by Ernst Ludwig Kirchner.

Recognized as spiritual leader of Die Brucke (The Bridge), an avant-garde association of artists which he helped organize in Dresden in 1905, Kirchner drew to the anti-establishment group such artists as Emil Nolde, Max Pechstein, Erich Heckel, Karl Schmidt-Rottluff and Otto Mueller. Their creed was, "Everyone belongs to us who portrays his creative impulses honestly and directly."

During the Nazi years, more than 600 of Kirchner's works were confiscated.

cated in Germany. Ill and despondent, the artist committed suicide in 1938. The exhibition will remain at the Pasadena Museum, 46 N. Los Robles Ave., through Feb. 23, then will go to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

FOR 10 MORE weeks, Lanny Colin will continue his workshop sessions for Lakewood Artists Guild on Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. in Simon Bolivar Park, Lakewood.

Thursday evening the guild will install new officers at Dutch Village Bowl Dining Room. Guest artist Moselle Townsend will show slides of her work for the program which will begin at 8 p.m.

L.B. Museum Association plans trip to Huntington

The public is invited to join members of Long Beach Museum Association for a bus trip to Huntington Library and Art Gallery in San Marino.

The bus will leave 36th Street and Linden Avenue next Sunday at 11 a.m. and will return about 4 p.m.

Before touring the library and gallery, visitors will go to the Huntington Sheraton Hotel for a hunt breakfast.

Of special interest in the gallery (where the famed Blue Boy and Pink Lady hang), is an exhibit of drawings by Isaac Cruikshank and George Cruikshank, social satirists. Traditionally, library grounds are at their best in January and February with camellias in bloom.

Price for the trip, including transportation and breakfast, is $5.25. Reservations may be made through Friday with Mrs. Clifford Millsbaugh, 4040 Pine Ave.

Stanford Players

The Stanford Chamber Players will make their first Southern California appearance for South Bay Chamber Music Society Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in El Camino College Auditorium, Torrance. Tickets will be on sale at the door.

NOT MANY ARE IN THEIR EXCLUSIVE SET

... Jerry and Betty Vaughn, among 12 in Long Beach who hold United States Power Squadron's rating of navigator, study charts, work with parallel rule, dividers and sextant. Could find their way any place on the seven seas.

First rate ideas for first mates from U.S. Power Squadron

Vaughn. She is only woman in history of squadron to have taken all courses through navigator. She studied with husband, Jerry, over a span of about seven years and they are in an exclusive set of 12 here who hold the coveted "N" rating. In the entire nation there are few women who can match Betty in completion of all standard ratings.

VALUE OF THIS effort? Betty said watching and listening to Apollo 8 shot made her think how little she really knows but the understanding she DOES have made complex astronaut mission more meaningful. Although she comprehends the complexities of the universe much better through her studies, she pointed out that her understanding is a dot in comparison to space scientists.

"Personal problems shrink when you think in terms of the galaxies. It's better to look far out and not too inward."

Other sea-wise sea lassies are Rae

(Mrs. Stan) Bean who has taken all classes through junior navigator. Although she was unable to take final exams (therefore does not claim JN) she has the know-how.

Ruby (Mrs. Bill) Kandler, another who took engine maintenance, says she has never tried to fix a motor on their 40-foot cruiser. What she learned has been most helpful to her with her car. A motor is a motor and when her car acts up now she knows what's wrong.

SHE DOESN'T necessarily try to fix it (grease, you know) but she can be very explicit with mechanics. For a woman that's peace of mind.

A few other enthusiastic mariners who rate honors are Jerry (Mrs. Jewett) Pattee, who went through AP. She piloted a log race right after birth of youngest child — and won it. Also holding AP certificates are Maryanne (Mrs. Ralph) Clark and Vera (Mrs. Sam) Scortino. Both figured keeping up with husbands in classrooms has meant happier hours afloat.

Mountain trip for just weds

During an evening ceremony Saturday in First Baptist Church Marsha Fricks became the bride of Larry Roth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Roth of Norwalk.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Fricks, 1921 Snowden Ave., wore an overgown of chantilly lace revealing an A-line innergown of silk organza.

Kathy Hattman was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Terry and Cheryl Rodriguez.

James Lane was best man. The bride's father, James Fricks, and Larry Canfield ushered guests.

A reception for the newlyweds was held at the church after the ceremony. After a honeymoon trip to Lake Arrowhead, the couple will reside in Garden Grove.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN

Suicide attempts by youth must be taken seriously

By ARNOLD ARNOLD

In 1966 nearly 900 boys and girls in the U.S., between the ages of 10 and 19, committed suicide. Another 1,245 young men and women, 20-24 years old, took their own lives. Suicide ranks third as a cause of death among the young — and the trend is towards an increase in the suicide rate among youths.

Dr. Edwin Shneidman, Chief of the Center of Studies for Suicide Prevention of HEW's National Institute of Mental Health, estimates that for every suicide, there are eight to 10 unsuccessful attempts. And this figure may be much larger. Many are never reported. Suicide among the young can have many causes. But while a parent cannot always recognize the underlying trouble, he can become aware of some of the more obvious symptoms. Threats of suicide and unsuccessful attempts must be taken seriously.

Signs of trouble that could, though need not, lead to a suicide attempt are acute loneliness, lack of friends, sudden boy or girl friend difficulties, social isolation, or any marked change in the child's or youth's behavior.

Some children who are pushed too hard at home or in school turn to suicide as a way of calling attention to their difficulties. Others who feel themselves a burden and in the way may see no other way out of their real or imagined predicaments.

When the consequences of failure or an unfortunate mis-step are exaggerated, or redemption is represented as beyond reach, some children are tempted to see suicide as the only way out.

EACH CHILD or adult has his own psychic breaking point. What most of us can cope with quite easily will drive others up the wall. You should seek help from a family physician, psychotherapist, or social agency at once, if your child shows any signs of considering suicide or flirts with self-destruction. When ignored, the overt symptoms may recede, but the underlying causes will still be present. Immediate steps must be taken to help such a child. Though the crisis is usually temporary, only professional help can show such a child the road to reality.

If you want or need additional and personal help or information connected with this or any other mental health problem, write to Arnold Arnold-Guidance, c/o Independent, Press-Telegram, but be sure to include your name and address. By special arrangement with the National Institute of Mental Health, your problem or that of your child will be individually answered, without charge, by an expert belonging to this authoritative branch of the U.S. government.

Parents, youth

subject of new column

"Parents and Children," a column written with a practical approach to help rear healthy, adjusted, intelligent children, will appear Wednesdays and Fridays in the Independent, Press-Telegram.

Child development specialist Arnold Arnold is author of the column which covers a broad spectrum of parent-child relationships from toy selection to classroom adjustment.

Arnold Arnold is a married father-of-two. He was educated at London University, St. Martin's School of Design, Pratt Institute and New York University.

He is the author of five books including "How to Play with Your Child," and is working on a travel guide for parents and children and a book explaining rules and laws to children.

THE COLUMNIST also is president of a design company which produces play, teaching and learning materials. His exhibit of play materials in respect to the home culture has been shown in New York's Museum of Modern Art and will become a traveling display for 30 museums.

"Parents and Children" reflects the author's experiences as a father, his contacts with educators researching new teaching techniques and his findings from testing materials he designs for the school and home.

Appearing today is a sample of the column to begin Wednesday.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR TO SPEAK

'Site to build a dream on' theme of camp fire meet

"Site to Build a Dream On" will be the theme of the 43rd annual meeting of adult members of Long Beach Council of Camp Fire Girls Wednesday. The session will begin at 6 p.m. in the International Ballroom of Lafayette Hotel.

Dr. Hester Turner, national executive director of Camp Fire Girls, will speak. Former dean of Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Ore., she assumed her present Camp Fire position in 1966 after an outstanding career in counseling, law and education.

Architect Dwight Bennett will present final plans for development of a new day camp site at Carson Street and Los Coyotes Diagonal.

THE AREA will replace Camp Suanga which was partially destroyed by construction of the Artesia Freeway through North Long Beach. Plans for the new site, leased from the City of Long Beach, include construction of a multi-purpose building with camp lodge facilities, council offices and a service center.

Council president Ronald Dunn will conduct the business session; Ruth Kirkland, chairman of the awards committee, will present national awards for outstanding volunteer service.

After Mrs. George Green reports for the nominating committee, council officers and board members will be elected and installed.

MRS. WILLIAM KERR is heading arrangements for the evening, which will open with "show and tell" exhibits by girls from each district of the council. Dinner will be served at 6:45 p.m. after invocation by Joanne Colman, president of Horizon Club cabinet. Dr. Donald Ashley and Horizon Club member Mary Kerr will share emcee duties during informal entertainment.

Camp Fire Girls is a Unitway agency serving Long Beach, Lakewood, Bellflower, Signal Hill, Artesia, Cerritos, Hawaiian Gardens and Dominguez. Volunteers and interested members of these communities are invited to attend the annual meeting. Advance reservations must be made at Camp Fire Girls Service Center, 2120 Cherry Ave.

Free play for children at library

Scheherazade Players' new production, "Rainbow Gold," will be presented for youngsters Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Children's Room of the Main Library, Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue.

The plot deals with the search of Pierrette and Pierrot for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. This is one of half-a-dozen plays which have been written, directed and performed by a group of Orange County students for children at Long Beach libraries. Don Hayes and Peter Conway are directors.

Because seating is limited, Joan Jordan, children's librarian, asks that children pick up their free tickets in advance at the Main Library. However, youngsters without tickets will be seated if space is available.

DEAR ABBY

Guilty feelings not necessary

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My three children and I drove 150 miles for a visit to my hometown recently. (My husband couldn't go. He was working.)

We stayed with my parents, but I contacted my in-laws so we could make plans to see them, too.

I think my in-laws are unreasonable. Let me explain: I married a widower with two small children. We now have a third child, also.

Since these in-laws cared for the two children of my husband's former marriage until we wed, they figure my husband and I owe them something. Of course, we do. But how much?

They demanded that I drop off the two older children to visit them, and when I left town I could pick them up. They don't care to see me, or my other child.

I flatly refused, saying we would ALL come to see them, but no, they didn't want us. My mother-in-law even refused to talk to me.

I don't know what I have done except to try to give the children a home with a mother and father instead of grandparents. They seem to resent me for this.

Since they didn't want all my children, I refused to let them have the two older ones. Was I wrong?

I invited them to my home anytime to visit the little ones, but they refused. I'd like your views. BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: If you invited your in-laws to visit the children, you have no reason to feel guilty. Your husband should tell his parents that showing such obvious favoritism to his two older children creates problems that he and his family will have to live with, so to please be more reasonable.

DEAR ABBY: Medical science has sure given folks a lot of excuses for their shortcomings. We don't have any more drunks, tyrants, or ill-tempered and unreasonable people anymore. They are all "sick." Same goes for liars.

I know a woman who would rather lie than tell the truth, and do you know what? I am told to have "compassion" for her because she's "sick." So now, lying is a disease, too! I would sure appreciate your comments on this. CICERO

DEAR CICERO: People lie because they feel insecure, inadequate and inferior. It takes a truly healthy-minded courageous person to tell the truth, no matter how "bad" it makes him appear. So since lying is a symptom of a character deficiency, perhaps your friend IS "sick."

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old widow who will soon marry Paul, a very nice 55-year-old widower. Here is my problem: First let me explain that while dating I never wore the rings I got from my deceased husband because I didn't want to inhibit any man who might have an interest in me.

Paul and I didn't have an "official engagement," and certainly nothing was ever mentioned about a ring, but he "surprised" me with a lovely little diamond, and I do mean "little."

Abby, my first diamond is nearly three times the size of this one. (I had intended resetting it to wear after I married.) Now what shall I do? I hate to hurt Paul, but if I wear a diamond, I'd prefer wearing the larger one. PER- PLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: Reset the larger diamond and wear it on your right hand. But wear Paul's ring on your "engagement" finger.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NICE BUT INSULTED": If a "nice" girl is constantly being "insulted" by propositions, she should check her appearance. There is something wrong with her packaging.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

When Dwight D. Eisenhower was president, his farm in Gettysburg, Pa., served as a kind of second White House. When John F. Kennedy wanted to get away, he joined his family at the Hyannisport complex. President Lyndon B. Johnson spent many a weekend at his Texas ranch. And Richard M. Nixon will use Key Biscayne, Fla., as his haven.

PRESIDENTIAL PALMS . . . three-bedroom house which President-elect Nixon has bought for $127,000.

When White House walls close in

By BEN FUNK

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. (UP)—This is a tight little sub-tropic isle where for many years people could come and "get away from it all" just 15 minutes by car from the neo-embazoned heart of Miami.

But now, suddenly, the quiet life is gone — for four years at least. Because one of the men who discovered this easygoing haven from the rat race was Richard M. Nixon.

Since 1951, when he first came here to unwind from the tensions of a tough U.S. Senate race in California, the island has been his favorite hideaway.

And on Jan. 20, when he takes the oath of office as the 37th president of the United States, this idyllic retreat where he sought seclusion so often in the stormy course of an up-and-down political career will become the official "Little White House" of the nation.

Residents of Key Biscayne, a 2,300-acre paradise nestled among thousands of towering coconut palm trees waving in the trade winds, are bursting with pride because Dick Nixon is their neighbor. But they know that the languid life they loved must be sacrificed.

Hordes of sightseers undoubtedly will swarm across the Rickenbacker Causeway from Miami, trying to see the Nixon home or to get a glimpse of him and his family.

Already, there have been complaints about traffic snarls on Crandon Boulevard, the island's main road, which narrows from four to two lanes as it approaches the area of the Nixon home.

"MINUTES after Nixon was declared president-elect after a hot race with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, he was on a plane bound for Key Biscayne. Since then, he has been busily preparing the site of the "Little White House."

He has purchased the home of a wealthy Cuban exile, Manuel Arca Jr., a rambling, pale-blue structure valued at $127,000 which sits 200 feet from the shore of Biscayne Bay. Next door is the home of retiring U.S. Sen. George Smathers, which Nixon has used before and also plans to buy.

Just beyond the Smathers home is that of C. G.

"Bebe" Rebozo, a banker who took Nixon fishing on his first trip to the island and since has become his confident and friend.

A 10-foot-high hedge of hibiscus bushes has been planted as a barrier against sightseers around a compound encompassing the three houses.

As vice president in the Eisenhower administration, Nixon was a familiar figure on the island. He came here in 1960, to heal the wounds of his defeat by President John F. Kennedy, and it was here that Kennedy sought him out for a dramatic postelection meeting.

Here, also, Nixon took refuge when another bitter defeat, in a race for governor of his native California, appeared to have sounded the swan song of his political career. It was here, too, that he mapped out the campaign that carried him to the presidency, and here he came without delay at the moment of his greatest triumph.

LEGEND SAYS Ponce de Leon came ashore in 1513 and named the island Santa Maria. It was a hide-out for Black Caesar and other buccaneers preying on the treasure ships of the Spanish Main. A red brick lighthouse still standing on Cape Florida at the south end of the island was erected in 1825 to foil wreckers who lured ships onto the offshore reefs and stripped them bare.

In 1902, William J. Matheson, New York capitalist and yachtsmen, "discovered" the island, bought a large tract of land, cleared a yacht basin and planted Malay- an coconut trees by the thousands.

Then the Florida land developers, Frank, Elliott and Robert Mackle, built the Key Biscayne Hotel and villas where Nixon stayed on his first visit.

In the island's interior, the Mackles built 1,000 homes which were quickly snapped up by people such as airline pilots, attorneys and junior executives seeking escape from the daily grind. For the first year, they had no telephones. Neighbors communicated with each other via a community bulletin board.

The new residents built a private beach club and marina, formed a volunteer fire department, and became "islanders" living in an entirely different world from that across the causeway. A colony of artists moved in, adding a bit of Greenwich Village flavor to the key.

LACKING proper drainage facilities, the streets still are flooded by every tropic downpour. In 1964, Hurricane Betsy pushed sea water hip deep into many of the homes. But the residents took it in stride as a part of island life.

Bounded on both ends by two of the country's great ocean parks, Cape Florida and Crandon Park, the amount of building that can be done is extremely limited.

Possibly, Key Biscayne may get too crowded in the future even for Nixon. If so, he will be prepared.

He has found another hideaway, the remote Baham Island of Grand Cay, inhabited only by his friend, industrialist Bob Abplanalp. He has been there several times and Abplanalp says, "It's a place where he can really let his hair down."

C. G. "BEBE" Rebozo (right) has become close friend of President-elect Nixon since they went fishing on Nixon's first visit to Key Biscayne.

Alumnae of Mills set lecture series

For the 23rd year Los Angeles alumnae of Mills College will sponsor their "College Away from College" lectures series, beginning Jan. 27 with an address by the college president, Dr. Robert J. Wert.

The lecture series brings outstanding professors from the Oakland campus to speak on a variety of fields and subjects. It is open to the public as well as alumnae and consists of four monthly programs.

Dr. Wert, appearing in the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, will be making his first official visit to Los Angeles since becoming president.

Second lecture will take place Feb. 24 in the Los Angeles home of Mrs. Warner W. Henry when Dr. Robert Anderson, professor of sociology and anthropology, talks on "Social Revolution — the Danish Way."

DR. MARIANNE Cermakian, assistant professor of art will speak on "A Paris Diary" March 24 in the Brentwood home of Mrs. John W. Chapple. The final lecture will be given by Ralph Du Casse, professor of art, who will speak on "A Survey of Drawing Around the World" in the Encino home of Mrs. Avy Lewis Miller.

Co-chairmen of the lecture series this year are Mrs. Joseph Westheimer and Mrs. Julius Nadler.

Smooth Out Wrinkles

Wrinkles are riverbeds of dry cells caused by the plasma colloids (water carriers of the skin) having dried out through harsh weather. You can soon bring healthy and glow of beauty and complexion back and protect your skin from wrinkle dryness. Ask your druggist for oil of Olay and before applying make-up smooth it over the face, neck and hands to lubricate and soften the skin and give it a peaches-and-cream bloom.

JACOBY North has good hand in game

If East had not been dealer North and South would have no trouble getting to six spades. When the hand was played in the 1968 Summer Nationals' International Match Team game, one North-South pair was allowed to get in the first bid.

East backed in with diamonds at his second turn but this delayed diamond call only served to speed South on his way to six. At the other table East chose to open with three diamonds. This didn't bother Bobby Wolf of Dallas who sat South. He doubled.

West looked at his nothing hand and was certain that his opponents could make a slam. He decided to try to upset their apple cart with a three no-trump call. This put things squarely up to Ira Corn of Dallas who sat North. He had a lot of bids at his disposal.

HE COULD double and be reasonably sure that either East or West would run out, he could bid spades or clubs but there was one outstanding bid at his disposal and he made it: He bid four diamonds!

This cue bid did not necessarily show first-round diamond control. All it did was to show that he had a good hand and wanted to be in game or higher.

This didn't solve all of Bobby Wolff's problems. He had a very good take-out double of three diamonds, but could not be sure that his partner held spades with him. Note that Ira did hold spades but did not hold much in hearts.

Bobby was too strong to just bid four spades; his spade suit was too weak to insist on a spade slam. But Bobby had a perfect bid available. He simply jumped to five spades.

After this bid it was easy for Ira to go to the slam.

Clare-Cresey vows
read in ceremony

In a ceremony Saturday in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Patricia Ann Cresey became the bride of David M. Clare.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Cresey, 5802 Oxholm St., and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Clare, 3526 Montair Ave.

The bride was attired in a chantilly lace gown. Cherie Deboe was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindi Lazarus and Shelia Vanderhoes.

Frank Cravey was bestman. Ushering guests were Frank Ochoa Jr. and Dennis Elkins.

A reception honoring the couple followed at the church. Both are graduates of Millikan High School.

MRS. DAVID M. CLARE

TRAVEL BY BOOK

San Francisco grows up on walking tours

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT

Travel Editor

During the Great Depression, before he became a Pulitzer Prize winner, California's own William S. Royan wrote: "If you're alive, you can't be co."

That statement is certain to hold true if you go to the City by the Golden Gate armed with a copy of Curt Gentry's new paperback gem, "THE DOLPHIN GUIDE TO SAN FRANCISCO AND THE BAY AREA" (Dolphin Books, Doubleday & Co., Garden City, N.Y. 11530).

This little book — the greatest 95 cents' worth you ever pulled out of a bookstall — is marvelous because it is not really a guide in the ordinary sense but one which sets up innumerable tours in and around San Francisco and then tells you in well-chosen prose what you are seeing; the particular area's past (what part of San Francisco doesn't have a bittersweet past inhabited by the great and not-so-great?) and how it became what it is today.

When you have finished a tour you have a feeling that the particular area has let its hair down just for you, that you have had the privilege of becoming quite intimate with it.

In and out the tours, most of them taken shank's mare, the sleepy village of Yerba Buena suddenly transforms itself into one of America's great cities. Through them the famous little cable cars clang a worshipful tune, the waterfront becomes alive with windjammers and luxury liners and cussing, sweating stevedores and rough-and-ready sea captains. You meet such unorthodox characters as Emperor Norton, taciturn stage robber Black Bart, dancer Lola Montez, the Big Four, banker A. P. Giannini, fire buff Lillie Hitchcock Coit, and a host of renegades, gamblers, soldiers of fortune, and noble and not-so-noble Chinese who kept coming until their settlement became the largest in the country.

Stroll with Gentry the two blocks of Maiden Lane. "The street," he says, "always a little fresh and impudent, turns unusually bright in Spring when the merchants block off all traffic to hold an annual Daffodil Festival on its thoroughfare." Impudent? Gentry quotes Herbert Asbury from "The Barbary Coast" — "The worst cribs in San Francisco were probably those which lined both sides of Morton Street" (now Maiden Lane). This little street of iniquity was then off limits to police unless compelled to go there to investigate a murder, and your helpful little guide tells you why.

The second part of the book is devoted to day-long tours of the big bridges, Muir Woods and Mount Tamapalais, Sacramento and Sutter's Fort, Mount Diablo, Berkeley and Jack London Square, the Russian River country, Skyline Drive and the Peninsula.

You don't have to go to the bay city to enjoy Gentry's creation. He has a way with words which will simply carry you away from your easy chair and into a shocking affair with the always engaging and often flirtatious hussy called San Francisco.

"HIGHLIGHTS OF PUEBLOLAND" by Louis Thomas Jones (The Naylor Co., P.O. Box 1838, San Antonio, Texas 78206, $4.95).

Here, at last, is an authentic drama of life — past, present and future — in the tramping ground of virtually the last remnant of our vanishing Indians, exactly what you might expect from a man who has spent years wandering "The Land of Turquoise Skies" and studying the way of life, cultural pattern and folklore of such tribes as the Pueblos, Navajos and Hopis.

While "PuebloLand" covers a considerable part of the Great Southwest, it concerns itself principally with the Four Corners area — a 400-mile-long, 300-mile-wide high floor of the Rocky Mountain plateau that extends over parts of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado — a fairyland of natural wonders, ancient Indian villages, squaw herders with their sheep, and an occasional trading post.

Traveling U.S. Hwy. 66 through Flagstaff, Holbrook and Gallup I have often been all but overpowered by that mysterious purple horizon to the north, but somehow never found the time to answer its call. Perhaps soon, armed with this fine book,

I can make that dream come true.

"THE VARIED AIRS OF SPRING" by Ilka Chase (Doubleday & Co., Garden City, N.Y. 11530, $5.95).

Ilka Chase has traveled over a considerable part of the earth's surface and, to her, each trip is like a

Buenos Aires gay, sophisticated with a flopped calendar

Buenos Aires, Argentina — Hanging on by their toes from the under side of the earth, with even the calendar flopped backward, you might imagine people down here wouldn't know which end is up.

Don't you believe it! The 7-million Portenos, as Buenos Aires residents are called, are among the most sophisticated in the world. Their huge, handsome city is a cosmopolitan blend of their own varied European backgrounds.

Here are the tree-lined boulevards, sidewalk cafes and chic boutiques of Paris; the green parks, tea-shops and subways of London; the singing, swinging waterfront nightlife of Napoli, plus skyscrapers and traffic turmoil that are strictly New World.

Still, it is a topsy turvy land, below the earth's midriff. Short sleeves are worn in January, long-johns in July. Even the stars are different. The Southern Cross commands the night sky, the Big Dipper is nowhere, and Orion changes gender. Here he's the Three Marys.

FIRST-TIME visitors must learn to think big. Argentina is almost as long as the United States is wide, with every climate and terrain from dense tropical jungles to snow-capped Andes, from flat, fertile Pampas to windswept Patagonian wastes.

Pan American Airways' new nonstop jet hops between Buenos Aires and Panama unfold a fascinating six and one-half hour bird's eye panorama. The Los Angeles - Panama - Buenos Aires flight collects travelers from Hawaii, the Orient, Miami and New Orleans.

"Lo ultimo" (the most) is an oft-heard phrase. Buenos Aires is the largest Spanish-speaking city in the world, claims the most parks (about 150), the longest street (25-mile Rivadavia and the widest). Avenida 9 de Julio is 450 feet across and its lofty obelisk looms over the city like Paris' Arc de Triumpe.

Spacious plazas boast distinct personalities: Historic Plaza de Mayo has the colonial Cabildo (town hall) and the Presidential palace is where guards wear the Grenadier uniforms of General Jose de San Martin, War of Independence hero; the Congress building, inspired by the domed U.S. capitol, is in Plaza del Congreso with Kilometro Zero the marker from which all Argentine distances are measured, and a full size copy of Rodin's famous statue, The Thinker (nicknamed, The Computer by Portenos).

ADVANCE reservations are a must! Buenos Aires' hotels are limited, but conveniently situated downtown. Air-conditioned rooms are about $12.50 single to $16 double (24 per cent service charge added).

Restaurants are plentiful and varied. The Argentine heart lies close to the stomach, so it is only patriotic and polite to climax dinner with a thick juicy steak. Argentine wines and beer are equally superb.

At a popular ranch-style steak house, bife con lomo with all the usuals, including wine, costs about $5.

See Europe at your own speed.

In your own Volkswagen. It'll save you the aggravation of running to make a train or bus or connecting flight just when you're getting to like the place you're leaving.

You can have a VW waiting for you in more than 40 cities in 15 countries. Provided, of course, you tell us about it first.

We'll arrange everything from purchasing it here to picking it up there. And even tell you how to get it home again.

Any Volkswagen that's waiting for you in our showroom can be waiting for you in Europe, too. Beetle. Fastback. Squareback. Wagon. Even the Campmobile.

Which means you can see Europe at almost any speed.

Zambia wonders lure travelers

LIVINGSTONE, Zambia — When is a museum not a museum, but a life story set in romantic surroundings? The answer is when the museum is devoted to the explorer David Livingstone and set in the Republic of Zambia, deep in the heart of Africa.

Livingstone is rather an upstart as far as towns go because it dates only from 1905. However, the principal sightseeing attraction, outside of the museum, is Victoria Falls whose origins of formation are shrouded in the dawn of history some 150 million years ago. The Zambezi, an international river 1,725 miles long, is the body of water that tumbles over the mile-wide falls.

Livingstone was the first explorer to discover these majestic cataracts on Nov. 16, 1855. He referred to them as "the smoke that thunders" which was taken from the local words "Musi-o-Tunya." Later, Livingstone paid homage to Queen Victoria by naming these falls after her.

INSIDE THE museum in Livingstone there are letters of the explorer and some of the clothing that he wore on his journeys through Africa. Perhaps the most captivating of all of the exhibits are his water colors of the falls.

But there is more than Livingstone memorabilia to be seen here. On Saturdays and Sundays the Makishi dancers perform tribal dances in traditional costumes and exotic masks, the results of skillful and painstaking labor. The costumes are of wild sisal in crocheted fashion and cover the body from foot to neck. The masks are of wood or bark cloth. The best known character in the dance is that of Myalindele in the figure of a young woman who climaxes her dance with a series of acrobatics performed at the top of tall poles.

Nearby the museum is a model village — an open air museum — that shows something of the making of local handicrafts.

The days of early civilization are depicted in mural paintings found in the Livingstone museum and early examples of actual rock paintings to be found in this part of Africa are also on display.

A new Inter-Continental hotel called "Musi-o-Tunya" overlooks the falls, making the area complete with modern comfort and some of the most fascinating history in the world.

Women travelers advised: pack light

When a woman is traveling, she wants to look her best. Yet, she does not want to expend all her funds on porters, or all her fun-time energy on lugging around heavy suitcases.

To help save the traveling woman's money and energy, the American Society of Travel Agents (ASTA), the oldest and largest trade association for American and Canadian travel agents, offers the following guidelines for traveling in style, and with convenience.

First and foremost, don't overpack. It is not necessary to take every item of clothing you own on your vacation. If you will be staying only in one place, or traveling with a tour, you won't want to be seen in the same dress every day, but, if you will be traveling alone to several cities, it really won't matter how many outfits you take along as long as laundry facilities will be available.

Either way, you will get more mileage out of your wardrobe if you plan it so you can mix and match. A basic solid color sheath or A-line dress is a must. Take sweaters or jackets, scarves or jewelry, and you can make that one dress do the work of three. If the weather permits, wear a suit while in transport. You can then use the jacket with one basic dress, and wear the skirt and blouse as a separate outfit. You can also bring along a different blouse or sweater to wear with the skirt.

TAKE SEVERAL comfortable, easy-to-care for dresses that you can wear for sightseeing, shopping or dining. If you expect to be in a resort, take a bathing suit or two (in Europe, one-piece suits are hardly ever worn), and some slacks or short shorts or culottes (again in Europe, bermuda shorts are never seen) along with the necessary tops. Take along a few dressy dresses, and, for that special occasion, a cocktail dress.

If you really prefer one brand or one style of underwear or hosiery, take a sufficient amount with you. You will probably not be able to find the same styles at your destination.

For footwear, bring sandals and the square-toed, thick-heeled shoes popular now. Leave your sneakers, loafers and oxfords at home unless you want everyone to know that you are an American tourist.

Don't forget a nightgown and a modest robe in case you are staying at a place where you share a bath. Also bring both slippers, preferably the soft, foldable kind, and shower slippers, and a shower cap.

During the summer traveling, some sweaters and a raincoat should be enough outer wear, but take a heavy wool coat if you are traveling outside of the tropical zone during any other time of the year.

HAIR EQUIPMENT cosmetics, and toiletries should all be packed in plastic bags or their own separate cases. It is also advisable to put a fold-up umbrella in your suitcase. A travel iron is also a good idea, but make sure that you bring a converter for this as for any electrical hair equipment.

One helpful packing tip: use the plastic bags that come from your dry cleaners rather than tissue paper for folding your clothes. They last longer, don't wrinkle as easily and provide natural air pockets that keep your clothes more wrinkle-free.

Different locations and different seasons will, of course, require the addition or subtraction of some items. For specifics, see your travel agent. He knows how you should dress wherever you are going. And he can help you get there and find a place to stay, eat or just have fun while you are there.

Ft. Tejon restored by state

FT. TEJON, Calif. — High up in the Tehachapi Mountains they're restoring the site of the U.S. Cavalry's noble experiment — mounting hardriding troopers on camels.

Ft. Tejon was founded in 1854, headquarters of the First Dragoons. Ranging as far as Death Valley and Salt Lake City, the cavalrymen guarded gold miners, protected Indians on a reservation in the San Joaquin Valley, and cut off rustlers driving cattle over a gap in the Tehachapis.

The camel experiment was started in 1857, under the then secretary of war, Jefferson Davis. The humped steeds ranged far and carried supplies. There was no complaint about them — unless from the cavalrymen riders — but the Civil War ended the experiment and the camels were shipped off to Los Angeles.

The fort is located in Grapevine Canyon just off the Ridge Route, the road engineering marvel connecting Los Angeles with Bakersfield and the rich oil and agricultural valley of the San Joaquin.

The old barracks building has been rebuilt of adobe brick from the clay at the site. The officers' quarters are furnished with the old ladderback chairs and cooking utensils of more than a century ago. The orderlies' quarters stand just as built, even to the rough hewn log floor.

The restoration is carried on by the state as a California Historical Monument.

child's gambol in a park. But, make no mistake about it: she has her eyes and ears open from the time she takes off until she returns; she has a reporter's inquisitiveness and she has a broad perspective; and she has that rare ability to beguile her readers with an occasional sparkling anecdote. All of which makes her books not only the real thing factually but also quite easy to read.

In this, her thirteenth book, she describes in her usual airy style a trip she took with her husband to Africa, Italy, Greece, Spain and the Mediterranean islands of Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica and Elba. Not the least exciting of her adventures are amusing confrontations with wild animals on the great game preserves of East Africa.

People who like to travel, particularly those who themselves have covered Miss Chase's itinerary, will like her latest effort.

A PRETTY GIRL with a Kodak is both a subject and a shutterbug in Boca Raton, Fla.

Bellflower firm offers club tours

Bellflower Travel Service is now representing "Club Universe", which sponsors unusual tours to Europe, the Orient and the Mediterranean at reduced club rates.

The club's 1969 tours include five unusual itineraries to carry out its motto, "The Universe Is Our Playground", according to August Sonnsma, Bellflower Travel Service owner, who handles Club Universe memberships and tour bookings.

Among the two dozen tours to be offered this spring and summer are:

A 16-day Malaga tour to Spain's Costa del Sol provides two weeks at a deluxe hotel at this Andalusian resort, with side trips to Seville, Granada and Algeiras, as well as Tangier and other North African cities.

The Israel "22" tour includes round-trip jet from Los Angeles, one night in Paris and 19 in Israel in first-class accommodations and breakfast each day.

The Golden Holiday Cruise starts with jet flight to Spain to join a two-week luxury cruise from Malaga to Tangiers, Lisbon, LaCorunia, St. Malo, Isle of Jersey, Bourne-mouth, Dover, Astend, Amsterdam, Lubeck and Copenhagen, with many sidetrips ashore included.

The traveler then has a choice of a three-week Scandinavian tour starting June 5 of the principal cities and sights of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, or a three-week tour of the Alps in Germany, Austria, Italy and Switzerland plus a 3-day Rhine cruise.

"The Club Universe program offers excellent tours at surprising economy," stated Sonnsma, who has operated Bellflower Travel Service for 12 years.

BELGIUM'S ANCIENT CITY OF CANALS

Foot-and-boat tour of Bruges

By GORDON QUARNSTROM

BRUGES, Belgium — Saturday morning is a good time to launch your visit to this charming small city, "The Venice of the North," for that is market day and the Great Square in front of the town hall is filled with stalls dispensing a colorful array of flowers, vegetables, lace, cloth, and general merchandise. Local residents and those from nearby villages are on hand, and the city assumes a gay and festive air.

Arrive before noon, however, for the shopping halts abruptly. And make a reservation for a second floor table window at the adjacent Van den Berge Restaurant to watch the dismantling process. It offers a fascinating glimpse into market life, since strong women join the men in taking down the stalls and efficiently loading them and wares into trucks and trailers for another market at another time.

Our meal at the Van den Berge made the event a delight. The restaurant surely deserves a recommendation for its rich and tasty soup, an appetizer of zesty Ardennes ham, tender steak and browned potatoes, crisp rolls and a mound of fresh butter, delicate pastry, small bottle of wine, and coffee. I ate and ate. And the price was only 125 Belgium francs, or $2.50 U.S.I

BECAUSE Bruges (pop. 52,000) is compact and has so many canals, it is best seen by foot and boat. The streets are winding, so it is wise to obtain a walking guide. One with a good command of English may be hired two hours for $5, half day for $7, a full day for $10. The tourist office on the Great Square is quick to suggest several interesting walking tours. Because so many visitors want a guide, at least for a portion of the visit, the office suggests you reserve one ahead. This can be done by letter to the Koninklijke Gidsenbond van Brugge, A. Rodenbachstraat 9, Bruges.

Our guide, a bank clerk on weekdays, began with a short history of the city, which dates back to 892 and which in the 13th century was the greatest market of Western Europe.

After admiring the Gothic town hall, dating from the 14th century, we toured the majestic Belfry, built about 1240. The view of Bruges from the Belfry is excellent and is particularly beautiful during summer evenings when monuments and canals are floodlighted.

ARCHEOLOGISTS have said that in Bruges, as nowhere else, a complete survey of building styles throughout the centuries can be made. Although owing to the decline of medieval trade, many monuments have fallen into ruins, and others were destroyed in religious disturbances of the 16th century, Bruges has preserved from each period some characteristic buildings. From the Belfry I decided on several that should be visited.

One is the historic 13th century Reguinage of Sainte Elisabeth. Beguines were originally young girls who earned their living by washing and preparing wool for the weavers. The institution was so successful that in medieval times it accepted young girls from all social walks of life. In more recent days the Beguinage has been taken over by Benedictine sisters.

The Gruuthuse Palace was hard to leave. The largest part of this stately house dates from the 15th century. Art treasures of great value are on exhibit, including weapons, furniture, porcelain and paintings.

THE CHURCH of the Hold Blood dates to 1530 and shows the Renaissance influence, but its crypt chapel is from the 11th century. The Relic of the Holy Blood, given to Count Thierry D'Alsace during the Second Crusade in 1149, is in the upper chapel in a sanctuary. The Relic is exhibited on Friday mornings and also during the annual Procession of the Holy Blood in early May.

Death Valley comes alive with winter

DEATH VALLEY, Calif. — While only a few hardy desert enthusiasts would venture into Death Valley in summer, winter turns this once feared "no-man's land" into one of the West's most popular vacation areas.

Of course, the weather is perfect here. There are not many places in the country that can boast of having 360 days of sunshine, with rainfall of only one and one-half inches, but Death Valley can. The daytime temperatures are in the 80s and the desert evenings are cool and clear. Naturally this is during the season now on which doesn't end until the latter part of April. Summer temperatures have been recorded as high as 120 degrees.

There's an aura of the supernatural that hangs over this vast region which, no doubt, inspired such eerie names as Coffin Canyon, Funeral Mountains, Hellgate Pass and Devil's Cornfield.

STRANGE SIGHTS in Death Valley add to its ghostly quality — grotesque geologic formations, craters of extinct volcanoes, and foot-high salt pinnacles.

The bizarre name of Death Valley was given to it by a group of '49ers who were seeking a short cut west to the gold fields. When survivors of this band of travelers finally made it over the wide salt floor of the Valley and up into the Panamint Mountains, they looked back on the tremendous barrier that caused them so much suffering and cried, "Good-bye Death Valley."

Today's modern '49er has refuted this name. He swims in a heated pool, drives a golf cart over the links and sightsees in areas where his forebears feared to go.

NESTLED between the mountains in the center of Death Valley National Monument are Furnace Creek Inn and Ranch, both operated by Fred Harvey, Inc.

The Inn is set apart by palm-lined paths, pools and gardens, and gives a commanding view of the mountains and valley in either direction. Here buffet lunches are served around a swimming pool filled with spring-fed water from an underground river. The water is a warm 80 degrees, insuring comfortable swimming, no matter how cool the air.

The Inn offers luxurious hotel accommodations on the American plan with rates beginning at $36 a day for two. Tennis courts adjoin the Inn. A nine-hole golf course is nearby. Its new additional nine holes, to be ready by mid-season, will bring it up to a

Paris to be full of playthings in February

PARIS — The Eighth International Toy Salon will be held in Paris, with 606 exhibitors, Feb. 2-8. In addition to every imaginable kind of toy made in France and 19 other countries, the exhibit will include hobby equipment, bicycles, scientific and educational kits, musical instruments and beach games.

Last year the show attracted 11,000 buyers from abroad and this year officials know at least 12,000 will attend. Although the show is primarily for professionals, American tourists are assured a welcome. Those who attend will be allowed a 25 percent discount on the French National Railroads as well as some other European rail lines. An admission ticket may be obtained by indicating an interest in toys and by writing to French Trade Shows at 1350 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019.

challenging 18-hole course. Only a mile away is Furnace Creek Ranch, which sits on the Valley floor, 178 feet below sea level. The Ranch has one-to four-room guest cabins and cottages at rates which begin at $16 a day for two. A cafeteria provides moderately priced meals and the Ranch has its own pool. Saddle horses are available at the nearby stables.

A TWO OR three-day mid-week trip from Las Vegas to Death Valley provides an ideal outing. The drive is an easy one via U.S. Hwy. 95 to Lathrop Wells, State 127 to Death Valley Junction and State 190 to Furnace Creek. Rental cars are available in Las Vegas, of course, and travelers have the option of turning your car in at Los Angeles.

As a National Monument, Death Valley embraces nearly two million acres of wild untamed desert, but the area is well patrolled by Park rangers. Food and water are plentiful, and travel is comfortable over some 500 miles of good roads. The Valley itself is about 150 miles long and ranges in width from four to 16 miles. Death Valley is a vast geological museum, offering the sightseer the indescribable experience of tracing the history of the earth from the beginning of time. Sun and solace are there in abundance for those who just wish to relax. Hiking, riding, golf, swimming and tennis await the sports enthusiast.

TO EXPLORE the Valley, plan several excursions making the Inn or Ranch headquarters. One interesting half-day trip includes Dante's View, 5,475 feet above sea level, where the lowest point in Death Valley may be seen — a sheer drop to 282 feet below sea level at Badwater. In the distance, the snow-capped peaks of the High Sierras provide an unforgettable contrast with the desert below.

Another recommended half-day trip includes a visit to Death Valley Scotty's Castle, Ubehebe Crater and the sand dunes. The last named, by the way, are best viewed at either sunrise or sunset.

The more adventurous traveler might consider a day's trip to Golden Canyon on Fred Harvey's famous sure-footed mules, imported from Grand Canyon for the winter season. on the trip are Manly Beacon and Gower Gulch as well, and claims of early-day prospectors.

When night comes to Death Valley, there is a variety of social activities, including dancing, moonlight rides and chuck wagon dinners. For many visitors, however, just relaxing and taking in the beauty of a desert evening is enough.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

English Midlands charm tourists

By STAN DELAPLANE

HATHERSAGE, England — This is a fine village in the English Midlands where the River Derwent flows through the eastern end of Hope Dale. The George is an old coaching inn. Polished brass beer pumps and a blazing coal fire. A room overlooking the garden goes for $6 with a breakfast of Derbyshire ham and eggs included.

I got into this country following Robin Hood. Though it's far from Sherwood Forest, Little John is buried in the churchyard. It's an antique site. The church is Norman with some Saxon remains. Danish Vikings built earth forts on the hill.

Charlotte Bronte wrote part of "Jane Eyre" in the vicarage. The Eyre family is buried in the church under the finest brasses I ever saw. The knightly brass figures are on crypts, and the outlines are sharp.

Here's a place for over night and to make brass rubbings. If you don't know how, get a book called "Monumental Brasses." Probably at Foyle's in London.

"We will have two weeks in England and don't want to spend it all in London..."

ENGLAND is the best of driving countries. Thatched villages and leaded glass window pubs around the next turn in the lane. You must get off those free-est in England, and I thought one of the best.

Next day across wild Dartmoor and Exmoor to The Crown in Exford. So British that when I asked for ice in my drink, I could feel the disapproval of everybody in the place. Wonderful country village on the river Ex.

From here you can get on a main road and you're back in London that evening.

way M-1s and A-2s. Pick roads that start with "B" followed by four numerals.

Now to find the warm pub with rich country soup and watercress fresh from the river. Here's a run of about a leisurely hundred miles a day across the south of England. London to Hawkhurst. You stay at the 300-year-old Tudor Arms. Good food and fine gardens.

Next day, to Christchurch, Hampshire. The Kings Arms is an old (1796) coaching inn on the river Avon. Next to Dartington, Devon and Ye Olde Cott Inn. Excellent food and a good pub bar. This inn is the second old-

I FIGURED car rent with gas runs $9 a day. You can rent with gas. Without gas. With limited or unlimited mileage. But I think it all works out much the same.

A handy book to carry is the "Blue Guide." Buy it in London. Tells you the history of each town. A good guide to places to stay and eat: "Egon Ronay-BMC Guide to Hotels, Restaurants, Pubs and Inns."

What's wrong with it? Well, English weather changes by the hour. And often for the worse. Be prepared for sunny mornings, pouring rain at noon and maybe freezing cold by night. But I've had day after day of blue skies and rolling green countryside.

You won't get a room with bath all the time. Carry a robe and slippers and use the bath down the hall. (Not so Terrible. You're just spoiled.)

You'll probably have to clean your own windshield and check your own tires. English gas stations sell gas-petrol. They don't see any reason to spoil the customer. And you may have to buy maps. The stations have them. But they don't give them away, mate.

"What is the tipping custom?"

THE ENGLISH use 12 per cent of the bill as the tip. (Why do we use 15 per cent?) Tip the porter a shilling a bag in and out. Bartenders — often bar maids — are never tipped. Ask her if you can buy her a beer: You can.

"What does it cost to rent a car? How about gasoline?"

The Great Princess Carla Caribbean Cruise Controversy.

Is it more fun to cruise from Los Angeles February 28 or April 11 and jet home from Jamaica?

Exciting new package tour combines a Princess Cruise with the deluxe service of Standard Airways (a U.S. Certificated Supplemental Carrier). Board the dazzling new Princess Carla in Los Angeles and play your way to Acapulco, Panama, Curacao, Port of Spain, Barbados, St. Thomas. Then jet non-stop Boeing 707 home from Jamaica. Round trip, air/sea, all accommodations, meals, ground transportation and Kingston sightseeing, from only $694 (based on double occupancy).

Or jet to the Caribbean March 17 or April 28 and cruise back to Los Angeles?

For the same unprecedented prices you can fly from Los Angeles to Kingston (Jamaica's fabulous duty free port) and set sail for home on this same floating country club, air-conditioned resort, health spa, and discotheque with calls at San Juan, Grenada, La Guaira (Caracas), Aruba, through the Panama Canal in daylight, Acapulco, and back to Los Angeles.

Can't make up your mind?

Then why not cruise both ways to and from Los Angeles? All ports of call. No packing and unpacking. More time to get spoiled by 4 gourmet meals a day and 358 Italians who pamper you shamelessly. Departing Los Angeles for 34 days of total paradise. From $1190 round trip.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE EVENING NEWS AND THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Quit TV? Never, Says Gleason

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International

Jackie Gleason doffed his jacket and sprawled on his stomach on the bed of the hotel suite in Miami—not easy for a man with the famous frontage of the great one. But he claimed he was comfortable enough, sipping a relay of drinks and mourning his inability to add to his gallery of television characters.

By now, in the seventh season of the Jackie Gleason hour (its fifth from this resort city), Jackie had hoped to be doing—in addition to Ralph Cramden, his Honeymooners bus driver—his old friends, Reggie Van Gleason, Fenwick Babbitt and the Poor Soul, plus two who as yet live only in his fertile mind.

"It's hard to get scripts," the star said. "I just can't get the material. I want to do a clam opener—you can see

The Lions Are Free

Bill Travers and his wife, actress Virginia McKenna, star in "The Lions Are Free," documentary which depicts the life in their natural habitat of the lions shown in the 1966 film, "Born Free." The show, at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Ch. 4, is an account of the return of Travers to Kenya for a visit with the famous lions.

TV LOOKS AT FARMS, FARMERS

Down on the Farm

What ever happened to the milkmaid? In fact, what ever happened to Farmer Brown?

Not long ago the farmer made up 90 per cent of the American population. Now less than six per cent of Americans live on farms and the number is dwindling every day. Could this be the end of an entire way of life?

The question is posed in "Down on the Farm," to be shown at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Ch. 4, with Dan Blocker as storyteller. (The special preempts "Adam-2" and "Get Smart.")

ONE POINT emerging clearly in the program is that the families who still live on farms like their way of life.

"We used to drive a team and wagon, and now we drive a Cadillac," says E. Benton Rinehart of Knoxville, Iowa. "We farmed with horses, did all the work with horses, went to town with the horses. Now it's all machinery."

Roy Keppey of Mount Joy, Iowa, says, "Farming today is a business, and it used to be that many farmers would apologize for the fact that they were living on a farm, and I think this is wrong. I think today you have to have a lot of capabilities to be a farmer, and I'm real proud to be a farmer."

MRS. KEPPEY says, "I really enjoy living on the farm. We were married about 21 years ago, and there have been a lot of changes in these last 20 years. Of course, it's all for the better."

"I think that the city gal hasn't got too much over the country gal anymore. Our homes are just about as modern as what they are in

Radio Music and the Generation Gap

IN ANSWER to G. Weeks, (TeleVues 1/12) who complained about the takeover of radio by "youth." I preface all remarks by informing Weeks that I was born in 1947, in the middle of the era of the death of big bands; when bebop and Stan Kenton were considered new, fads, avant-garde.

Progress is exciting as well as painful. All progress, of course, does not yield satisfying results, but I think it important for one to reconcile himself with it, lest he wither and die from stagnation — or worse yet strangulation.

KFI was dying that kind of death — may have been dead. My parents got me in the Chuck Cecil habit years ago; but I haven't listened for some time. He was the most alive element in that station's programming (along with Andy and Virginia) and he was doing a thing dead for 20 years!

First of all, I ask Weeks to give "new" music a chance. They didn't stop writing new or good songs in 1945. Nor did big bands die off completely. Only now, they are called "orchestras." There are many fine new songs — even "rock" — that are easy to take in their "hit" arrangements. Of course, many great songs are done in arrangements which grate against an ear raised on Artie Shaw, Jan Savitt or Harry James. So — what I ask Weeks to do is pick up on the many recordings of "rock" songs done by Woody Herman's Hundredth Herd, by Ellington and Basie, by the Miller Orchestra (conducted by available musician-of-the-month) or James or the too seldom heard Goodman, or even Enoch Light or Doc Severinson. He might be pleasantly surprised to discover some very fine listening.

If Weeks' big complaint is that the absence of Chuck Cecil deprives one of the big band recordings, then he hasn't been to a record store lately. Most of what was in the KFI library is available commercially on dozens of re-issues (which are still being compiled and released) on Decca, Columbia, RCA, Victor, Capitol and others. Most of these have fine liner notes and have very good sound — (beware of simulated stereo recordings from any of the labels, as none of the processes are yet perfected and actually detract from the performances).

If that isn't enough, I own literally hundreds of recordings on tape, LP and 78 originals, which he can come and listen to for two hours every Saturday. He can even tape them for himself if he has a recorder (this is on condi-

JACKIE GLEASON

me doing that one, can't you? And I want to do a hot dog salesman. But I can't get the material for those and even for Reggie. It's not the writers' fault. Not everyone can write a hit every week or every year. It's the same for all performers."

Gleason called for another drink and propped himself on his arm. He turned to the recurrent rumors that he may quit TV.

"Television is something you never give up," he said. "It's like a rash. You want to quit and about that time CBS says: 'Here's another five (thousand) and so you go on. Only one thing makes a performer hang around in TV. It's our ability to make ordinary material look good. There again I'm not blaming the writers. We have seven writers but it's impossible to do shows in advance. They have five days to write it and for us to shoot it. It's not like a film which takes months of preparation."

Jackie said he didn't think much of shows such as those of Johnny Carson, Joey Bishop and Merv Griffin because their guests are mainly entertainers.

"It's always the same kind of talk," he said. "People are going to get tired of that. What they've got to do is get people from different fields. Then they're going to have to have a guy able to ask questions of these kind of people. And it probably won't be the present bunch."

SPECIAL

THE DURANTS (2), 5:30 p.m. — Will and Ariel Durant, husband and wife author-philosopher-historians, offer their candid views on everything from Caesar to psychiatry during a repeat hour conversation with Georges Fisher. Clete Roberts hosts the hour-long "KNXT Reports" filmed at the Durants' home.

THE KING FAMILY (11), 9 p.m. — A winter weekend at Mammoth Mountain is the setting for the musical family's January hour, reflecting on the new year, and featuring Alvino Rey's "Skater's Waltz," Alyce's "Climb Every Mountain" and the whole clan's version of "Bells of St. Mary's" — plus even a brief visit from comic Jerry Lewis. (Show repeats Saturday at 7 p.m.)

FROM WHITTIER to the White House (11), 10:30 p.m. — Jack Cole recounts the political career of Richard M. Nixon during an hour highlighting the Alger Hiss case, the Khrushchev kitchen debates, South America visits, and the narrow victory last November over Hubert H. Humphrey. (Repeats Monday, 10 a.m.) In a similar vein, three of Nixon's teachers recall his life at Whittier College during "On Campus" (4) at 2:30 p.m., and "PBL" includes the Inaugural Concert from Constitution Hall (28) at 8 p.m..

SPECIAL

INAUGURATION (2, 4, 7), 7 a.m. — The day's events include coverage of Nixon's arrival at the White House (7:30 a.m.) to meet with Johnson, with the two driving to the Capitol at about 8 a.m. and walking to the inauguration rostrum at 8:30. At 9 a.m., with Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren presiding, Spiro T. Agnew is sworn in as Vice President, followed by Richard M. Nixon taking the oath of office as President and delivering his inaugural address. In addition to network coverage, the inaugural address airs at 9 a.m. (11) live, and by tape delay at 12 noon (5). NBC will recap the day's highlights with Frank McGee at 7:30 p.m., following which "Laugh-In" repeats the then-candidate Nixon's visit last September to "beautiful downtown Burbank." Both CBS and NBC cameras again turn on Washington at 11:30 p.m. with taped coverage of the various Inaugural Balls.

NIXON Administration (28), 8 p.m. — Paul Niven is host for a 2-hour assessment of the government transition, including excerpts from today's Inauguration. films of briefings with new cabinet members and a review of problems by the outgoing ones, following which author-educator Milton Friedman and Clinton Rossiter join Gary (Ind.) Mayor Richard Hatcher in analyzing how effective the Republicans will be in carrying out new programs, and how well Democrats will work with President Nixon.

The Jet Victory Less Football Reverence?

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

From a television viewpoint, some healthy things may arise from the triumph of NBC-TV's New York Jets over CBS-TV's Baltimore Colts in the Super Bowl.

To the lay viewer, it should be made clear that the Jets belong to the young American Football League, which has been promoted into importance by NBC's telecasts. The Colts belong to the established National Football League, whose games are seen on CBS-TV.

CBS-TV now — perhaps — is less likely to treat its football players with a reverence more normally reserved for archbishops or inventors of penicillin.

You may disagree, but my feeling — even as an NFL fan — has been that the AFL, with less to crow about, has been much less pretentious in its attitude toward the pro football players it covers.

ONE REASON FOR this, I think, has been the presence of Al Derogatis, who has rapidly emerged as a truly outstanding commentator on the game, and whose sense of balance is wholly admirable.

He is surely as excited as anyone about a big game, but he channels this feeling into a healthy, informed enthusiasm — and, above all, he always seems to transmit the impression that he knows a football game is, finally, merely a sports event, and not a place to worship.

AS A TELEVIEWER, I don't really mind too much when a grown sports announcer gets carried away a bit by the excitement of the moment. But I get a queasy stomach when an announcer seems to think there is something truly important about a contest in which a primary function is to knock other people down.

Not too long ago, when I indicated that I wasn't too upset by the famous incident in which NBC-TV's "Heidi" cut short coverage of a gridiron game, I received a note from a reader which said: "You dumb idiot! The only thing that comes before TV football is God!"

Considering the reverence accorded football by some video figures, that reader may have offered a statement which, in various quarters, is regarded as a fact rather than an opinion.

THREE CHEERS and an amen to G. Weeks. . .

I wish someone would take a poll (excluding teenagers) to find out how many people would start listening to the radio again if they could be assured of hearing real music on one station all day without having to risk having their ears and senses assaulted by that klakety-bang twang stuff which engulfs the airways at present. I, for one, would have my radio selector knob welded to that one station so the kids could not change it, then I would play that radio all day, that same radio which I have not turned on of my own volition for years.

I love music and I love to dance, but get very little of either these days because you have to have the former to make you feel like doing the latter and that which passes for music today just doesn't do a thing for the feet.

I feel sorry for my teenagers for never having known real music. I'm sorry they think a series of spastic-like jerks is dancing. Sorry that they have been cheated. Many no talent individuals slipped them a sound and said it was music. They accepted it because it was the only sound around.

WHO IS responsible for the rotten line of shows on TV on Sundays?

I get enough of the news on TV and in the Press every day so who cares to hear it debated on Sundays via the Round, Square or Oval tables by these same reporters who report the news?

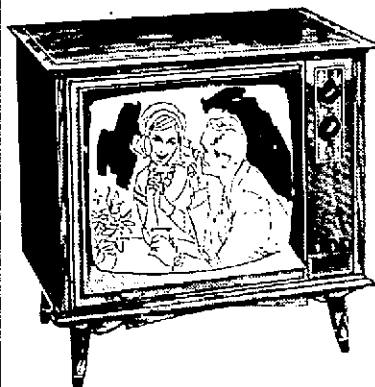

If you're not getting religious shows you're getting business guides and animal or insect life, all of which holds little or nothing for the person seeking entertainment and relaxation. I have also seen enough of reunion war pictures and want to know why we can't get some of the good weekday shows spread out to Sundays.

I don't understand stations doubling up good shows during the week just to cut each other's throat for a rating. I'd be more interested in the show and the entertainment it provides. I'll bet all your TV viewers feel as I do.

SPECIAL

VOYAGE to the Enchanted Isles (2), 7:30 p.m.
— The strange and fascinating animal life of the incredible Galapagos Islands — 600 miles west of Ecuador — are revisited by HRH Prince Philip of Great Britain during this hour left between the demise of "Daktari" and the start of Glen Campbell. From his 1835 visit to the islands, Charles Darwin developed his theory of evolution. With flamingos and penguins surviving side by side — we see iguanas, cormorants, frigate birds, tortoises and sea lions, all co-existing with man without fear, but in need of protection to preserve their unique species.

- Lord, Jackie Coogan, Nancy Kovack, David Opalashu, Herb Jeffries, Victor Sen Yung. A man carrying the bubonic plague turns up in the Islands, and he may have a connection with the disappearance of plans for a top-secret weapon.
- 4 The Outsider, Darren McGavin, Aldo Ray. Vicious ex-convict, Ross' former cellmate, wants an old favor returned — by joining him in an extortion plot.

SPORTS TODAY

LIGHT-HEAVYWEIGHT Championship Boxing, 6:30 p.m. (9), has Don Dunphy and Win Elliot ringside at Madison Square Garden where Bob Foster defends his title in a 15-rounder with Frank DePaula.

TV NOTEBOOK

"The Original Amateur Hour" with Ted Mack, starts its 22nd consecutive year of network telecasting on CBS Jan. 26.

The overall career of the Amateur Hour dates back to March of 1934 as a radio program on WHN, New York with the late Major Bowes. By the time 1936 rolled around, it topped such rivals as Rudy Valle, Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Fred Allen, Bing Crosby and at one time established the record of capturing half the entire available nighttime radio audience.

From its ranks have come such stars as Frank Sinatra, Robert Merrill, Frank Fontaine, Connie Francis, Maria Callas, Jack Carter, Regina Resnick, Paul Winchell, Pat Boone, Mimi Benzell, Stubby Kaye, Vera Ellen, Theresa Brewer, Jerry Vale, Georgia Gibbs, Ann-Margret and others.

JOHN E. FETZER, president of Fetzer Broadcasting and Cornhusker TV, radio and TV stations in Michigan and Nebraska and owner of the Detroit Tigers, will be awarded the 1969 Distinguished Service Award of the National Association of Broadcasters at the 47th annual convention in Washington, D.C. March 24.

"THE LOHMAN and Barkley TV Program," (working title), a 90-minute variety show, will premiere at 11:30 p.m., Feb. 9 on Ch. 4.

SPECIAL

THE LIONS Are Free (4), 7:30 p.m. — Actor Bill Travers describes his return to Kenya to visit the pride of lions with whom he "co-starred" in the movie "Born Free," and to see how the big cats have adapted to life in the wild. Unable to make the trip with her husband, Virginia McKenna is seen at home in England as she receives reports of his trip and his meeting with George Adamson, the game keeper Travers portrayed in the 1966 film. Highlights include the lions' welcome of their former masters; a visit with the lioness, Girl, the day after she gave birth to two cubs; and surgery on Ugas, a 500-pound male lion, who recovered to perch atop the cab of a truck as it bounces along a dirt road.

Old Hand in 'Hidden Faces' Daily Serial Goes Nighttime Intrigue-Suspense Route

By JACK GAVER

United Press International

An old hand at the television drama serial game, Irving Vendig, is trying to give it a new twist with a program called "Hidden Faces," which has just taken over the 12 to 12:30 p.m. spot, Monday through Friday, on Ch. 4.

Instead of the usual family problem, sex and psychic-weirdo themes that dominate the video serial, Vendig has taken the intrigue-suspense route that seems to serve so well for nighttime weekly shows, not to mention theater movies and books.

"HIDDEN FACES" is built around a character named Arthur Adams, played by Conard Fowkes, who has a dual career. Outwardly he appears to be merely a successful trial lawyer, but he also serves as an undercover agent for international police organizations.

Vendig, who last was involved with the successful "Edge of Night" series, which he created and wrote, feels he has a different approach to writing air serials.

"I never have my characters talking about what's happening out there somewhere," he explained. "I show the action with movement, not through conversation.

"Cliff-hangers aren't my style either. I write each episode as though it were the second act of a play, with the second act curtain engendering enough interest to make viewers want to know what is going to happen in the third act."

THE DAYTIME serial definitely must have characters that the viewer can care about through really knowing him, Vendig added.

"This can only be accomplished by the author showing in depth what makes the character tick," he continued. "You have to show the internal pressures that force an individual to react in any given situation in his individual way. The plot must grow out of, and be motivated by, character and character conflict.

"We are writing 'Hidden Faces' with an atmosphere of intrigue and suspense plainly shown by revealing to the viewer the depth of the internal pressures to which the characters are subjected."

VENDIG HAS managed to avoid some of the pressures of his own business during the past 30 years by living and working in Sarasota, Fla.

Other Sarasotans who have something to do with "Hidden Faces" are Vendig's son-in-law, Dr. John B. Logan, medical consultant for the series; Judge-Lynn Silvertooth, who presided at the Carl Copolino trial and is legal consultant to Vendig, and his co-writer on "Hidden Faces," James McCague, novelist and historian, who last year published "The Second Rebellion," an account of the 1863 New York City draft riots.

CRITICS' CORNER

TO LOVE A CHILD, aired Monday, Ch. 7.

... A short, superficial and altogether stacy little documentary purporting to show the procedures — and emotions — of a childless young couple intent on adopting a baby. There was just not enough time in 30 minutes minus commercials to do more than sketch in the procedures.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

This was more an expanded feature, such as might be inserted into any evening newscast, than "special" report. It was straight-forward coverage of the doings of two Mexican-American orgs, plus conversation with a young "Gang" leader. As such, it offered a certain quantity of surface information, but never tackled the guts of the matter, such as the ills that prompted such orgs and such youths, except to verbally intone that discrimination exists.

Conversation between reporter Clete Roberts and leader of the Mexican-American gang, as fatuous, though one segment, showing the youth talking over his aptitude test with a counsellor, indicated a wide gap between the youth's needs and the kind of help he actually was getting.

Ken Rosen produced and wrote the report, which was reported by Roberts and Bob Navarro. It was the second in a three-part study of the problems of Mexican-Americans in L.A. that is being undertaken by KNXT.

—Beig, Variety

MUSIC HALL, aired Wednesday, Ch. 4.

During an awkward moment when it was important to say something light and merry to lead to a station break, "Music Halls" star Jack Jones suggested—that he and his guest artist play a game called "Television."

"First we sing a song, and then there's a commercial," explained Jones in one of those naked moments of truth—and off we went to a mayonnaise pitch.

Jones, the week's "Music Hall" topline sang nicely but there was plenty of built-in trouble with the comedy material provided Debbie Reynolds and Godfrey Cambridge — and they both tried hard.

(4), 7:30 p.m. — Dan Blocker visits farms and country fairs from Vermont to Iowa in an hour-long salute to the unique character of the American farmer and the historic role he has played in the shaping of the country.
Combining a warm and town. And of course there's a lot of activity going on on the farm. It seems that there's just not a day that there's not something different happening.

Interested in Doing Bit Parts in Commercials, Movies and TV?

READ WHAT DARRYL RICHARD "SMITTY" OF "THE DONNA REED SHOW" HAS TO SAY:

"We're looking for people of all ages to work as 'extras' and to do bit-parts in commercials. No experience is necessary, no training is required, no special talents are demanded—only that you have a strong desire and the necessary motivation to succeed. We guarantee exposure to franchised agents for successful applicants... and a royal opportunity for a possible career on TV."

HARVEY MORGAN of Atlantic, Iowa, says, "when we started we were pretty hard up, and it seemed as though we stayed that way quite a while. The world was a lot harder than it is now — everything was hard. We didn't worry about it. We got along."

Mrs. Morgan says, "we worked from early morning until late at night and had no recreation... I enjoy living out here. In fact, when I go to town I'm always glad to get back to the farm. You have such a nice view."

"I'm never lonesome. No, I don't see how anybody could be lonesome out on the farm. It's been a lot of hard work — it sure has been a lot of hard work. Oh, I don't know — it's sort of gratifying to see what you have accomplished."

is this the moment for your 2nd Debut?

It is if you see other women whispering behind your back while they're looking at you. It is if you are looking dangerously older than your husband. It is if your husband no longer brings you flowers as frequently as he used to. Then, this IS the moment for you to discover the wonders that 2nd Debut is capable of performing on skin of most any age past 30.

The power of 2nd Debut is now acknowledged wherever people read. This exotic emulsion is relegating facial lines to at least semi-permanent residence in the never-never land of happy forgetfulness.

CEF (Cellular Expansion Factor) is a synthesis of the substance made by Nature within the skin to help keep the skin's water-moisture level high to prevent the formation of pre-mature age lines. But, for some as yet unknown reason, the facial skin nearing age 30 fails to make enough of this needed substance. Age lines then begin to appear. Other women begin to whisper behind your back. But, there is no valid reason to despair. Nightly treatments with 2nd Debut keep a rich supply of CEF available to help draw water moisture from its own surrounding environment. As the water moisture level in the outer stratum corneum skin layer rises, the skin's surface is usually seen to improve noticeably; many facial lines vanish as though a magic wand had so commanded them. Others of deeper nature find their nagging importance squelched into near nothingness. All due to the action of CEF. You'll find 2nd Debut (with CEF 600) and 2nd Debut (with CEF 1200) mightily rewarding and the 2nd Debut satellite preparations more than justifying every claim made for them.

Send your name to La Reina Rule, Post Office Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: Would you give brief data on TAIT? — A.T., San Pedro.

TAIT and TATE, Scottish, is from the medieval Scottish-English character description term "taye"

What Your Name Means

By LA REINA RULE

meaning "cheerful one." The Tait armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a red "X"-shaped cross. Across the shield's top is a red stripe. The Tait motto "Aegre de dramite recto" deciphers as "Having safely passed along a rough path."

MISS RULE: Would like the background on ASHBORNE. — L.A., Long Beach.

ASHBOURNE, English, was taken by the ancestor from his native town of Ashbourne in Derbyshire, England. The source phrase "Aesc-burne" means "ash-tree brook." Ancestors include Thomas de Asheborne, rector of the town of Colveston in Norfolk, 1351. The Ashbourne shield is silver, emblazoned with three red crescents and three gold stars on a horizontal stripe.

MISS RULE: Kindly identify DE HART — W.D., Cypress.

DE HART, is from Belgium and Holland. This ancient surname developed from the Old High German "De Hardt" signifying "descendant of the strong one." The De Hart armorial shield from Hoorn, Holland, is silver, emblazoned with three red hearts.

MISS RULE: Would like to learn about CHAVEZ. — E.C., San Pedro.

CHAVEZ, Spanish, originated as "Chav-ez," describing the forefather as "son of the bald one." An alternate origin was the Spanish-Basque "Eche-Bas" indicating "home at the river crossing." The Chavez shield is gold, embossed with five silver keys framed by a red border decorated with eight gold "X"-crosses.

MISS RULE: Please analyze MATLOCK. — C.N., Compton; A.M., San Pedro.

MATLOCK, English, is from a town by that name in Derbyshire. Matlock evolved from "Matthew's-Loc" signifying "Matthew's stronghold." The Biblical given-name Matthew means "Gift of God."

MISS RULE: Could you give the source of CRANDALL? — B.W., Seal Beach.

CRANDALL, English, describes the ancestral home site. The 12th century source phrase "Crane-dale" means "little valley of the cranes." The Elder John Crandall was among founding settlers of Rhode Island in the 1600's.

MISS RULE: Please give the origin of VAIL. — F.V., Long Beach.

VAIL, English, began as "vale," descriptive of an ancestral home in a "vale" or "valley." 13th century records list Eustace del Val and Robert de la Vale. The Vail shield is covered with ermine, emblazoned with three green bars.

MISS RULE: Kindly explain VALENTE. — C.V., Long Beach.

VALENTE, Spanish, deciphers as "valiant one," extolling the forefather's military prowess.

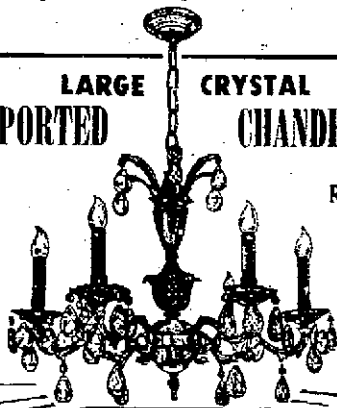

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on DELLA VIOLA. — I. C., La Mirada.

DELLA VIOLA, Italian, describes an ancestor, meaning "descendant of the man with violet eyes." This surname also depicts "son of the viola-maker," referring to the musical instrument termed a viola. The Viola shield from Verona, Italy, is gold, crossed by four diagonal green stripes.

OUR COVER

The Long Beach Mounted Police organization consists of more than 100 rugged men in whom the spirit of the Old West still lives. These men love horses, trail rides . . . and parades. They've put from $10,000 to $70,000 each in their silver and leather saddles and accessories, and they devote many days each year to activities of the Mounted Police. They're not employees of the Police Department (most are business executives), but each member is a deputy. They ride in parades on an average of more than one a month, and for the last 23 years have had the honor of being the lead group in the Tournament of Roses Parade. Tomorrow, 30 of them will ride in the Inaugural Parade in Washington, D. C. Turn to Page 5 for more about these Mounties who carry the banner of Long Beach far and wide.

Outside House Painting Eliminated for 15 Years

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (CT)—Painting is a thing of the past. Let us show you how Fiberglas TEX-COTE insulates, waterproofs and beautifies and is factory guaranteed for a full 15 years.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the TEX-COTE story. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every fiberglas TEX-COTE job is factory guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglas, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to TEX-COTE its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to time, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER THE YEARS

TEX-COTE is one of the oldest coatings now marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings since 1946. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 15 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

TEX-COTE is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun", screen doors for entire home without muss, fuss or odor. TEX-COTE fuses itself to the wall and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects. TEX-COTE may be applied over structural wood, brick, block or shingles.

THE WELLS REPORT

Gold in the Deep

By Bob Wells

GROUNDHOG DAY is still more than a month away, but all the signs indicate an early spring. The groundhog is a pretty lousy prognosticator, anyway. So is the first robin. I'm not sure they have robins in these parts any more. I haven't seen one in years. They're probably a casualty of smog.

Anyway, there are other, surer indications of an early spring. An outbreak of student demonstrations, for instance. A sharp upturn in the sales curve of our local Avon lady.

And the treasure hunters are stirring into activity a whole month early. Along the Pacific Coast, that's as good a sign of spring as the robin is in the East and Midwest.

I am not sure why treasure hunters seem to flourish more in the West rather than the East, but I suspect it has something to do with our gold rush and bonanza tradition. Like most other vertebrate species, treasure hunters are divided into two kinds—dry land and seagoing, hunters of buried treasure and hunters of sunken treasure.

There is no denying that the hunters of buried treasure have a great romantic tradition. Who hasn't had daydreams of rediscovering the Lost Dutchman Mine or Captain Kidd's treasure? Who hasn't thrilled to the story of the Last Chance Mine and all the other tales of poverty-stricken prospectors who became millionaires purely by blind luck? Always there is the unspoken thought: If it happened to him, it might happen to me.

YET, I ADMIT TO A partiality for stories of sunken treasure. For one thing, more than half the gold and silver ever mined lies at the bottom of the sea. For another thing, there are sharks and giant squid to threaten hunters of sunken treasure, as any fan of Lloyd Bridges knows. Hunters of buried treasure are threatened by ghosts and evil curses and other treasure hunters, but you can't prove that two out of three of those perils exist. Sharks are real, but not as scary as ghosts.

Southern California abounds in hunters of sunken treasure even though most of the treasure that has been recovered has come from the Atlantic Coast or the Caribbean.

There was, for instance, Mel Fisher of Redondo Beach. Mel ran a skin diving shop in Redondo, but his real vocation was hunting things of value that had bubbled and sunk their way to the bottom of the sea. For years, in the best tradition of the treasure hunters, he was notoriously unsuccessful.

There was the time he brought up several seaweed and barnacle encrusted brass cylinders from the ocean bottom off Point Fermin. Mel, always the optimist, promptly announced to the press that they were Spanish cannon and they must have come from a sunken galleon that was still down there somewhere.

Once the barnacles and seaweed was peeled off, however, the Spanish cannon proved to be merely sections of sewer pipe that had been jettisoned by the Los Angeles County Sanitation District in the normal course of constructing a sewer outfall.

Don't laugh. Five years ago, Mel Fisher recovered gold, silver and artifacts worth between two and three million dollars from a Spanish galleon sunk off Vero Beach, Fla. The galleon was one of a flotilla of 17 wrecked in a storm. It went down in very shallow water, in surf, in fact, but it took Mel and his crew a year and a day of dredging to recover the treasure from the drifting water sands that had buried it.

At last reports Mel was still out in the Caribbean looking for other sunken galleons. But a couple of other experienced treasure divers are still operating in waters closer to home. What's more, they are offering the average American male tourist the chance to become a rich treasure diver.

BILL HOGAN and Bob Bell, two well-known Southern California salvage divers, are putting together an expedition to attempt the recovery of 23 gold bars worth presently more than a quarter million dollars from the wreck of the Panama Mail Line steamer Columbia sunk in 1931 off Santa Margarita Island, Baja California.

At just before midnight on Sept. 13, 1931, the Columbia hit a reef off Pt. Tosco at the southern extremity of Santa Margarita. By 12:30 a.m., all 324 persons on the ship were off the Columbia and safe in lifeboats. Among them were 63 Chinese laborers being deported from Central America to China via San Francisco. The people in the lifeboats were rescued by the American Fruit Co. freighter La Perla.

But once the survivors were safe, Capt. T. K. Oakes had other worries. The Columbia's cargo at the time she hit the reef included the entire capital of a Central American company in the form of gold bullion and coin being transferred to the U.S. Mint in San Francisco. The bullion was worth $800,000 and the gold coin a quarter of a million dollars.

The owners of the Columbia contracted with the salvage firm of Merritt-Chapman-Scott, based at that time in San Pedro on the present site of Todd Shipyards, to recover the cargo. Most of the bullion and coin was recovered.

But 23 gold bars were never found.

Hogan heard about the Columbia from a retired Mexican Army officer who had been stationed in the area where the Columbia went down. Hogan researched the wreck and interviewed Art Weslin, the diver who recovered most of the cargo, and also another diver, Bill Lahty, who made an unsuccessful attempt to find the 23 still missing bars in 1937.

Ten years ago, Hogan and Bell and a Catalina tug operator, Phil Jackson, spent 30 days diving on the Columbia and attempting to salvage the treasure. They recovered the ship's bell and some silver wire wound on spools. But currents were bad, underwater surges strong, visibility atrocious and conditions generally unfavorable for salvage diving. Time ran out on the expedition with no improvement in diving conditions and the project was abandoned.

Sometime early this spring, Hogan and Bell intend to try again. To help finance the expedition aboard the salvage motor vessel Searcher, they are selling participant shares to eager novice treasure hunters who would like to spend 30 days looking for the sunken gold of the briny.

IT IS CERTAINLY A NEW idea for tourism. Applicants will be screened as to their physical condition and also their ability to get along with others.

"We are serious about finding the gold," Bob Bell said. "Short tempers are a liability to our project and will be screened out."

Just 12 persons will be accepted. They will be organized into six diving teams of two men each. No diving experience will be necessary for persons who can pass the physical. All personnel accepted will be required to complete a prescribed scuba diving course.

The trip will cost each of the 12 persons accepted $1,200, but they will share in any treasure found.

Well, if the spring wind soft as baby's breath stirs cabin fever in you, Santa Margarita is one way to head. Or you can dive for Spanish galleons off Catalina (lots of people still do), or head for the Superstition Mountains in Arizona and hunt the Lost Dutchman.

LONG BEACH MOUNTED POLICE
HELP KEEP ALIVE SPIRIT OF THE OLD WEST

They Love a Parade

THEY'LL COME RIDING up Pennsylvania Avenue tomorrow, past some of the most famous and most cherished buildings in all the land, and, when they pass the bunting-bedecked stand built for Richard M. Nixon, they'll doff their cowboy hats and salute.

The weather may be cold and dreary and the scene ever so Eastern, but it will take only a little imagination to transport the Long Beach Mounted Police, at least in mind's eye, from the hoopla of an Inaugural Parade in Washington, D.C., to a dusty plain or grassy meadow someplace in the Great American West.

There are over 100 members of the 34-year-old organization, among them presidents of firms dealing with the most sophisticated of electronics and industrial techniques and equipment.

As the television cameras scan the faces of the 30 men who will represent the group in Washington, and as those faces appear simultaneously on millions of television screens across the nation, however, it will be seen that the Long Beach Mounted Police is an organization of outdoorsmen . . . of sportsmen.

Sixteen men of similar backgrounds — businessmen and civic leaders who had been around horses for most of their lives and who enjoyed getting together for trail rides — decided in 1935 to form a troop which might represent the City of Long Beach in the parades which were beginning to take place with increasing regularity in Southern California.

The decision was made to commemorate California's rich traditions. The horses would all be Golden Palominos — emblematic of California's label as the Golden State. The uniforms would be cowboy-style and, naturally, they'd all use Western saddles.

Before long, the uniforms became stylized and the saddles and accessories became the richly decorated, hand-crafted silver which, along with the palominos, has become the hallmark of the Long Beach Mounted Police.

The organizers didn't call themselves "police" for merely decorative purposes. The Mounted Police unit has always been a full-fledged auxiliary of the Long Beach Police Department.

Each member is a deputy and wears a badge attesting to it. They're on 24-hour call (at no expense to the city) in the event of a disaster or calamity in which mounted riders are needed.

The organization rapidly became one of the most sought-after groups by Western parade organizers, and for the last 23 years the Mounted Police unit has had the singular honor of being the lead organization in the annual Tournament of Roses Parade.

In 1953 came the honor which, until tomorrow's ride, was the highlight of the organization's history. Forty-five men and their mounts boarded a train in Long Beach and traveled 3,000 miles across the country to ride in the parade marking the inauguration of Dwight D. Eisenhower as President and Richard M. Nixon as his vice president.

That day in January is still a favorite conversation piece each Sunday morning when as many as a couple dozen Mounties gather at the Long Beach Mounted Guard Arena for an informal, non-uniformed trail ride (on the Sundays they're not in a parade somewhere, that is).

Monte Montana, the famed trick rider and lariat expert of movie Westerns, was invited to ride with the Long Beach men that year, and he startled both the nation and the Secret Service men by twirling his rope into a huge loop which swooped out and around the shoulders of a startled Mr. Eisenhower.

The General laughed more than anyone else at the show of cowboy skill.

It was perhaps the most memorable moment of 1953's celebration, and the Long Beach representatives may provide the most stirring moments again tomorrow, even though they do not plan anything so startling as the roping of Mr. Nixon.

The group was invited to ride in the 1969 Inaugural Parade especially by the staff of the new President, and Paul R. Deats, member of the Long Beach City Council who is this year's Mounted Police president, is quick to emphasize that it's circumstance which has made it 16 years between appearances in the event, not the fact that the nation is inaugurating a Republican once again. "We just haven't been invited," explains the councilman.

It would be inappropriate to have the Mounted Police lead the Washington parade as it annually does the one in Pasadena, perhaps, but Long Beach has been accorded the distinction of being the climax unit of the anticipated two-and-a-half-hour march.

Before accepting that position in the parade on behalf of his fellow members, Councilman Deats had to assure the organizing committee that the Long Beach Mounted Police's distinctively colored horses wouldn't be disturbed by the steam calliope which will follow them.

"They march in parades at least once a month," he told the people in Washington, "and they're used to people cheering and shouting."

That's a rugged schedule, but, then, the Mounties are rugged men. Andy Zurick, a past president of the group and a member since 1957, recalls that he rode in 16 parades his first year as a member and that there were 18 parades the year he served as vice president under Tom Cole.

"It takes at least 35 working days a year, not including weekends, of course," Zurick explained. For parades within 500 miles of Long Beach, he continued, members personally drive their horses and expensive gear to and from parades in their own individual auto-drawn vans. The vans have "Long Beach Mounted Police" emblems painted on their sides, and that's extra publicity for the city.

The work of being a member of the Mounted Police doesn't end when they arrive at their destinations. The horses must be cared for, and on parade days each man personally saddles his horse, brushes his mount's billowing mane and makes sure that he and his horse are able to pass the critical inspection of the captain.

That demanding man this year is Ward V. Thompson, a real estate investor who has been a Mountie since 1944. In parades, he's entitled to carry the white Mounted Police banner at the head of the march, but it's his responsibility to direct the lineup and spacing of all riders and to give the marching commands.

Riding is the easiest part, and the pre-parade work of saddling the horses and clinching the heavy gear is for all the men a labor of love, not a chore.

"I've been riding ever since I was a boy back in Deatsville, Ky.," said Councilman Deats.

Another of the captain's duties is to keep check on the horses' color. The term palomino refers not to breed, but to the golden sheen of the horses' coats. Palominos tend to darken with age, and several of the 30 Washington riders have purchased new mounts within the past few months for that reason.

George Mitchell, a spry 79 and one of three charter members who remain members of the organization, proudly points out that the mare he'll ride tomorrow is the granddaughter of the palomino he first rode as a Mountie. Throughout the ranks are many second and third generation Mounted Police horses ... just as there are several second generation riders!

The silver and black leather saddles are family heirlooms, and they're a story in themselves. Outfits run from $10,000 to as high as $70,000, but they really are more valuable than that because there are so few of them in existence.

All the silver saddles and accessories owned by the Long Beach riders are the art of Edward H. Bohlin, a silver and gold craftsman who has been making his beautiful sets of equipment in Hollywood for fully a half century. He came to California from his native Cody, Wyo., in 1917 "when I got tired of freezing my tail off punching cattle for $4 a month."

Bohlin, who plans to retire this year at age 68 and who reports unhappily that no one has had the patience to apprentice under him and learn his techniques, reports that a modest outfit — say $10,000 worth — takes him three weeks to complete. More elaborate rigs have taken him as long as three months.

Owning a Bohlin saddle (he claims that he's the only man in the West who makes them) is one of the qualifications for membership in the tradition-rich organization. Another is owning a palomino, of course, and a new member must be sponsored by two Mounted Policemen. Further, an applicant must be screened by the Long Beach Police Department before a deputy's badge will be issued to him and, finally, new members must be accepted by the group's Board of Directors.

The current roster lists men whose means range from moderate income to wealthy, and there's even one member who is a full-time regular member of the Long Beach Police Department — Detective Dean McLeod, one of the 30 men who'll be riding tomorrow. Still another rider will be Charles C. Sullans, a retired former polygraph (or lie detector) expert for the L.B.P.D.

When they get together for one of their Sunday morning rides or when they march proudly down a parade route with flags flying and people cheering, though, wealth doesn't mean a thing.

What's important to the Long Beach Mounted Police at times like these are the fellowship of the troop, their pride in the City of Long Beach ... and the exhilaration of riding a prancing palomino in the spirit and tradition of the Golden State.

The Preacher and the Prostitute

By Dick Steele

MY FATHER was called to conduct a revival meeting in a small town in New Mexico. Since it was summer vacation, he took the family with him.

I was 15, full of poetry and fiction, forever hungry for food and romance. So I fell in love with the place—the adobe sunwashed town, the Spanish-Americans, the grim and ancient Spanish church, the nearby desert. I also fell in love with Vicky, a 15-year-old blonde with whom I spent as many hours under the watchful eyes of her mother as she would let me. When she decided that I had had quite enough of her cookies and Vicky's charms, she sent me home.

We hadn't been there long when my father received a letter from a fellow minister in Oklahoma asking him to see if his 16-year-old daughter Virginia might be in the town. The girl had run away from home two months earlier and he had done everything to find her. He enclosed a good description and a picture.

Never underestimate preachers as detectives. They are as smart as policemen when they want to be. My father asked the right questions and presently had an answer.

Although the weather was desert hot and shirt sleeves were in style, he

Massive World Famine --

Is It Inevitable?

By Don Brackenbury

IF YOU ARE READING this article at the Sunday breakfast table, the population of the world will have increased about 75,000 by the time you sit down to dinner.

For most of the nearly 3.5 billion people who now inhabit planet Earth, however, sitting down to Sunday dinner is a dream at best.

One-half of the world's people are "continuously on the verge of starvation," according to Dr. James Bonner, professor of biology at the California Institute of Technology.

Dr. Bonner's fields are biochemistry, biophysics and the molecular basis of the control of genetic activity. More recently, he has been working with molecular problems of the brain and the basis of memory.

His interests are varied. He is, for instance, an avid skier. He also is intensely interested in the problems of the exploding population and the concurrent food crisis.

That crisis was graphically brought to the attention of Americans during the past year with the publication of news stories and photographs of how tens of thousands of Biafran children were starving to death.

The Biafran crisis may be only a "preview" of what is to come if action is not taken soon. In a recent article in the Independent and Press-Telegram, business columnist Sylvia Porter reported that 10,000 persons are starving to death every day throughout the world.

And while the rate of population growth continues to climb, the rate of food production stays comparatively constant. Dr. Bonner reports, in fact, that the food supply per capita in the so-called developing nations actually is decreasing.

Every hour, the world's population increases by 8,000. This year, it will increase by about 70 million.

The United Nations estimated in 1954 that the population of the world would be between 3.3 and 4 billion by 1980. It passed the 3.3-billion mark in 1935. The United Nations now estimates that the 1980 population will be 4.1 to 4.5 billion.

"Next to world conflict, the greatest single threat to mankind is that of explosive population increase," Dr. J. George Harrar, president of Rockefeller Foundation, told a Caltech conference on world resources and population.

"Dr. Harrar is absolutely right," said Dr. Bonner.

"In the developing countries, explosive population increase is preventing any rapid increase in the standard of living," the Caltech biologist asserted. "It is condemning literally hundreds of millions of people to live in poverty and in hunger."

Governments of the developing nations, he explained, cannot organize any substantial improvements and development in industrialization because all available resources must be put into supporting the rapidly growing number of people in the lowest level of standard of living.

Continuation of present policies on food and population problems could bring about, as early as 1980, a "two-culture" system, Dr. Bonner warned.

In the words of the old song, he said, "the rich get richer, and the poor get poorer."

Speaking at the same Caltech conference, Dr. Bonner said that continued widening of the cultural gap could bring a condition in which the "have" nations would regard the starving people of underdeveloped nations as "a race or species apart, people totally different from us, as indeed they will be."

He said he could envision the day, well within the next 100 years, when the "have" nations would "find some suitable rationalization for ridding ourselves of them."

In the developed nations, there is not the explosive population increase that is occurring in the underdeveloped countries, Dr. Bonner said, but the increase in people still is "a social ill."

"Because of the increasing population, we gobble up more and more of our land to cover it with cities and retire such land from farming or from recreational use," he pointed out.

Because of the continually increasing population, government must build more schools, more public facilities of all kinds, "thus bringing about all sorts of anguished yelps from taxpayers," he said.

Without the population problem, he said, the nation could perhaps "concentrate on rebuilding our cities and making them decent places to live."

It may already be too late.

Some years ago, brothers William and Paul Pad-dock wrote a book entitled "Famine—1975," in which they predicted that massive world famine already is inevitable. They contended it is impossible to carry out on a sufficiently large scale the measures necessary to increase the world's food output enough to prevent starvation by the mid-1970s.

"I have studied this case with some care, and I think there's a lot to it," said Dr. Bonner. "Massive starvation is an inevitable fate in much of Asia, Latin America and Africa."

"By vigorous steps taken now, we can, at most, hope to slightly ameliorate such starvation."

One of the problems of feeding the world has been, ironically, that so much emphasis has been placed on producing more food rather than in curbing population.

"This is because we in the western world haven't taken the problem seriously," Dr. Bonner asserted, "and we have said, 'science will find a way.'"

He criticized "all sorts of silly articles," particularly in the Readers Digest, which speak glowingly of food from the sea and various technological solutions to the food gap.

"We will somehow bumble through, that has been our attitude," he said.

"The sea is big and mysterious, and it would seem that somehow we should be able to use it more effectively than we do," the biologist added.

He pointed out, however, that 10 years ago fish and other creatures caught from the sea made up about .5 of one per cent of the diet calories of the human race. By "prodigious effort," the annual fish catch has been nearly doubled, but fish still provide less than 1 per cent of the calories of the human diet.

There is little reason to think that this figure can be increased much.

"There are just not very many fish in the sea," Dr. Bonner said. "Fish occur in abundance only along coasts — the open sea is a desert."

But more important, he said, fish don't eat plants, they eat animals — "or, even worse, they eat animals that eat animals that eat animals."

At each link in this food chain, Dr. Bonner explained, 90 per cent of the input calories are lost in supporting the activities of that link. It takes 100,000 pounds of original plant to make one pound of codfish.

The same problem exists in regard to cattle and other domestic animals.

Man's food is derived directly or indirectly from plants, which possess the power to transform the carbon dioxide of the atmosphere into the variety of chemical substances which are necessary for the maintenance of the human being. A portion of the plant material, man eats directly — the cereal grains and many vegetables, for example. A further portion is converted into such things as meat, milk and eggs by being processed through domestic animals.

The trouble is, said Dr. Bonner, animals aren't very efficient in this processing.

The domestic animal eats only part of the plant and then delivers only about 10 per cent of its value in products which are suitable for the human diet. If a cow, for example, is fed 100 calories of plant, it uses up 90 calories for itself and delivers only 10 calories as food for the human diet.

"People in crowded underdeveloped nations cannot afford the luxury of supporting cows in indolence — especially cows which waste potential human food by walking around and keeping warm," Dr. Bonner declared.

The emphasis on animal protein in the human diet is a "holdover in human thought" from the days when man went out and killed his food with a spear, the days before agriculture was invented, he said.

—AP Wirephoto
This undernourished Biafran child is typical of hundreds of thousands throughout the world for whom starvation is a fact of life.

"There is no requirement for animal protein in the human diet," Dr. Bonner emphasized. "It is just that we require certain amino acids which we don't know how to synthesize for ourselves, and for which the cow or pig acts as a concentrator and enables us to get them in a concentrated form."

Protein with the required amino acid composition can be produced by a mixture of different kinds of cereal seeds, he said.

Dr. Bonner predicted that the continuing increase in population would bring a resulting turn toward vegetarian food. This trend already is under way in the United States, he noted. Butter has given way to oleo, cream and milk to artificial milk. He said General Mills has a program under way to make soybeans into artificial meat, and he called it "very successful."

The world's food problem could be alleviated to some extent if the agricultural technology of the developed nations could be spread effectively to the developing nations, according to Dr. Bonner. One reason this has not happened is the shortage in the underdeveloped nations of trained agricultural personnel.

For example, 10 years ago there were only 10 college graduate agricultural scientists produced each year in all of Africa, and the number today is only about 150 a year, Dr. Bonner said. In Latin America, 10 years ago there were 750 trained agriculturists produced each year, and this figure has been raised to only 1,100.

By contrast, Japan produces 7,000 college graduate agriculturists each year.

Education has not always met the problem, either, the Caltech biologist said. Chile, for example, has the highest literacy rate in Latin America. It has the most scientists, and one of the finest university systems — but one of every four Chileans is hungry.

The educational system of Chile — and of other Latin American countries and India, Egypt and Africa — produces scholars, but scholars without the ability to solve agricultural problems. And agricultural problems are the most critical in these areas.

There also is the problem of price policies, Dr. Bonner said. The United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization has pointed out that governments and planners in many nations, particularly developing ones, have been slow to realize that farmers will not increase production unless they find it profitable to do so.

Dr. Bonner criticized U.S. policies of the past in shipping surplus grain to India at low cost, arguing that such action may have been an immediate help, but had

Bedside Table

By Steve Ellingson

THE most important thing to determine, when building your own furniture, is the question... will it be functional? After all, the prime purpose of all furniture is to fill a need.

For some reason or other, bedside tables have never been adequate. When you stop to think that one-third of each day is spent in bed, you will see how important it is to have a properly designed convenience table. The one pictured here with Elizabeth Baur of 20th Century-Fox's movie "Lancer" has a large top suitable for a lamp, ash trays and things of that kind. It's high enough so the lamp will give a good light for reading.

Notice, too, that there is a swinging tray for writing or for breakfast. This is something that everyone likes, particularly during an illness. After breakfast, the tray swings back under the top where it's out of the way.

A shelf for magazines or a portable radio has been included and below that a drawer for medications or anything else you may need during the night.

If you need end tables for your living room, these may also be used on either end of your couch or beside a chair. The little swinging shelf will eliminate the need for TV trays. The pattern shows how to make the shelf swing out either to the right or left side.

Here is a project any amateur home carpenter can undertake with success. The full-size pattern makes building the bedside table so easy that even you girls can do it.

Home With 16th Century View

By Ellen Krec

FIFTEEN years ago Mr. and Mrs. Roger K. Nissen decided on a Mexican vacation.

At a friend's suggestion, they spent several days in the old colonial town of Alamos in the state of Sonora.

Alamos is a legendary city of colonial sophistication little known elsewhere in the 16th century.

The city was the cultural, commercial and political center of the northwestern section of Mexico.

With such rare heritage, it was only fitting that the Mexican government would declare it a colonial monument.

The city's exterior must remain unaltered, facades may not change, nor streets improve.

Cobblestones, worn in wave-like patterns, have borne up under the marching feet of the Conquistadores, the wheels of the silver-carrying wagons from the rich mines, the intruding Indians and bandits.

In more peaceful times the same cobblestones provided the paths to the lovely old church, marketplace, flower-smothered parks and to the elegant homes where culture developed by travel and taste was shared in a continental setting.

When the Franciscan priest Marcos de Niza passed through the site of Alamos in 1539, he was looking for the seven golden cities of Cibola.

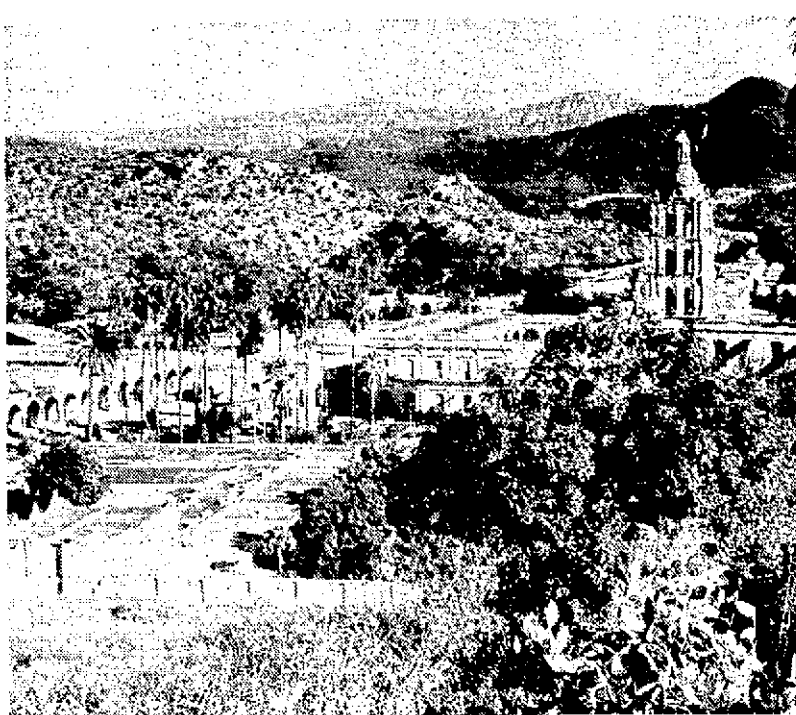

When the Nissens passed through Alamos in 1953, they were in search of a restful vacation.

Neither the good father nor the Roger Nissens found exactly what they sought. Fray de Niza found a silver city and the Nissens discovered a home with a lifetime of restful vacations . . . but interspersed with restorations of such magnitude that only an architect could hope to accomplish in a lifetime.

Le Mandarin is the name the Nissens have given the sky blue and white home because of the abundance of tangerines waiting to be enjoyed from the unusual second-story courtyard.

According to Nissen: "We bought the house on the telephone when we arrived back in Long Beach after our vacation. We hadn't even seen the interior!"

It took many consultations and nearly two years to get the title to the now semi-restored home. This, in itself, is a rarity since clear titles are no longer available to foreigners in Mexico.

A view of the Mexican colonial town of Alamos.

As an architect, Nissen found patience and an understanding of the Spanish language as important as his profession when it came to developing the almost 200-year-old dwelling.

"We still wanted to enjoy our two-week vacation each year," said Nissen, "so the balance of the year was spent in letters and suggestions for repairs to the caretaker and contractor."

"It always was exciting to note some of the changes from our suggested designs each time we opened the home in the summer."

"The workmen are fine, proficient artisans but with an independent turn of mind."

The major portion of the restoration to date belongs to the second-level rooms rimming the patio.

The Spanish colonial facade is made of two-foot-thick brick adobe and stone with a topping of plaster. The sheltering roof combines three layers of brick over wooden beams layered with mud. This particular ancient method of sealing a home swells when wet to prevent leakage. The ceilings are an interesting mixture of herringbone twigs and white painted bricks with open beams.

Rooms on the basement level are in the process of restoration and of the remaining 12 rooms, five have been completed with two bathrooms and a bathing room.

Each bedroom boasts a tiled bath and dressing area, but the "large enough for a small burro" bathing room opens to the patio. Tile-covered walls surround the 8x8x3 fitted cement tub.

Some of the unusual changes in the direct-mail work orders include a light placed four feet from the floor in the bathroom and five feet from the floor in each bedroom. The electrician thought they would be excellent to hang clothes on!

The inner courtyard encloses a blue tiled pool in Square brick patio borders classic columns.

THE SOUTHLAND AT HOME

excellent condition, considering its advanced age.

In reconstructing the abode, the Nissens were quick to install some of the luxuries, especially in the kitchen. Although the 20-foot-ceiling room has lost none of its charm in the process, the refrigeration and cooking units add to the vacation pleasure.

With the sophisticated background, it was inevitable that European tastes in furnishings were to become part of the Alamos homes.

The Nissens have successfully combined the finest furniture in the Alamos colonial patterns as well as fine imported accessories nearly native to the area.

One of the prime examples of the French influence is the ornate brass bed in the master bedroom. The brass, in perfect condition despite its passage by ox cart from Guaymas, twists to form a crown-like canopy above the high bed. A fortunate awareness on the part of the Nissens uncovered a border mural of garlands and bows. The mural was restored in its delicate pastels and rims the bedroom to complement the furnishings.

"We do not wish to make the home a grandiose one," says Nissen. "Our main objective is to return it to the charm of its past."

The double alcove fireplace was a necessity in the early days of the home when it was used for cooking. The Nissens, in the repair, added a center panel to compensate for some of the structural changes. The panel always contains a burlap and yarn angel when the Nissens are in residence. The beloved wall hanging makes the trip with the family.

The living room is called the "chimney room" by the family since the real living room has no floor, a tragedy of the rain storms.

The patio gardens also are products of research. The Nissens discovered that violets and roses bordered the tangerine and papaya trees. Mrs. Nissen planted a 150-foot border of violets while Nissen decided to remove some of the problem papaya trees.

Rimming the patio are copies of the old town benches . . . nearly copies, according to Nissen. It was suggested the workmen build the benches according to the antique design, but one year later (according to the carpenters' individuality) the benches bore just a slight resemblance to the originals.

"Our home with the sixteenth century view is far from complete," says Nissen.

sen. "But when you are in Mexico, it seems fitting not to hurry."

One of the more unusual sights from the patio is that of the old church steeple. When the church was built in 1786 and nearing completion, each of the leading families in town donated a plate from their finest dinner service to be inserted in the three stories of pilasters.

Havilland and Spode were not uncommon and today a single Spode plate remains as the survivor of the guns of revolutions and banditry.

About 80 American families have joined the Nissens in the identical project of restoring the town of Alamos to the traditional Conquistadores architecture, but a tightly knit dedicated group respects the dignity and the privacy of individuals whether they are member of the historical Alamos families or newcomers.

Bright Combination

LEARNING to combine paint and wallpaper when making such items as a screen for a room can add beauty at very little cost. Sometimes there are two avenues of approach to obtain the same answer in attractive, inexpensive furniture, such as a screen to add variety to a room.

If you have an old movable screen to be refreshed, there are two ways to do it, one by starting with paint and adding wallpaper designs, and the other by putting on wallpaper and then painting out what is not wanted.

It is easy to cover up the old paint by applying a background of neutral beige or a light green over the present surface. If this happens to be of dark hues, it may take two or three coats to thoroughly change it to a lighter shade. When the paint is dry, then it is time to add the wallpaper medallions.

Cut such decorations from pieces of wallpaper, and a good selection would be large red and pink roses, or clusters of gold and bronze chrysanthemums. Either cut these in detail so none of the wallpaper background shows, or else just cut out large uniform size circles from the paper, and paste these to the painted screen.

When the paste has had time to dry, apply a coating of shellac to keep the ends from curling up, and the pattern from coming loose from the painted background.

The second way to get an attractive effect from a screen is to just choose the wallpaper design you want, and cut it into the proper lengths and paste it to the screen. Then if there are items in the wallpaper which you do not wish to have show on the screen, start with paint and a small brush and put the desired color of paint over this wallpaper.

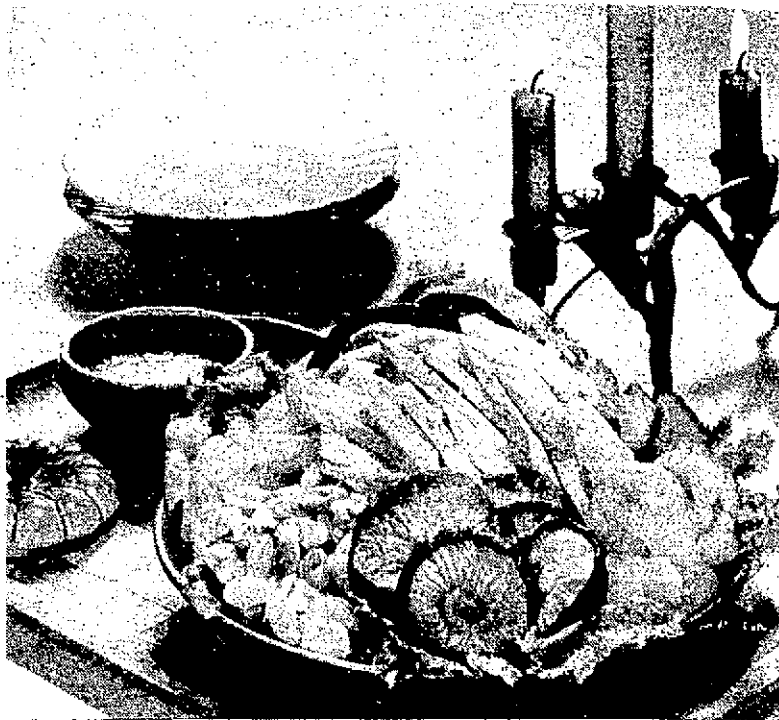

Cover all except the particular medallions which you want to repeat for the special effect. Naturally you can use any background color you want in painting out the pieces you do not wish to show. This makes it possible to use a wallpaper which has a background different from your accessories in the room, if you find such an attractive remnant for your screen and know you are going to paint out the color anyway.

It is fun to experiment and see what can be accomplished with scraps of wallpaper and some paint, and you can start from either direction and come up with a winning combination which will add beauty to your home. —

Turkey Salad Mandarin

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THIS LARRUPIN' good dish is a whole meal salad — serves two to three — is excellent for leftover turkey, or you can cook a bit of chicken special for this. Or buy a cooked chicken. Good combination and attractive, it's equally delectable. The recipe may be doubled or tripled to serve as many as desired. Could be a nice buffet salad, too!

TURKEY SALAD MANDARIN

- 1/2 cup dried forest mushrooms
- 1/2 cup warm water
- 1 tsp. sugar
- Sesame Dressing
- 1 (11 oz.) can Mandarin orange segments
- Crisp iceberg lettuce
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 1/2 cup sliced green onion
- 1 to 1 1/2 cups cooked turkey or chicken strips

Clip stems from mushrooms. Let mushrooms stand in water with sugar 5 minutes. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Cool, then drain well. Combine mushrooms with 2 tablespoons. Sesame Dressing. Cover and chill along with the other salad ingredients. Drain Mandarin orange segments. Arrange a bed of crisp lettuce on serving plate. Arrange mushrooms, orange segments, celery, onion and turkey (or chicken) in groups on lettuce. Pour remaining Sesame Dressing over salad before serving.

If desired, mayonnaise may also be served. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Sesame Dressing: Crush 1 teaspoon toasted sesame seeds lightly. Combine with 1/4 cup syrup from Mandarin oranges, 2 teaspoons soy sauce, 2 tablespoons vinegar and 3 tablespoons salad oil. Shake in covered jar to blend well.

Recipe of the Week

MRS. ORVAL HOBBS, P.O. Box 273, Mansfield, Ark., wins the $5 prize this week.

CREAMED HAM AND SWEETBREADS

- 1 lb. sweetbreads
- 1/2 lb. cooked ham, diced
- 1 can (12 oz.) luncheon meat, cut into 1/2" cubes
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tblsp. vinegar
- 1 qt. water
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 4-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
- 2 tblsp. butter or margarine
- 5 tblsp. flour
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tblsp. chopped pimiento
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper

Simmer sweetbreads 20 to 25 minutes in water to which salt and vinegar have been added. Drain and plunge into cold water. Remove any membrane. Break into small pieces. Brown the ham, green pepper and mushrooms lightly in butter or margarine. Stir in the flour. Add milk, sweetbreads, pimiento, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Serve in cottage cheese ring. Serves 6-8.

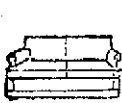

COTTAGE CHEESE RING

- 6 oz. medium noodles
- 1 pt. dry cottage cheese
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 egg
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper

Cook noodles according to directions on package and drain well. Combine noodles, cottage cheese, sour cream, egg, salt and pepper and mix well. Pour into greased 1 1/4 quart mold. Bake in 300 degree oven for 30 minutes.

Looking-Glass Land

"MIRROR, MIRROR on the wall" is the ground swell fast forming decorating waves.

For a time "the mirror" was relegated to a stray space just to keep it out of the way. The substitute was the mirrored wall.

For spaciousness the mirrored wall can't be beat ... except for the crashes when an occasional guest mistakes it for an exit!

By Ellen Krec

Or the goose bumps you raise when you near one in the night and think it's an intruder.

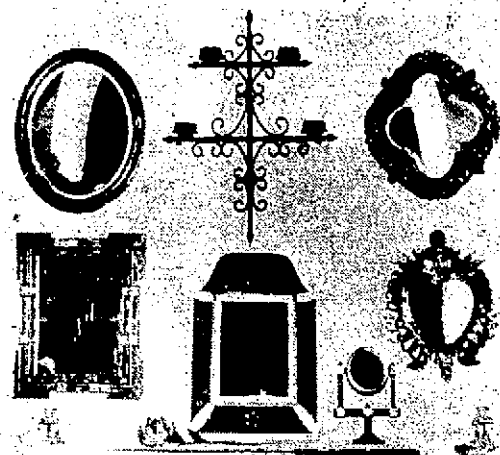

But for real glass-class, you must take a longer look at the highly decorative frames surrounding the newer look-in glass.

One fabulous mirror for you who happen to have just a tad under $2,000 to spend is a treasure from Bob Mitchell and Associates in Los Angeles, which combines a white painted sea shell frame and clear mirror. The difference is each of the shells is a superb example of collector-type "underwater outerwear."

Instant portraits may be the result of a beautifully framed mirror, and some of the more elegant ones from Mexico, hopefully to be imported into this country soon, include shadow box tole, oval magnifying mirrors for the dressing table, copies of a colonial heart-shape pattern from the tinmiths of Alamos, red marbled mirror slivers bordering in relief fashion a see-in mirror and quatrefoil gold leaf mirrors that take one year to make.

The mirrors are extraordinarily inexpensive for their artisan value and range from $15 to $100 (in Mexico, that is) so you have a choice of spending the money here or using it for a lovely vacation and bringing home your own mirror.

Ideas for mirror uses have been popping recently and some of the more practical as well as unusual include bringing a small mirror into proportion with its wider foundation by backing it with a covered mat. To make the mat, just use stiff cardboard the width of the chest or table beneath the mirror and balance the length to match. Cover the mat by stapling fabric to blend with your own decor, then hang the mirror on the mat. The color should complement or blend with the room, depending on your daring. Silks or the more formal fabrics are best with the traditional rooms. Linens, felts or even prints could add excitement to a more casual room. Perhaps a lovely grain wood panel would be handsome in a contemporary home.

This melange of mirrors is from Casa de los Tesoros.

So make your minor mirror a major decorating achievement.

A lively way to enhance your bathroom comes from an architect's bag of tricks.

So many homes have mirrors just half filling the wall space between sink and ceiling. This leaves a definite half-finished appearance. Add another mirror cut to fill the upper portion or frame the mirror you have with a wallpaper border, or a paint border. The paint should be a bright reflection of its companion room.

No one ever said you couldn't collect mirrors. For a grouping change, mix all those little and large framed mirrors you have stashed about the house to form a mini-reflection of your room.

old picture frames, but for a change fill them with mirrors: Nice to be used in the unexpected places like the foyer or above the kitchen sink — both for that last minute check when the doorbell rings!

One final suggestion is mine ... all mine. Use the mirrored squares (intended for the wall) as place mats for your table. With the chandelier glistening under each plate, how can you miss?

Caution: Refrain from reflecting too long — a mirror, like a photograph, if studied too long, will destroy our private illusions.

Shop of Horror

By Richard and Arline Sherer

AMERICANS are fascinated by war. Our myths praise the famous warrior-heroes. Our entertainment forms celebrate battle. The first major motion picture feature, "Birth of a Nation," was about the atrocities of the Civil War, and, today, audiences are treated to "The Dirty Dozen," "The Green Berets" and other war sagas.

Roger Steele is a businessman who profits from America's war fascination. He has a small shop, Hollywood Military Hobbies, on Hollywood Boulevard in a narrow arcade surrounded by larger and more prepossessing buildings. Despite the almost concealed location, Steele never wants for customers, and even late at night, after closing, the arcade sometimes is jammed with young men and their dates who spend part of their big evening looking into the window.

In that window repose the remains of one of the most violent societies in modern memory, the relics of a bloody chapter of world history, for Steele is a dealer in the artifacts of the Third Reich. In a city built on nostalgia, Steele serves to remind Hollywood that not all of the past was gay and bright.

Steele's customers have included the famous and the unknown. He can serve his guests from Adolf Hitler's personal silver tray and offer them champagne from Der Fuhrer's champagne bucket. His wares, including $25 helmets and $6 Iron Crosses, are in constant demand by Hell's Angels and surfers.

"I once sold a surfer an Iron Cross with the date 1939 on it," he reminisced, "and I asked if he knew why it said 1939. The boy thought for a minute and then said, 'I guess it was a good year for surfing.'"

The tiny shop across the street from the Egyptian Theater houses the largest collection in the United States of Third Reich memorabilia. The relics assembled were once merely a hobby for Steele, but today are a self-sustaining enterprise.

"I started as a kid during the war," Steele recalled. "My relatives would always bring me a souvenir when they came back from the war. I started trading with kids on the block and soon had a collection going."

He is not a Nazi. "I originally opened my store in Glendale and there always were strangers coming and asking 'What have you heard from the party?' The people watched me all the time. They were sure I was supplying the Nazis. Neither the cops nor the kooks would believe that I wasn't connected with the Nazis." At that time the American Nazi Party had its California headquarters in Glendale.

Nor does he admire the Third Reich. "The Nazis were the sickest people in the world, but they had a captive audience. It was one of history's greatest con jobs," he said.

"Frequently, I am visited by survivors of the death camps. They shake with rage, show me their tattoos. I explain that I have no love for the Nazis. My hobby is collecting historical items."

Steele's collection might well upset someone who lived through the horrors of Hitlerism. His inventory includes silver rings of the Viking SS Division, Blue Maxes, flags, (including the ensign from Hitler's wall), Iron Crosses, arm bands, uniforms, daggers and the gruesome relic of Buchenwald concentration camp — the shrunken head of a young girl.

The clientele of this bizarre business is perhaps as strange as the wares offered for sale. There are entertainers, bellhops, generals and punks.

"One time, I got a letter from a fellow up north. His grandfather had been a German general during the war and is getting quite old and ill. The old man's last wish is to be buried in uniform. The grandson is buying a uniform for him piece by piece from me," Steele explained.

Sometimes pathos is mixed with a commentary. "One individual came in and purchased items — Iron Crosses and so on — for a 9-year-old who was dying of leukemia. The boy wanted a jacket like the Hell's Angels wear with all the Nazi decorations," Steele said.

One thing Steele has learned is that his customers aren't all they seem. "About two years ago, four guys dressed like hippies came in, right near closing. I tried to kid them and get rid of them, but they kept wandering around and looking. They wouldn't leave.

"I went outside for a breath of air, and the guy at the next store came over. 'Do you know who those guys are?' he asked. 'No, who?' I said. 'They're the Rolling Stones. They just left my place and, boy, did they load up.' I went back inside and watched them pick out $1,500 worth of stuff.

"About a month later, I happened to be watching the Ed Sullivan Show and there were these guys — the Stones — wearing the stuff they had bought at my store."

The Rolling Stones are not Steele's only famous customers. He says he has sold a schwimmwagen — an air-sealed jeep with a propeller — to Sgt. Barry Sadler, the author of "The Green Berets" song, and has provided Nazi relics to Cary Grant and Mel Torme.

As interesting as Steele's customers are his source of supply. As a boy, he was not satisfied with the meager quantities of items.

"When I was 14, a buddy of mine who worked in a print shop made some phony birth certificates for us, and we tried to enlist in the Marines. They

BOOKS IN BRIEF

THE DIARY OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. Compiled by Frank Moore. Abridged, edited and with an introduction by John Anthony Scott. Washington Square Press, $1.45.

An abridgement, but still a plentiful helping (nearly 600 pages) of an account of the American Revolution as described by those who took part or witnessed its events, great or obscure. There are even facsimile broadsides and songs and ballads of the period.

UP THERE THE STARS. By Ralph Corse. Citadel, $5.95.

The streets of the Bronx in the depression days, and a boy, Frankie Andriani, whose ambition is to be "the greatest gangster in the country." From petty theft, to which he has turned to escape grinding poverty, and reform school, Frankie becomes a mobster for Dutch Schultz and Vincent Coli; learns about sex from Stella, a tramp, and about love from a strip teaser, Anita. And life teaches him that his gangster dream is folly.

Tales of the Western Woods

TIMBER: Toil and Trouble in the Big Woods. By Ralph W. Andrews. Superior Publishing Company, $12.50.

No nook of the nostalgic past will be overlooked if Seattle's Superior Publishing Company has its way. The old ghost towns; the West Coast windjammers; the old-time newspapers and newsmen of the West; pioneer motoring—even the West's great fires—this publishing house has erected worthy monuments to these, and many other aspects of the Old West, in the form of books that delight the mind and the eye.

Ralph W. Andrews' "Timber" belongs on the same shelf. Here, in picture and word, is the pageant of the pine and the fir and the hemlock, from the opening of the Northwestern wilderness by the courage, the axes and saws of the settlers, to the vast timber industry of the Northwest. The tales told in these pages sometimes seem taller than the timber itself, but that's the saga of the Northwest woods—an incredible one.

The early-day logging camps, the skid rows, the lumber flumes, the rough-hewn lumberjacks—and yes, the tragic fires, are all in these generously illustrated pages.

There has never been a more fascinating character than the early logger, who "was his own man. Generally he went along with the rules because it was less trouble. But in every camp there was a generous sifting of rebels, reactionaries and the off-beat characters who colored the long days with the swish of a gaudy brush. The isolation and freedom of the big woods camps attracted and nurtured those rugged eccentrics who groped their way through life by dead reckoning and spiced it up for the rest of the timber stiffs."

And author Andrews, by capturing the old logger and his era so entertainingly, spices it up for us too.

Capitol Crusade

THE CASE AGAINST CONGRESS. By Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson. Simon and Schuster, $5.95.

The authors of the syndicated column "Washington Merry-Go-Round" play no favorites in their crusading (some call it muckraking) against the corruption on Capitol Hill that enriches special interests to the detriment of the taxpaying public.

They lean as hard on Democratic liberals and Dixiecrats as they do on Republicans of every stripe, wrapping up in this master file their indictments of: Richard Nixon and the $205,000 Hughes loan to the Nixon family; the Thomas Dodd scandal, "in microcosm the story of Congress;" Robert Kerr and oil; Everett Dirksen and the sudden wealth of his law firm; Mendel Rivers and his vulnerability and special favors as Armed Services Committee chairman; and Adam Clayton Powell, Allen Ellender, James Eastland, Russell Long, John McClellan, Otto Passman, John Bricker and a lot of others he calls "unrepresentatives" and Clark Clifford and Julius Klein to boot.

Lyndon Johnson, Hubert Humphrey, Eugene McCarthy and the Kennedys are not ignored, either.

The book is a blanket indictment of subsidies from private business; tax loopholes in oil-depletion allowances, lobby pressures, foreign and domestic, that pervert legislation; abuses of power by seniority (senility) rule; junketeering; bonanza accounts to the home firms of lawyers in Congress; and horse-trading in the awarding of TV and radio station licenses.

The "good guys" — a short, short list — start with Mike Mansfield and George Aiken and criss-cross the aisles, with Hale Boggs, Frank Church, John Williams, Paul Douglas and Thomas Kuchel.

But their honesty, integrity and hard work don't guarantee re-election, the authors insist; the defeats of Douglas and Kuchel bear this out. — Morry Rabin.

Far From Terra

2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY. By Arthur C. Clarke. The New American Library, $4.95.

This science-fiction novel, based on the screenplay by author Clarke and producer-director Stanley Kubrick, depicts the cosmic desolation and splendor man may one day encounter as he speeds through space exploring our universe.

The book's most interesting and "human" character is Hal, the super-computer who runs the giant spaceship, Discovery. Hal not only thinks — he also speaks and feels emotion. Is it possible for a computer to go mad? The Discovery's astronauts find out in a terrifying episode deep in space.

This book is not up to Arthur Clarke's usual high-quality writing but even one of this old pro's lesser books is still good SF reading. — Pat Bautista.

Two Bits Worth

AMERICA'S MONEY: The Story of Our Coins and Currency. By J. Earl Massey. Crowell, $5.95.

The lowly French sou and the proud gold Louis d'or once circulated in America, in the English as well as the French colonies. So did the pieces of eight (remember Stevenson's "Treasure Island?") or Spanish dollars. Our terms "two bits" and "four bits", incidentally, stem from the use of Spanish real, known as a "bit" in the Southwest and West.

There were the Portuguese "joe," or johannes (named for John V of Portugal) and the Dutch deucatoons, also, in the American colonies. And of course, there were the English coins.

American monetary history is a turbulent one, marked with confusion. The federal government couldn't keep United States coins in circulation even after the Mint was established in 1792; wildly fluctuating paper money was used. When the Federal Reserve System was set up in 1913, real monetary stability was finally reached.

These and many other fascinating, often amusing facts we learn in J. Earl Massey's lively story of American coins and currency.

Southland Magazine

And Try Not to Miss...

JUBILEE OF A GHOST. By March Cost. Vanguard, $4.95.

A seasoned and talented writer of novels tells the story of a prima ballerina.

ADOLF HITLER: His Family, Childhood and Youth. By Bradley F. Smith. Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, Stanford, $1.85.

The child was truly father to the man in the case of Hitler. Bradley F. Smith recounts the events and conditions in the dictator's formative years which clearly and permanently marked his personality and character.

THE AMBROSE BIERCE SATANIC READER. Compiled and Edited by Ernest Jerome Hopkins. Doubleday, $5.95.

These selections from the invective journalism of the great California satirist show why he was called "Bitter Bierce." Of a certain capitalist he wrote that his ancestors were "the men who dug potholes on Mount Calvary."

SUDDEN AND AWFUL: American Epitaphs and The Finger of God. By Thomas C. Mann and Janet Greene. Stephen Greene Press, $4.95.

Inscriptions on colonial, pioneer and frontier tombstones as collected in this volume show the American attitude toward death by misadventure. There was, for example, Sarah Shute, of Canaan, N.H., who "died of drinking too much coffee, Anno Domini Eighteen forty."

THE PELICAN HISTORY OF MUSIC: Classical and Romantic. Edited by Alec Robertson and Denis Stevens. Penguin Books, $1.45 paperback.

The third volume in a distinguished history of music, chiefly concerned with the 18th and 19th centuries, but also discussing, in a coda, the works of Mahler, Bloch and others of this century.

Puppies Can Be Fun

By Eleanor Avery Price

Raising puppies can be fun, but many people act petrified when the first litter is due. Let's face it. There will be a mess, new better responsibilities, more responsibilities, more work, added expense, frequent interruptions, but almost always there will be also joy watching a pen full of puppies stalking each other's tail, kissing your fingers, blossoming out like flowers.

Normally, in a comfortable box, the dam is able to whelp her litter without assistance, but stay close by just in case. You might have to remove pups from sacs and cut the umbilical cords (two inches from the pup's belly for a medium breed.) Should a pup not start to breathe, rub it vigorously with a towel, also swing head down to force out fluids in mouth and chest. Try mouth to mouth respiration if necessary. You can even run cold water over the pup, then gradually warm.

Vizsla puppies, one an individualist, are bit of a burden at first, but rapidly grow into strong youngsters.

Puppies are equipped to combat most bacteria surrounding birth. Even newspapers on which they usually are born seem harmless. However, a number of pieces of cloth are better and considerably less noisy when the dam is "digging" her nest and cleaning up. You can sterilize implements with alcohol and dip tips of cut cords in iodine.

Keep a box handy in which to place each placenta so when whelping is over you can check them against number of puppies. If the dam eats some of the placentas, don't panic. They won't hurt her, but do keep track of number. Pull gently on the cord end attached to the placenta if it isn't expelled normally.

If the dam has difficulty expelling a pup, wrap a towel around your hand to give you purchase and carefully pull on the partly emerged whelp. Pups may be born head first or tail first. If the dam is a slow whelper, call the veterinarian; he may suggest a hormone injection, and, in desperate cases, a Caesarean section.

Let the mother lick each pup, then towel dry it and place it in a warm box close by. Puppies should nurse as soon as possible. (Area in long-coated breeds should have been cleanly trimmed). Soon the mother will want to relieve herself, and she may like some warm broth.

Healthy pups are quiet. If they cry and squirm a lot, something is wrong. They may be cold or not adequately fed. There may even be an infection, or the pets are overly weak. Consult a veterinarian. I have revived a weak pup with a drop of whiskey in a couple drops of water.

If supplementary feedings are needed, use a doll bottle, premature baby nipple, or, as a last resort, a medicine dropper. Do not force fast feedings. A small amount of raw liver juice (never from swine) in the formula may give strength to the pups.

Keep watch of the dam. Calcium and phosphorus deficiency can cause eclampsia evidenced by shaking, wild expression, rigidity, and fever. An injection of calcium gluconate may help. Feed her well. Powdered milk sprinkled over her meal will "up" calcium intake.

Presidential Tidbits

HARRY S. TRUMAN was the first President to travel underwater in a submarine. He embarked at Key West, Fla., on Nov. 21, 1946, in the U-2513, a captured German raider. The sub engaged in exercises at sea off Key West, during which she submerged.

Our first 15 Presidents were clean-shaven. From Lincoln through Taft, all had beards, or at least a mustache (save McKinley and Andrew Johnson). After that, all Presidents have been clean-shaven again.

William H. Taft, the 27th President, was the only American to become both President (1909-1913) and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (1921-1930). He was also the first U.S. President to visit a foreign country while in office.

Only once in our past history did the President's cabinet remain unchanged for the full four years: during Franklin Pierce's administration.

Zachary Taylor, who died of typhus after only 16 months in the White House, never voted. He never lived long enough in any one place to fill the residence requirement.

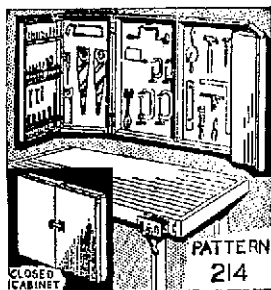

William Henry Harrison held the presidential office for the shortest period of time. Inaugurated on March 4, 1841, he died on April 4, having served only 31 days. Harrison's vice president, John Tyler, who was inaugurated together with Harrison, became president after Harrison's death, thus becoming the vice president with the shortest tenure: also 31 days.

No ordained minister was ever elected to the presidency, but James A. Garfield, the 20th President, was a lay preacher of the Disciples of Christ or Campbellites, a religious order founded in 1809 by Thomas and Alexander Campbell. Garfield was student, teacher and principal of the Western Reserve Eclectic Institute, a Campbellite institution now known as Hiram College — a liberal arts school in Hiram, Ohio.

You Make It

Make this cabinet to hang above your bench. Everything from saws to drills will then be within reach. Two panels at each end fold in on the center two, and the cabinet may then be locked. Pattern 214, which gives dimensions, construction steps and material list, is 50c. It also is one of four full-size patterns in the Woodworkers' Packet No. 56 — all for $1.50.

Population Boom, Famine Threat

the long-range effect of retarding India's own grain production.

But the big problem, in Dr. Bonner's opinion, is the ever-growing world population.

Dr. Harrison Brown, professor of geochemistry at Caltech, told the 1967 conference on population and resources that not only is the number of people in the world increasing, the rate of growth also is on the upswing. In the 1600s and 1700s, the rate of growth was less than one-half per cent a year. In the early 1800s, the rate began to rise. It passed 1 per cent in the early 1900s, and now stands at 2.1 per cent a year.

In much of Latin America and in large parts of Africa and Asia, Dr. Brown told the conference, rates of growth "significantly greater" than 3 per cent already have been reached.

Dr. Brown said that "plausible extrapolations" of the growth rate indicate the world population might well hit 7.5 billion by the turn of the century, and he added "we will be fortunate indeed if we succeed in stabilizing the world's population at 15 billion persons."

In her previously mentioned article, Sylvia Porter reported that a paper delivered at the 9th International Congress of Soil Science in Australia a few months ago warned that today's starvation rate "is likely to quadruple" by the end of this century. That would mean as many as 2 or 3 billion people would die of starvation within the next 32 years.

"Every human being has a right to a normal life span, to a normal intelligence (which undernourishment in childhood prevents from developing), to a roof over his head, clothes and, in general, the necessities of life," Dr. Bonner declared.

"In addition, we must remember that society gets work, and therefore, social good, only out of adults, not out of children," he pointed out.

Not much has been done to curb the population growth — with the notable exception of Japan. Dr. Bonner cited the Japanese program as a prime example of what can be done.

"All we have to do is follow their model," he said.

More than 20 years ago the Japanese government became aware that the nation's population could not be permitted to keep increasing. A massive advertising campaign — "conducted with logic, good taste and good sense," commented Dr. Bonner — was undertaken to make it clear to all Japanese that each individual would be better off and have more rapidly rising standard of living if fewer Japanese were born.

Such a campaign would not be effective in an underdeveloped country where there is the cultural heritage of "social security" depending upon surviving children.

In India, for example, the only social security the average man has is the number of children who live long enough to support him. Such people are not going to limit the size of their family unless they have real assurance that one or two children are going to live long enough to support them — and their history has been that they must start with six, or eight, or 10 children to wind up with one or two. Modern medical developments have sharply reduced infant mortality, but this fact must be made clear to the people of the underdeveloped countries.

There is no large-scale effort toward world population control under way at present. The United Nations, despite a plea in 1967 from 30 governments to step up its family planning services, still is spending comparatively small sums for such efforts.

In the United States, the Agency for International Development likewise is spending comparatively small sums to solve such a major problem. Since 1954, AID has sent about $15 billion to underprivileged nations in the Food for Peace Program, but only $5.3 million is proposed this fiscal year to purchase birth-control devices for use in other nations. Only 2 per cent of the AID budget is aimed at solving population problems. A White House panel recently urged AID to increase its spending for family planning to $100 million a year.

Dr. James Bonner, Caltech biology professor, checks a tray of baby pea plants, from which he isolates genetic materials for research.

Last fall, Prof. Garrett Hardin, a biologist at the University of California at Santa Barbara, said the United States should refuse to send food to starving nations unless they have "vigorous" birth control programs.

"In the long run, this is the kinder course to pursue, because any food sent to a non-birth-controlling country will merely increase the number of people who will ultimately starve," Prof. Hardin declared.

Despite the seeming inactivity, Dr. Bonner is optimistic that steps will be taken shortly.

"I think the matter is now sufficiently urgent and sufficiently clear that large-scale world programs will come into being within the next few years," he said.

The recent encyclical by Pope Paul, ordering Catholics not to use birth-control devices, has been seen by some as a blow to programs aimed at curbing the population explosion, but Dr. Bonner does not agree.

"I don't think the position of the Catholic Church against birth control plays any serious part in the matter," he said. "After all, the first country to control its population growth rate in the 19th century was France, an almost completely Catholic country."

Dr. Bonner's position is supported by the Population Reference Bureau, Inc., which recently noted that the average birth rate in Europe is about 18 per 1,000, and that it is the same in Catholic and non-Catholic, Communist and non-Communist countries. In Asia, Africa and Latin America, however, the rate is from 35 to 50 per 1,000.

"It is not religious beliefs, but the degree of literacy and economic progress which determines the birth rate," the bureau said. "The poorer the people, the higher the birth rate."

Dr. Bonner also pointed out that when a country becomes industrialized, its birth rate drops.

Another hopeful sign, Dr. Bonner said, is that politicians are getting more interested in population controls and in food matters. He noted that Sen. George McGovern recently had commented:

"It is not that the earth lacks the capacity or modern farmers the know-how to produce subsistence for men, but rather that governments lack the will and the courage to bend their efforts to the task."

"What it really takes to interest lots of politicians are some good, jolting world famines," Dr. Bonner declared. "This will do it."

COIN ROUNDUP

Questions and Answers

By Maurice M. Gould

Q—I have a coin which says "one centavo Philippines," dated 1944. Does this have any value?

A—This date was issued in large numbers and is common. Because of World War II, the 1944 and 1945 coins of the Philippines were minted at Philadelphia, Denver and San Francisco.

Q—I have some of the so-called "war nickels" issued from 1942 through 1945. Are these worth keeping?

A—It depends on the condition. There is a premium for them because of the silver content. If they are badly worn, it would be best to get rid of them. If they are in nice condition, they probably have a collectors' premium and will increase in value in the future.

Q—I have a 1916 half-dollar. I notice that some of the mint marks on this coin would make it more valuable. Where can I find them?

A—The 1916 half-dollars were struck with mint marks in both Denver and San Francisco. The mint mark appears on the front or obverse of the coin to the left of the figure.

Q—I have a spread eagle coin dated 1858 with the "one cent" on the back. Is it worth much money?

A—You have a Flying Eagle cent. While this coin is a collector's item, it is not rare and catalogs $4.75 in good condition and $135 when brand new. The 1856 Flying Eagle cent is quite rare and catalogs $650 in good condition, but the other two dates of Flying Eagle cents, 1857 and 1858, are easily available.

Q—I have a 1915 $10 gold piece. Could you tell me its value and should I keep it?

A—The gold piece you have catalogs $55 in fine condition. There were approximately 351,000 of these minted and the piece is not rare. Many collectors and investors are buying gold coins as a hedge against inflation, and with inflationary conditions these pieces should rise steadily in value in the years to come.

Q—I have a little coin with the words "spielmark" on it. It looks like gold. Could you tell me about it?

A—The piece you have is probably brass, and the word "spielmark" means "play money." Pieces of this sort were used years ago with various games where money was involved, and there are hundreds of types and sizes. Some collect them, but they do not bring much in actual cash.

Q—I have purchased an inexpensive metal detector and am planning to use it on the beach to locate some coins. Have you heard of anyone finding anything really rare in this manner?

A—Yes. Quite a few people have had excellent luck in searching for old coins and other objects. Some do it in the early morning after the beach crowds have been there the day before. I have been told that coins up to a value of $750 each have been picked up in Texas, Florida and Massachusetts beaches.

Dog's Life

Q. Although the United States' Apollo 8 flight was the first manned trip around the moon, isn't it true that Russia orbited two dogs around the moon a year or two ago? B.S., Long Beach.

A. No. You're probably thinking of the space trip made by canines Blackie and Breeze in March, 1966. The two Soviet dogs orbited the earth for 23 days, reaching heights of 550 miles and becoming the first living beings to pass through the Van Allen radiation belts looping the earth. Russian scientists said the dogs lost much weight and walked erratically upon their return, but soon regained their former health. Both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have soft-landed space craft on the moon, and in November the Soviets sent into lunar orbit and returned the unmanned craft, Zond 6.

Junior Chambers

Q. What are the requirements for joining the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce? R.P., Long Beach.

A. According to Robert Fernald, Long Beach Jaycee president, members must be between 21 and 36 years of age, be interested in the community and pay $25 a year dues. Some of the Jaycees' projects include sponsoring the Miss Welcome to Long Beach contest, co-hosting the Southern California PGA Golf Tournament and working with the National Alliance of Businessmen Job Procurement for Summer program. They also host the annual Gridiron banquet where they jokingly criticize city government officials. This year the Long Beach Jaycees were named the outstanding Jaycee chapter among California cities of more than 200,000 population. For more information you can write to the Jaycee office at 121 Linden Ave. A brochure describing the organization is being sent to you.

TEENS IN ACTION

FOR RON CHAPMAN, life as a drum major started out on a bed of roses this year. Ron, a 17-year-old Lakewood High senior, was one of two drum majors chosen to lead the Long Beach All-District Senior High School Band in the Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day.

Originally a bass clarinetist for the Lakewood High Lancers Band, Ron now is the band's head drum major. Although band activities and participation in the Kiwanis-sponsored Key Club keep Ron pretty busy, he also enjoys spending time at home with his family at 3939 San Anselme Ave.

Footsore, but still beaming over the day's events, Ron recalled his parade experiences:

—Not many people are interested in, or know much about, drum majors. I always kind of wanted to be one, so I started learning on my own by watching and talking to other drum majors. There are no specific classes or instructors at school. If you want the job, you have to take it upon yourself to go after it.

—All drum majors from Lakewood High go to a one-week training class during the summer at the University of Redlands. There we learn everything from twirling a baton to charting a half-time show. Few people realize how involved the drum major's job is. There's a lot more to it than waving that little stick around and blowing a whistle. You have to know music and be able to direct in all different tempos. You also have to know people and how to control them.

—In a parade, the band depends entirely on the drum major's signals for directions. Every step they take and note they play is done on his command. And we have to know how to control the band in an emergency situation, such as an ambulance passing through the parade route.

—It was a thrill for me to be selected to march in the Rose Parade, because this is just my first year as drum major. The Rose Parade is the top parade, and to start at the top was really something.

—Because the all-district band is made up of the top musicians from each high school band, each musician had learned slightly different ways of doing things. So our first task in preparing for the parade was to get the group together and make a working unit of it. This is another of the drum major's jobs.

—It was great working with this group. In the school band there are always a few goof-offs to contend with. But everyone in the all-district band shared the common goal of just wanting to do our best in that parade. I've never seen such cooperation.

—I'm not sure how many miles the parade route is. It seemed like 10 to me, and I felt every step of it. The hardest part is not being able to let down for one second. The street is lined with a million people, and everyone is watching you. If your feet start to hurt, well, that's just too bad.

—You simply can't stop and worry about your own physical comfort. And while you have to stay on your toes, you also have to try and relax so you won't wear yourself out. We really enjoyed it when the parade halted twice for a stalled float and we were able to stand at ease, for a few seconds.

—Our only mishap during the parade was when our bass drummer lost his pants. The uniform trousers have a zipper on each side. One of his zippers broke, and he was holding up his pants with one hand and drumming with the other ... until the other zipper broke. Then the director had to pull him out and hastily supply him with a few safety pins.

—People towards the end of the parade always get unhappy because the bands don't play much at the end. They even hold up big signs asking you to play. It's hard to have to disappoint people, but the bands would collapse if they played all the time. There are certain portions of the route where they're required to play, such as in front of the judges' stand and in front of the television cameras.

—For the most part, it was a wonderful, enthusiastic crowd. And it's so great when you can see they appreciate you. That's what really makes all the time and effort worthwhile.

PREACHER, PROSTITUTE

dressed in his clerical best and went to the town brothel. He asked to see the girls. The madame, flustered and flattered by a visit from a gentleman of the cloth, paraded her charges through the Victorian parlor.

"I think you are Virginia," he said.

The girl, surprised, said "Yes."

"Come with me," he said.

"He took her by the hand and led her to the home of a pillar of the church. Then he sent a wire to Oklahoma.

That night the law paid us a visit. He had a tennegallon hat, two guns and a belly full of tequila. He stood on the front porch and berated my father in Spanish and English. The gist of his communication, as far as I could make out, was that my father was an immoral man who had come into their peaceful town to disrupt law and order and the established social customs.

"If I have done something wrong you should arrest me," my father said.

The deputy stood there, fingering both guns and trying to think. He gave up, said something unpleasant in Spanish and staggered off.

The next night I went with my father and Virginia to the railroad station. I didn't know what to make of this girl. She wasn't very pretty, although she wasn't ugly either. I smiled at her, but she didn't smile. I tried to talk to her, but she wouldn't say anything.

She and my father sat on a bench in front of the station. She sat very close to him and clutched his coat sleeve. But she didn't talk to him either.

She wasn't like Vicki. She wasn't like any girl I had ever known. It was as though we stood on opposite ledges of a deep canyon.

The train came and her father, a slim, hard, ministerial man with an unhappy stone face, got off. He took his daughter in his arms, kissed her on the forehead and said, "Hello, Virginia." She said, "Hi, Dad." Neither smiled.

Then he and my father went off a few paces and talked. At the "All Aboard," he shook my father's hand, took his daughter gently by the arm and entered the train.

That's the end of the story, as far as I know. I don't think my father ever knew either. Some things happen in families that are never referred to afterwards.

A Driver Test That You'll Dig the Most

By Charles Sutton

UNTIL JUST RECENTLY, I thought — mistakenly, of course — that life was just a matter of dual alternatives. A book, for example, was either good or bad, or dull or exciting. A judgment was right or wrong — nothing more, nothing less. And a suspect was guilty or not guilty. How could it be otherwise?

But it could, and is, I've discovered — thanks to the driver's license renewal test I took the other day. And which I darn near flunked, incidentally.

If the test did nothing else, it brought home the fact that life is actually a series of multiple choices, and the way to beat the game is to make fewer than five errors in any given period.

Those of you who are already privy to the principle of multiple choice must find it incredible that it should have taken me this long to make the discovery. But then, I'm a person who has a hard time finding his car every day, let alone some profound truth.

I do vaguely recall a time, though, when you could get away with six errors — and before that, probably, with seven, eight and nine. But life has an endearing way of narrowing the margin of error for all of us, doesn't it? And there's little we can do but (a) accept our fate, (b) drop out, or (c) plead insanity. Although I suppose we could take a suspended sentence — except that I think that's reserved for special cases only.

Shana Alexander was remarking in one of her Life magazine columns recently about her own multiple choice syndrome. She doesn't find people ugly or beautiful, for example. Or fat or thin. "They are always young, middle-aged or old. Tall, medium or short."

She's right, of course. Nor are they rich or poor any more, either, she might have added. They're in the lower class, the middle class or the upper class. Or better yet, in the lower-lower class, the middle-lower class, the upper-lower, the lower-middle and so on.

Which is not to say that you have to be a magazine columnist to understand the role that multiple choice plays in life. Or a psychiatrist or psychologist, either — although it seems to help. Take Dr. Richard Komisaruk and Dr. Carol E. Pearson of Detroit, for example — a psychiatrist and psychologist, respectively. The two doctors were sufficiently grounded in the multiple choice principle to incorporate it in a questionnaire they devised for youngsters who participated in Detroit's 1967 riots. The test is reproduced in the Spring and Summer, 1968, issue of the Journal of Urban Law, published by the University of Detroit.

The doctors posed 36 questions — all pretty good, too, I might add. Just for fun, I took the test myself, and I had a ball. My favorite question is No. 34:

The kind of man you want to be is:

- A. Tough and strong
- B. Knows how to get what he wants from people
- C. Rich and successful
- D. Kind, gentle and helps others
- E. A fun-loving guy

I checked all five choices. That was the beauty of the thing: you weren't confined to one rigid choice — as you are, for example, in the driver's license test. Nor were you penalized for getting a wrong answer. There weren't any. And if you happened to choose the same answer as most of the other respondents, you could pride yourself in the fact that you contributed to an important sociological finding.

It seemed to me the motor vehicle people could come up with a positive test like that. The one they have now is an instrument of torture — especially for people like me who have always been frightened by tests.

I'm surprised no one ever thought of forming a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Humans Through Testing — the SPCHTT — and tried to ban the damn thing. Because it's really a form of cruel and unusual punishment, and should have been thrown out on constitutional grounds a long time ago.

Like a lot of others, I'm just not made for tests, I guess. No sooner do I see one coming — even if it's days in advance — than I begin to get these peculiar symptoms. My heartbeat shoots up, I perspire a lot and my face turns a lovely if embarrassing shade of vermillion. And, for some reason I've never been able to understand, I get this terrible yen for potato knishes. Frankly, I don't know what I'd do if I couldn't get potato knishes, although I suppose I'd switch to corn starch or something.

In college, the syndrome always appeared when I had a midterm or final exam coming up. It got so bad, in fact, that I finally stopped taking them.

The tests. Not the knishes. Which probably explains why I went to college for six years without graduating.

It was a rough day for me, the day of the test. It may have been the indigestion I suffered — I had seven knishes for lunch. On the other hand, it may have been a combination of my usual fear and the fact that it was an awfully tough test. Or maybe it was all three. Anyway, I almost blew the damn thing.

It was bad enough having to answer questions like:

When a wig-wag or flashing signal is operating at a railroad crossing you must:

- Slow down before crossing
- Stop only if a train is coming
- Stop, then proceed when safe

But when I came to this one, I almost gave up in panic:

You may drive on the shoulder of the highway, if it is in safe condition, when you need to:

- Drive so slow as to block traffic
- Pass a car that is turning left
- Pass a line of traffic ahead.

To be perfectly honest, I couldn't understand the question, let alone answer it.

There must be a better way to treat the average motorist when he reappplies for his driver's license every few years. I can't see what good it does to terrify him. Terror and intimidation only bring out the worst in him when he gets back on the road. He becomes surly, aggressive and impatient once more.

What the Department of Motor Vehicles needs, it seems to me, is a test that broadens the motorist's understanding of the real world of driving without intimidating him. With that in mind, I've devised an ungraded test that I plan to submit to the department as a long-overdue substitute for its present one. But first, I thought, I'd submit it to the motoring public at large.

GUIDELINES TO MODERN DRIVING (No Passing Grade Required)

You may tow a trailer behind your car if:
The trailer is not painted lime green
The trailer isn't carrying two-inch pipe dollies
Your mother-in-law approves

If you are traveling at 65 miles an hour and approaching a 45-mile-an-hour speed zone, you must reduce your speed:

- Within 22.65 feet of the speed limit sign
- Within 22.75 feet of the sign
- Within 22.85 feet of the sign

When the motorist behind you is following too closely for comfort:

- Get onto the shoulder and let him pass
- Alternately slow down and speed up
- Slam on your brakes

When a motorist is getting ready to park his car between two other vehicles, you may:

- Try to beat him to the spot
- Honk your horn for several seconds
- Clip his fender

If you have an accident and are unable to meet the requirements of the California Financial Responsibility Law, you may avoid prosecution by:

- Immediately leaving the state
- Having a century note handy for the first policeman
- Lying about the whole thing

If your car engine catches fire on the freeway, it is advisable to:

- Proceed to the nearest fire station
- Remove your outer garments and spread them neatly —but quickly—over the flames
- Run like hell

If you are caught in a massive traffic jam, it's suggested that you:

- Sing La Boheme at the top of your voice
- Bite your fingernails
- Give up driving

Your motor vehicle code book, a summary of laws parked car and a policeman comes along, you should:

- Keep necking
- Invite the policeman in
- Report the officer as a Peeping Tom

A suspicious-looking car in your neighborhood should be approached with:

- Abandon
- Several friends
- Drawn guns

If you are in an accident, it is recommended that you:

- Notify your nearest of kin
- Post a liability bond of $1 million
- Play dead

When stopped at a red light and the motorist in the adjacent lane asks you to drag, you should:

- Take him up on his dare
- Tell him you have a goldfish bowl on your seat
- Tell him to go to hell

If you see a drunk driver on the freeway, you should:

- Humor him with funny faces

See if you can't lead him to the nearest AA center
Go get yourself a drink

According to the vehicle code, cars abandoned on the side of the road are:

- Fair game for poachers
- Off limits to teen-agers
- Expressions of modern sculpture

Headrests Prevent Auto Whiplashes

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Editor

DISABLING neck injuries to women in auto accidents are common in metropolitan regions, a new study shows.

Doctors found that about half the injuries could have been prevented by a properly designed headrest.

The new study also states:

"Our findings do not support the apparently popular opinion that the symptoms of whiplash injury are often due to malingering and usually to subconscious psychoneurotic mechanisms in people seeking the dressing changes or incision and drainage of abscesses.

So far there have been no complications among the 140 patients who have used the hand-held device to control pain, according to doctors at Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco.

The inhaler produces pain relief and memory loss without total unconsciousness. Depth and duration of anesthetic is based upon the need of the individual patient.

CRIB DEATH — sudden unexpected death during sleep of an apparently healthy infant — has been attributed to several factors: cow's milk allergy, suffocation, spinal-cord injury and overwhelming virus infection.

Best bet, according to latest research, is the infection theory, a doctor has reported to the American Academy of Pediatrics. A study of more than 500 cases in Los Angeles and Seattle shows a high yield of viruses in victims. Predominant were a type known as adenoviruses.

Dr. Abraham B. Bergman, associate professor of pediatrics and preventive medicine at University of Washington School of Medicine, says that parents of victims of crib deaths must be reassured that they are in no way responsible for death of the baby.

Crib deaths can neither be predicted nor prevented, and this fact should be stressed over and over again to bereaved parents, he emphasizes.

MEDICAL researchers have come up with new evidence that exposure to a cold environment does not in itself cause, prolong or complicate the course of the common cold.

The finding stems from a study of Texas prison inmates, all volunteers.

Baylor University investigators conducted a series of experiments involving exposure to cold and exposure to certain viruses that can cause the common cold. Only those men exposed to the viruses caught colds.

Why then are colds much more common in the wintertime?

One thought: When schoolroom doors are open, schoolroom windows tend to be closed — a condition that permits certain respiratory viruses to survive in the room. In addition, crowding indoors during colder weather produces an increased risk for transmission of cold viruses.

The report is in the New England Journal of Medicine.

CAT CARE

A newly published pamphlet entitled "Basic Cat Care" is being offered free to pet owners by the Animal Protection Institute of America, a national humane society based in Sacramento.

The pamphlet covers essential requirements for pet health, feeding, grooming, safety and compliance with the law.

Belton P. Mouras, institute president, in announcing the offer, said the brochure is easy to understand and was written with the hope of raising the level of care provided pet cats throughout the nation.

The pamphlet may be obtained by writing Cat Care, Box P, Sacramento, Calif. 95813.

The only medication that Gets to a Major Cause of Hemorrhoids

Now! Most complete 3-way relief!

This important development in hemorrhoid treatment comes to you after five years of scientific and clinical testing. Not only does Counternoid® work by lessening pain fast, and by coating, soothing, and protecting injured tissue... but unlike every other hemorrhoid product Counternoid also works a third way.

Thanks to an exclusive formula with DSS₃₀™ only Counternoid gets to a major cause of hemorrhoids: Painful hard constipation. Without irritating laxative effect. Here's how: In hospital X-ray tests doctors have demonstrated that the remarkable Counternoid formulation with DSS₃₀ penetrates in minutes to the top of the rectal area to soften the stool and ease the bowel movement.

It is this unique action that does so much to make natural healing possible.

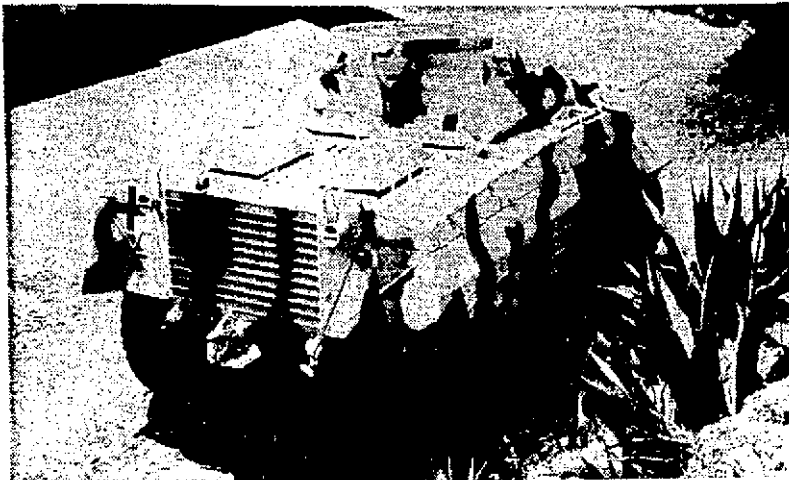

So, if you live with the pain and fear of recurring minor hemorrhoid troubles, get temporary relief with medically-tested Counternoid.

Actually, used as directed, Counternoid offers the most complete 3-way relief you can get without a prescription or without surgery in stainless cream or suppositories.

At all drug counters.

German armored command car is among Roger Steele's war acquisitions.

wouldn't take us because we were too small."

A year later, Steele succeeded in convincing the Army Air Corps he was old enough and big enough and was permitted to enlist. "A lot of good it did me. I wanted to get to Germany and get some souvenirs before they were all gone, and instead they sent me to Sheppard Field in Texas."

By the time Steele got to Germany in 1959 on a collecting trip, it was almost too late. "There were practically no souvenirs left. Most of them are in museums or have been taken out by tourists and GIs."

"It's against the law in Germany to possess any item from the Nazi period. The penalty is a 180-day jail sentence. Anything you buy there has to be underground," he explained.

Steele's technique was to visit antique shops and buy small items, such as belt buckles, and try to pump the owner about anything he had hidden away.

"I was visiting one man and he sold me a few items and said it was all he had. I left but kept thinking that he must have something else, so I returned and pumped him for awhile. Finally he admitted he knew a scrap dealer who had a huge bronze bust of Hitler. The scrap dealer had stolen the bust right off a marble pedestal by an SS school in Berlin during an air raid." Steele bought the bust, and it now decorates his living room.

While he was in East Berlin, he recalls, he was offered documents belonging to the Hitler youth groups. "The price was $200 and I couldn't afford to buy them. Just recently, the same documents were offered to me by an American who had bought them from the East Berliner. This time I bought them, but the price had risen to $500," Steele said glumly.

"The real gold mines," according to Steele, "are old GI footlockers. All of the treasures that I find — or almost all — come from GIs who picked up something in battle or in an invasion or during the occupation."

An example is Steele's acquisition of Hitler's personal silver collection. During the filming of the movie, "The Devil's Brigade," former Maj. Gen. Tryon Frederick, who led the brigade and was acting as technical adviser on the movie, dropped by the store with 46 pieces of flatware and a champagne bucket made by Weimer for Hitler.

"Gen. Frederick was the first man into Hitler's Munich apartment," Steele said. "He had scooped up the flatware in the course of the search."

"An interesting sidelight is that I now have a buyer for part of the set. An employee at one of the local hotels came to me and said he was a nobody, but that he had been a GI during the war and wanted to own a piece of history. I suggested the silver, and he's been buying it, a piece at a time. In three years he has bought $8,000 worth of silver," Steele said.

Another GI had blown open Hitler's safe and scooped up the formal serving silver set. "There were 125 pieces. He brought it to me in a suitcase. It had the AH and eagle emblem that by decree could only appear on Hitler's personal property," Steele added.

No collection worth the effort is a simple matter of putting miscellaneous items together without rhyme or reason, acquiring the knowledge of what is worth collecting is sometimes harder than acquiring the objects themselves.

"I've had to become a kind of walking encyclopedia of German history," Steele said. "I have a collection of research books that I think is unrivaled." In addition, he makes use of Army documents and captured literature. Reading the Nazi literature is an arduous process for Steele, since he has only a limited knowledge of German. Much of the research material helps Steele authenticate items.

"For example, if someone brings me an object, say it's a uniform, and claims it was Goering's, I have to check and see if there were any photographs of Goering wearing such a uniform. Sometimes this means wading through hundreds of pictures."

As a result of his expertise, Steele has been called on by the movie industry as a technical adviser in a number of films. "I even appeared in two as a German general," he said, displaying the uniform he wore — one of several he keeps at home for "dressing up." He also has rented props to "Mission: Impossible" and "Hogan's Heroes."

While Steele's collection is growing, so is the scale of the collected. In recent years he has bought two German land jeeps and just recently acquired a seven-ton armored command car.

"It's in great shape. It was built near the end of the war and never saw any action. It's been in storage for 23 years and only has 300 miles on it. I have restored the command car to its original camouflaged condition, and recently rented it together with a jeep to a movie studio as props for a film called 'Love Camp 7.'"

Steele feels eventually he might sell the command car to newsmen or a police department for use in riot coverage and control.

One advantage of shifting to larger items in his collection is a lessening danger of theft. Despite the heavy iron gates on his store front, Steele's collection has been burglarized several times. Apparently, the same morbid fascination with the instruments of violence that brings the paying customers to look at the war toys for grownups attracts the thief as well.

FOR HALF A century, San Francisco has enjoyed the reputation of being a great restaurant town. It is particularly noted for the quality of its Italian cafes.

So you can see how delighted Joe Manno was the other day when a San Franciscan, vacationing in the Lakewood area, told him: "Your restaurant is wonderful. I like it better than the Italian restaurants in my home town."

Manno's Italian Restaurant, 5607 E. South Street, just east of Bellflower Boulevard, continually receives interesting compliments from local residents as well as out-of-towners. Quite often it is visited by officials of Air Italia, Italy's international airline, during their business trips to Long Beach McDonnell-Douglas jetliner plant. Recently an Italian air executive told Joe:

"Your restaurant ranks with the very best family restaurants in Rome and Naples. It is unusually attractive — and your food is excellent (excellent)!"

Somewhat modest on the outside, Manno's is surprisingly beautiful on the inside. The front dining room has an Italian village decor. The rear Terrace Room, even more handsome, is split-level, designed with stained glass windows, wrought iron railings and broad murals of Italian cities.

Despite such beauty, Manno's prices are unpretentious. Says Joe: "We are a family restaurant — not a high cost, plush operation. Our prices run from 45 cents to over $3. If a person comes in and orders just a bowl of soup, we make him feel as comfortable and welcome as a family ordering a big dinner for 12."

JOE MANNO
Praise from Italy
Caricature by LARRY LA VOIE

The regular menu has dinners from $2.45 and a la cart treats from $1.45. Each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Manno's serves truly remarkable special dinners for $1.95. Included are hearty minestrone soup, fresh tempting salad, piping hot garlic toast and beverage. Among the imaginative entrees: lasagne, spaghetti, ravioli, rigatoni, gnocchetti and mostaccioli. Also available are pizzas, as well as gourmet Italian dishes.

Closed Mondays, the restaurant serves dinner daily and Sunday from 4 p.m. on. Its facilities include a take-out department and an art gift shop.

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Two questions, please, about mystery man Howard Hughes: (1) Isn't it true that Hughes "owns" Richard Nixon because of past loans to the Nixon family in California? (2) Was Hughes ever in love with a cute little Mormon actress named Terry Moore whose subsequent marriage he arranged after he dropped her for Jean Peters?—Don Marshall, N. Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Hughes does not "own" Nixon. It is true, however, that when the Nixon family was hurting financially, Hughes entered into a highly secret, complicated financial deal with Nixon's brother Don. Hughes took over the mortgage on some Nixon property in Whittier, Calif., for a $205,000 loan, the details of which have never been completely revealed.

For a time Hughes was in love with actress Terry Moore. She is now married to financier Stuart Cramer III. In 1954 Cramer was married to actress Jean Peters, the present Mrs. Howard Hughes. Whether Hughes arranged the swap, no one will ever know for sure.

Q. Who said, "Some men see things as they are and say, why? I dream things that never were and say, why not?"—J. C. L., El Paso, Tex.

A. Sen. Edward Kennedy in his funeral tribute to his brother Robert, quoted Robert as having said this "many times, in many parts of this nation, to those he touched and who sought to touch him."

Q. I have read that when Marilyn Monroe was a young, innocent starlet in Hollywood studio executives passed her around for rest and recreation. Is this so?—N. T. Adams, Charlotte, N.C.

A. When Marilyn Monroe was a starlet, her innocence was a condition of the past. Early in her screen career, however, she led a checkered sex life.

Q. I know that Bob Hope is the richest actor in show business. Isn't Fred MacMurray the second richest?—Lew Pennell, St. Paul, Minn.

A. MacMurray is a multi-millionaire but not in the same financial bracket as Bing Crosby, Cary Grant, and others.

Q. Can you tell me why the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7th, 1941, and not San Francisco or Seattle?—Eloise Johnson, Tacoma, Wash.

A. According to Minoru Genda who planned the Pearl Harbor strike: "We were not after Pearl Harbor. We were after the U.S. fleet. Had the fleet been at Midway, there would have been no Pearl Harbor. It would have been called Midway."

Q. Can you check on the story that Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra have an unwritten agreement to employ each other's kids on their TV shows?—George Edward Bell, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. No such agreement, but Sinatra and Martin are old friends, believe strongly in helping each other's offspring.

MARTIN AND FRANK SINATRA JR.

Q. Is it possible to find out how many children Ethel Kennedy has had by Caesarean section? I have been told that of her 11 at least six are Caesarean babies.—Mrs. Ronald Jackson, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Ethel Kennedy, 40, has given birth via Caesarean section to five children, including her last. Few women have more than three Caesareans.

Q. Royalties from the TV rights to Peyton Place—do they go to the heirs of Grace Metalious, author of the book, Peyton Place?—R. E. Evans, Rutland, Vt.

A. No. When producer Jerry Wald bought the film rights to Peyton Place he also purchased the TV rights. After Wald died, his widow Connie inherited the TV rights. Each week that 20th Century-Fox produced a TV episode of Peyton Place, Connie Wald, now married to Dr. M. Prinzmetal, received $1000. The Metalious children received nothing.

MRS. ROOSEVELT: SHE KNEW

Q. Did Franklin D. Roosevelt's long-suffering wife Eleanor, know about his love affair with Lucy Rutherford? If so, why didn't she blow the whistle on them or sue for divorce?—T. E. Y., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

A. She knew about the affair, realized that a divorce would ruin FDR's political career, deeply affect the children.

Q. The anecdote about Will Rogers and Calvin Coolidge if it is printable, the one about their first meeting?—Fred Sampson, San Leandro, Calif.

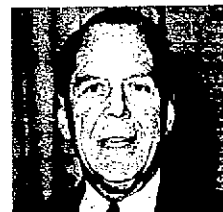

A. When Rogers visited the White House and was presented to Coolidge, he extended his hand, smiled sheepishly, said, "Sorry, sir, but I didn't catch the name."

Q. How many grandchildren do the Joseph P. Kennedys have at this point?—Lynise O'Brien, Roxbury, Mass.

A. 27.

Q. What sort of Secretary of Defense did Clark Clifford make—good, bad, or fair?—Dan Ford, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Under the circumstances, Clifford was magnificent.

Q. Who said: "The greatness of a man can nearly always be measured by his willingness to be kind?"—Ivy Clark, Washington, D.C.

A. Writer George Young.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

JACKIE TOWERS ABOVE HUSBAND "ARI," AND SOON HER DAUGHTER WILL, TOO.

NEW LIFE FOR JACKIE

When photographers snapped Jackie and Aristotle Onassis after their wedding, several of the lensmen noted that no matter how subtly Jackie slouched and stumped, she towered above her diminutive husband.

Jackie is 5 feet 8 inches without heels, Onassis 5 feet 5 with. This means that henceforth Jackie will lead a largely heel-less life.

Herself an ex-photographer, keenly sensitive to the image she projects -- for example, she will never allow herself to be photographed with a cigarette -- Jackie will undoubtedly appear as little as possible in public with Onassis, who in no way resembles the late

John F. Kennedy.

She and her husband will spend much of their time aboard the Onassis yacht, the Christina, whose name the owner may consider changing, especially since it was named in honor of his first wife.

Originally the Christina was a frigate in the Royal Canadian Navy. It was called HMCS Stormont and served as a convoy escort in World War II, shepherding vital supply ships across the Atlantic.

In 1944 German shore batteries on the Bay of Biscay damaged her badly. Two years later, Onassis, purchasing Canadian war surplus ships at less than 1% of their original cost, picked up the Stormont for about $70,000. He also bought two additional frigates and six freighters for $20,000 each.

Onassis remodeled the Stormont for $1 million, eventually furnished it with a marble swimming pool, a library, a dance floor, and a grand piano in the salon for Maria Callas.

The opera star really loved the privacy of the Christina. Nearsighted since childhood, reluctant to wear eyeglasses in public, Callas used to feel relaxed and at ease aboard the yacht. When Onassis sent her packing last August to make room for Jackie, Callas was heartbroken, but she is now once again on friendly terms with Onassis.

Her residence in Paris on the Avenue Georges Mandel is not far from the Onassis apartment on the Avenue Foch. And when Onassis is in Paris, he visits Callas regularly. They are not only mature ex-lovers, but partners in the ownership of the oil tanker, Artemision II, in which Callas has invested more than $1 million.

It is no secret that Onassis visited Callas after his honeymoon with Jackie. They not only discussed their mutual business affairs, but Callas confided to "Ari" that she had resumed her vocal lessons with her old professor from Milan, was flying in a London pianist every Wednesday, was even strongly considering a film offer. She also told Onassis that at long last she had succumbed to his advice about her eyesight, was getting herself fitted for a pair of contact lenses.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES

For years Richard Strout of the Christian Science Monitor has advocated the payment of family allowances in this country. So, too, have many economists, sociologists, and legislators.

The U.S., in fact, is one of the few Western nations in the world which refuses to pay parents a small allowance for each child.

It now looks, however, as if the Nixon Administration will inaugurate a system whereby American families will receive $10 a month for every child under the age of 18 so long as the child attends school.

It will cost the nation about $8 billion a year, but it will get the money directly into the hands of the poor. It is estimated that about 50% of all the people living in poverty in the U.S. are children under 18.

HIJACKERS

What happens to the adventurers, the malcontents, the revolutionaries who hijack U.S. planes and force their pilots to fly to Havana?

They are not basking happily in the Cuban sun, puffing long, thick, aromatic Havana cigars. Fidel Castro and his secret police are as leery of the hijackers as they are of most Americans. They clap them into jail as soon as their hijacked planes touch down on Cuban soil. To date, most of the hijackers are still behind bars, regarded in many cases by their Cuban jailers as half-loony and completely suspect.

WHY MAO WANTS TALKS

More than a year ago Red China broke off the conversations it had held intermittently with the U.S. Ambassador in Warsaw. Now Mao Tse-tung plans to renew them early next month.

Why?

The major reason is simple: Red China is convinced that Soviet Russia intends to start a war against her before China can develop rockets and build up her arsenal of nuclear weapons.

The Soviets have reportedly installed medium-range missiles on sites overlooking the Chinese border. In the past two years there have been several large-scale but unreported Sino-Russian border clashes.

Red China talks of "peaceful co-existence with the U.S." because she does not want the U.S. to join with Soviet Russia in the all-out nuclear destruction of her territory.

Soviet Russia, on the other hand, would like to enlist American aid in case she has to fight Red China: The Soviets therefore may pressure Ho Chi Minh to be reasonable in the Paris peace negotiations.

ALIENATION

More than 33 million Americans feel alienated from the mainstream of U.S. society. This comes to about 28% of our total adult population.

The statistics are part of a Lou Harris survey on Attitudes and Alienation.

According to Harris, the Americans who feel most alienated from contemporary society are the poor, the blacks, and the under-educated who never progressed beyond the eighth grade. Those who voted for George Wallace in the past Presidential election also generate a strong sense of isolation from the American establishment.

Despite the continued material prosperity in the nation, the unhappy people attribute their alienation to lack of economic opportunity and neglect of "my problems" by those in power.

In adult America, whites with no more than a grade-school education constitute 17% of the population. Blacks add up to an estimated 12%. Whites who earn $3000 a year or less make up 10%, and Wallace supporters, on the basis of the 1968 election, approximately 13%.

How is the large alienated segment of these people to be rallied, encouraged, inspired, made to feel that they belong?

AMERICANIZING JAPAN

Twenty years ago corn flakes and instant colored noodles were unknown to the average Japanese housewife. Today she buys them regularly. The change is due to advertising, which has increased 264% over the last seven years.

The most important vehicle for ads in Japan is the newspaper. Advertisers find that color is particularly important in stimulating shoppers to buy their brands. Newspaper ads are often printed in bright, eye-catching colors. Television follows newspapers in importance, and again the word is color. There are a million color TV sets in Japan today, with the advertiser directing most of his pitches at the Japanese housewife.

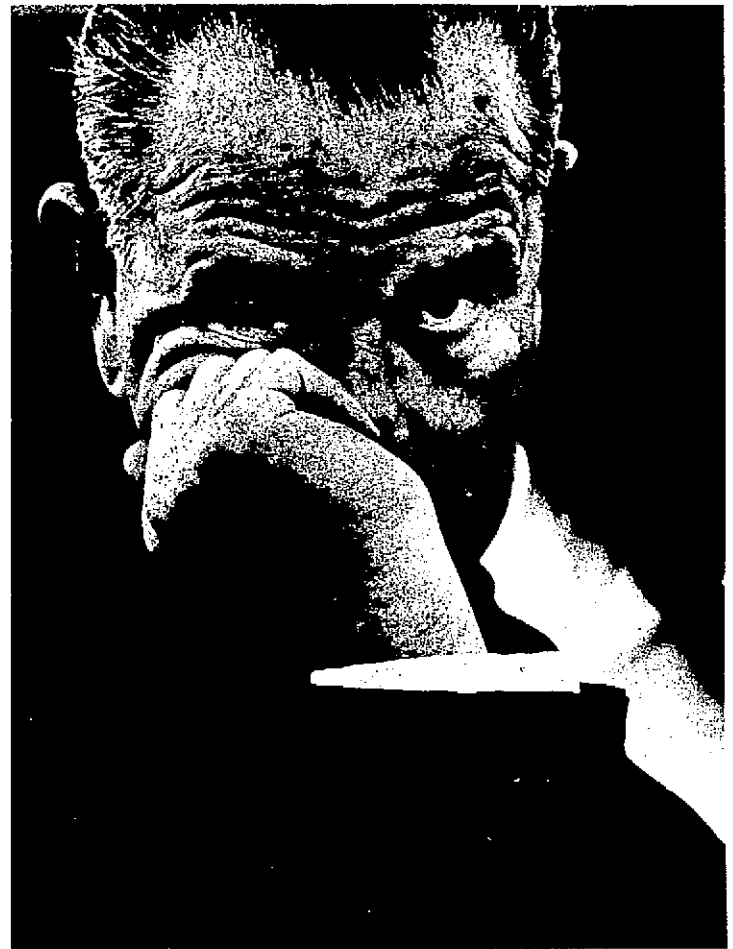

Japanese husbands usually hand over their unopened pay envelopes to their wives who dole out a small allowance to the wage-earner. In Japan such husbands are known as "20% husbands."

FAREWELL

This is Lyndon Johnson's last Sunday as 36th President of the United States.

He departs the office, a controversial, unloved figure -- a man flawed by character and defeated by circumstance.

More experienced, industrious, and hungry for greatness than probably any other U.S. President, Johnson's outstanding contribution was his generating of landmark legislation in the fields of health, education, civil rights, and Social Security. A Populist by background, he sought always to better the lot of the average citizen, to provide him with decent housing, schooling, food, and opportunity.

He came to office in a time of sorrow, the assassination of his predecessor from whom he inherited an Administration of much style but little substance.

His major error, much of the nation seems to think, was in escalating the Vietnamese war without credibly explaining to the American people why they had to become embroiled in trying to save and remold another nation's society of which they know and understood practically nothing.

Today, 30,000 American men lie dead. Almost another 200,000 have been wounded. About 1000 U.S. planes have been shot down over Vietnam. We have spent $100 billion on the war. And the South Vietnamese man-in-the-street wants us out of his country.

The lesson, if indeed we have learned any lesson, is that the U.S. should content itself in the future, under similar circumstances, with sending money, material, and technical know-how to help friendly, undeveloped nations in their struggle for self-determination.

Nation-building in Asia is indeed a noble endeavor. But it did Lyndon Johnson in.

Patricia Allen Roy counsels an ex-nun and an ex-priest. She is a sociologist and president of Bearings, an organization that helps men and women whose church background has left them unprepared to cope with the life outside.

THE COLD WORLD OUTSIDE

When an Ex-Priest or Nun Begins a New Life

BY WILL OURSLER

In an obscure East Side New York apartment an army of men and women daily come and go with a strange assortment of emotionally supercharged problems and needs.

Often these men and women have no money, no food, sometimes no place to sleep. Almost always they are too frightened and ashamed to call friends, family, or former associates.

The apartment—with no altars or crucifixes on its walls—has become a refuge, a front-line aid station, for the growing flood of ex-nuns and ex-priests who have decided they can serve God best by renouncing their sacred vows and going back into the secular world.

This East Side refuge is national headquarters for a widespread organization that is backed by many active Catholic priests, nuns and, to some extent—wholly unofficially—by the Catholic hierarchy itself.

Known as Bearings for Reestablishment, the nationwide organization plays no part whatever in urging priests and nuns to leave their vocations. Its role is solely to give free help to human beings in a difficult situation that is full of doubt, guilt feelings, confusions, and often lack of funds and almost total ignorance about getting along in the world outside.

Lost sheep

While precise tools are not available, it is estimated that on a world-basis, Roman Catholic priests, voluntarily "renouncing" exceed 5000 a year, in addition to hundreds of nuns. Bearings alone is now handling about 200 to 300 men and women a month.

Before Bearings was established, the "ex's" as they are called had literally no one and no place to whom they could turn for help or guidance.

Because of their church background, often covering years or decades, they have no experience, no business references, not even a Social Security number. Moreover, until Bearings, virtually no prospective employers would hire them.

One ex-nun spent nine days and nights living and sleeping in the waiting room of Grand Central Station. Her funds were so limited that she had to survive on one can of liquid diet food daily. Only when friends within the Church and the convent heard of the situation was help made available.

An ex-priest who had held a high administrative church post, and had a Master of Business Administration degree from Harvard, found it impossible to get any kind of comparable position once he told prospective employers his background.

Unwilling to starve or become a derelict—as has happened to many others—this man settled finally for a job as a typist.

Bearings—through its nationwide "network" of quiet, behind-the-scene work with and by businessmen and active Catholic clergy—has been able to effect a radical change in this attitude. Ex-priests and nuns today are getting jobs—and reestablishing normal lives.

Reasons for the departures of the clergy are varied. Sex and celibacy rules, according to the "ex's" themselves, usually play a minor role. More important, they say, is the failure of the Church to meet the challenge of today's world and its needs in a way that is meaningful for the individual priest or nun.

The tide of those leaving has become so great that Bearings had to set up offices in cities like Los Angeles, Chicago, Santa Monica, Calif.; Austin, Tex., and referral stations and representatives in other American cities, and plans to open international branches, the first possibly in Milan, Italy.

The Pacific Coast organization, a separate corporation called Bearings West, has a main headquarters in Hollywood, Calif.

The pioneer

Bearings was started by an American-born former priest named William Restivo. Father Restivo served as a Catholic missionary abroad but left the priesthood after witnessing what he considered improper treatment given Negro workers on a church-owned plantation in Africa.

After renouncing his vows he came to New York, went through withering months when he could not get a job, and nearly starved. Finally he began writing successful sales management textbooks and other similar material from his own small apartment.

With his own early plight in mind, Bill Restivo in 1966 launched Bearings to help others who were also leaving the priesthood and finding themselves in a desperate struggle to stay alive.

Word of the new organization spread. Many still-active priests, aware of the growing problem, considered it a Christian duty to aid Bill Restivo's new group. They did so, as Father Garry Thurston, a Jesuit priest who serves on the Bearings' board of directors, puts it, "because there is a real brotherhood in the priesthood and this is a human not a theological matter."

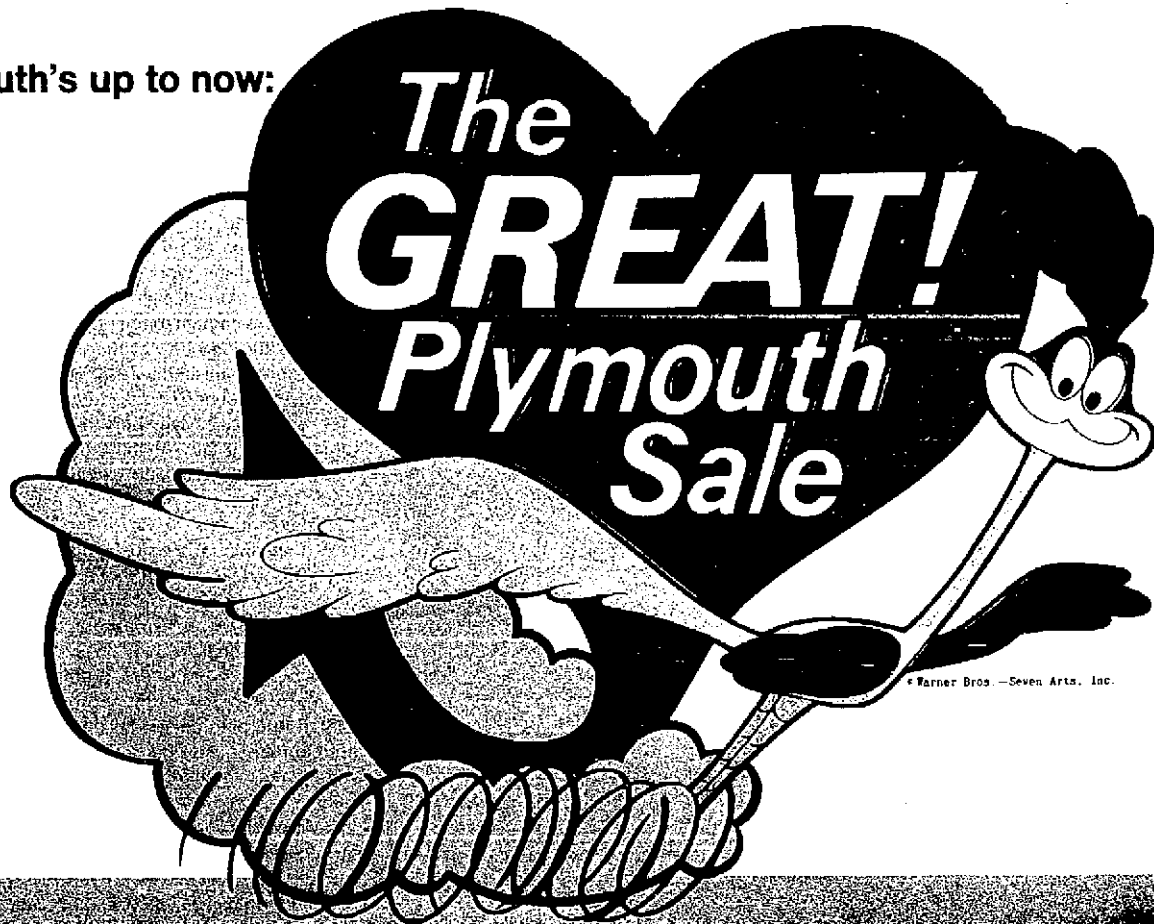

Mrs. Patricia Allen Roy, former Ford Foundation sociologist and currently the national president of Bearings, told PARADE that very few of the priests who leave do so because of "woman trouble," drinking, or the celibacy rules.

She believes that the underlying causes reflect a restlessness either in the individual or else they lie in "the internal machinery of religious life."

But Bearings itself, she pointed out, has little time for theorizing. They are

Shows How To Clean Artificial Teeth

Modern dentures are like fine jewelry—valuable but very easy to damage. That's why more and more dentists now suggest soaking dentures clean in easy-to-use KLEENITE instead of hard-brushing with scratchy pastes and abrasive powders.

That's because KLEENITE's triple-action formula cleans your artificial teeth like fine jewelry. (For proof, just give your diamond ring a 10-minute dip in KLEENITE and see how effectively it soaks away stain!)

KLEENITE's special formula combines 3 stain-removing actions: (1) detergent; (2) oxidizer; (3) solvent. It helps soak away dingy film. Even penetrates deep tobacco stains. Helps restore original whiteness. Try it. KLEENITE—at all drug counters.

Makes Eating With FALSE TEETH

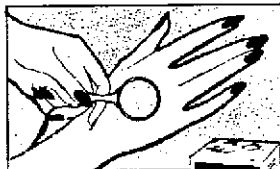

Up to 35% Easier

Clinical tests prove you can now eat and chew better—make dentures average up to 35% more effective—if you sprinkle a little PASTEETH on your plates. PASTEETH holds uppers and lowers more firmly so they feel more comfortable. PASTEETH is not acid—doesn't sour. No gummy, nasty taste. Helps check "denture odor". Dentures that fit are essential to health. So see your dentist regularly. Get PASTEETH at all drug counters.

*Weathered brown spots on the surface of your hands and face tell the world you're getting old—perhaps before you really are. Fade them away with ESOTERICA, that medicated cream that breaks up masses of pigment on the skin, helps make hands look white and young again. Equally effective on the face, neck and arms. Not a cover-up. Acts in the skin—not on it. Fragrant, greaseless base for softening, lubricating skin as it clears up those blemishes. If you have these age-revealing brown spots, blotches, or if you want clearer, lighter skin, use ESOTERICA. At your favorite drug and toiletry counter. $2.00.

dealing with a growing day-to-day reality.

"Many have tried to get jobs before they come to us," Mrs. Roy told PARADE. "One ex-priest told us how he finally did get work by not telling he had been a priest. Eight months later he felt secure enough to tell his employers the truth—and he was fired."

Widespread misunderstanding exists as to what happens when a priest or nun does "renounce." Many persons—even Roman Catholic laity—believe that such people are automatically excommunicated.

This is not true. A Bearings report states that once a decision is made to leave, canon law requires that the priest submit to his bishop a petition for what is called "laicization"—returning to the laity of the church.

The bishop submits this petition to Rome for approval. If approval is granted, the petitioner is legally free of the requirements of the priesthood, including those regarding marriage and celibacy.

In March, 1968, when Bill Restivo was married, a note in a Bearings bulletin ran: "Bill left the active ministry in 1961, requested and received laicization and permission to marry. He and Kiki were married, with ecclesiastical permission, in her Anglican Church by a Roman Catholic priest. The minister of the church also participated in the marriage ceremony...."

It is surely a new note in the modern Roman Catholic story.

The distinguished Catholic publication, Emmanuel, writing about Bill Restivo and Bearings, states: "Nobody can guess the number of former priests in the New York area, but many are known to be earning their living at menial jobs as janitors, elevator operators, waiters and even dishwashers...."

"Because they made a mistake for which they are accountable only to the all-merciful Christ, are we Catholic priests and Catholic laity to turn them a cold shoulder under the pretext that they 'got what they deserved'?"

The bulletin boards of the Bearings offices are part of the "total" rehabilitation program for these men and women who only a short time before were looked on generally as people apart and above average humanity.

On the boards are advertisements and listings for everything from sightseeing tours and ski weekends to forums on how to write a job resume. There are advertisements also for "single socials." One, sponsored by a Roman Catholic church, offered two free cocktails as part of a $3 admission fee. Another singles social listed an admission fee of $2 for men, $1.50 for women.

Many subjects Bearings discusses with Two ex-nuns feel at home at Bearings. They are flanked by Edward Green (left), a former Episcopal minister, and Rev. Gerald Waldorf, S.J., who is an active priest.

An open house at Bearings' New York office finds Christine McEnery, international coordinator (left), chatting in a group that includes Joseph Kuntz, a former priest.

"clients" are almost elementary: how to apply for a job, how to dress, how to manage their own finances.

The most important needs, as the bulletin board revealed, are still the basics—funds, clothes, a place to live, a job. A monsignor on the Bearings board of directors, the Rt. Reverend Robert Brown of Immaculate Conception Church, Irvington-on-Hudson, wrote personally to 1200 priests of the New York Archdiocese, telling them of the Bearings work and asking their financial and spiritual support.

Their response reflected the fellowship most priests still feel even for those with whose actions they wholly disagree.

Many other individual problems concern relationships with the opposite sex. With some it is simply a matter of returning to social relationships they had before taking their vows. With others, particularly those who entered the priesthood or convent at a very young age, it is a problem. Even the question of going out on a date—or of an ex-nun dancing with an ex-priest—may in some instances present a tremendous hurdle.

"Yet they do go out on dates," Mrs. Roy states. "They do whatever other people do. They live normal lives. A former nun may marry a former priest if they happen to fall in love."

Whole new world

Dating is particularly important for the young former nuns, who have to get used to a whole new pattern of living, of clothes, makeup, styles, hairdos. Some even have to learn to put on lipstick—for the first time in their lives.

One ex-sister, a piquantly charming young lady in her mid-20's, with dark eyes and dark hair and a not-too-short mini-skirt, declared when asked what it was like going on her first date:

"It was in New Jersey. We were with another couple. We visited a few night spots and had a few cocktails and listened to the music." Her eyes glowed as she concluded, "It was—fabulous."

This reporter held an unusual interview with about a dozen of these ex-priests and nuns at the Bearings office.

They were dressed casually, the women conservatively. They talked openly about their ideas, their goals, their purposes.

"Sure, I want to be married," one woman said. "I want to have children. But not right away."

A dark-haired young ex-priest talked of the Church's new role. He seemed to feel the Church's message had to change. Another ex-priest took exception.

"The message, the meaning is still there with the Church," he said. "It's only the canon rules and regulations, the structure, that gets in the way."

The young ladies—the ex-nuns—joined in also. Two had been teachers in convent schools. They had left for similar reasons; they had been held back too much, unable to do effective work with their pupils.

"When I left," one young lady said. "I didn't feel that I was going over the wall or any such nonsense. That is old hat. We don't think or talk that way any more."

Another former nun, well-formed, with straw-gold hair and blue eyes, joined the group. "I don't want to talk about theology," she said. "I'm sick of theology. I gave up my vocation because I wanted to be a woman. I wanted to think of myself as a woman."

Behind the talk, the simple human banter, one felt their quest for reasons—for their true bearings.

A middle-aged ex-priest put it in quiet but eloquent words: "In our lives as part of the laity, each of us is still as dedicated as ever. I am still as much a priest as ever. We are all working to effect these needful changes. . . ."

What they are talking about—from varying views—is far more than clerical reform. It is indeed a spiritual revolution of the entire Christian community, Catholic and Protestant alike.

It may well be the beginning of a wholly new kind of modern Christian church that embraces all people and all faith in its love—universally—as Christ himself commanded us, 2000 years ago.

An open house at Bearings' New York office finds Christine McEnery, international coordinator (left), chatting in a group that includes Joseph Kuntz, a former priest.

"clients" are almost elementary: how to apply for a job, how to dress, how to manage their own finances.

The most important needs, as the bulletin board revealed, are still the basics—funds, clothes, a place to live, a job. A Monsignor on the Bearings board of directors, the Rt. Reverend Robert Brown of Immaculate Conception Church, Irvington-on-Hudson, wrote personally to 1200 priests of the New York Archdiocese, telling them of the Bearings work and asking their financial and spiritual support.

Their response reflected the fellowship most priests still feel even for those with whose actions they wholly disagree.

Many other individual problems concern relationships with the opposite sex. With some it is simply a matter of returning to social relationships they had before taking their vows. With others, particularly those who entered the priesthood or convent at a very young age, it is a problem. Even the question of going out on a date—or of an ex-nun dancing with an ex-priest—may in some instances present a tremendous hurdle.

"Yet they do go out on dates," Mrs. Roy states. "They do whatever other people do. They live normal lives. A former nun may marry a former priest if they happen to fall in love."

Whole new world

Dating is particularly important for the young former nuns, who have to get used to a whole new pattern of living, of clothes, makeup, styles, hairdos. Some even have to learn to put on lipstick—for the first time in their lives.

One ex-sister, a piquantly charming young lady in her mid-20's, with dark eyes and dark hair and a not-too-short mini-skirt, declared when asked what it was like going on her first date:

"It was in New Jersey. We wore with another couple. We visited a few night spots and had a few cocktails and listened to the music." Her eyes glowed as she concluded, "It was—fabulous."

This reporter held an unusual interview with about a dozen of these ex-priests and nuns at the Bearings office.

They were dressed casually, the women conservatively. They talked openly about their ideas, their goals, their purposes.

"Sure, I want to be married," one woman said. "I want to have children. But not right away."

A dark-haired young ex-priest talked of the Church's new role. He seemed to feel the Church's message had to change. Another ex-priest took exception.

"The message, the meaning is still there with the Church," he said. "It's only the canon rules and regulations, the structure, that gets in the way."

The young ladies—the ex-nuns—joined in also. Two had been teachers in convent schools. They had left for similar reasons; they had been held back too much, unable to do effective work with their pupils.

"When I left," one young lady said. "I didn't feel that I was going over the wall or any such nonsense. That is old hat. We don't think or talk that way any more."

Another former nun, well-formed, with straw-gold hair and blue eyes, joined the group. "I don't want to talk about theology," she said. "I'm sick of theology. I gave up my vocation because I wanted to be a woman. I wanted to think of myself as a woman."

Behind the talk, the simple human banter, one felt their quest for reasons—for their true bearings.

A middle-aged ex-priest put it in quiet but eloquent words: "In our lives as part of the laity, each of us is still as dedicated as ever. I am still as much a priest as ever. We are all working to effect these needful changes. . . ."

What they are talking about—from varying views—is far more than clerical reform. It is indeed a spiritual revolution of the entire Christian community, Catholic and Protestant alike.

It may well be the beginning of a wholly new kind of modern Christian church that embraces all people and all faith in its love—universally—as Christ himself commanded us, 2000 years ago.

My Favorite Jokes

by Joey Villa

EDITOR'S NOTE: Joey Villa, like most comedians, is city-born and city-bred. Reared in New York, a product of the Bronx, Joey majored in baseball before he enlisted in the submarine service during the Korean War.

Joey served in the Navy for four years, entertained his shipmates with comedy routines of his own creation. Discharged from the service, he began working small neighborhood clubs around New York, was spotted by both Jerry Lewis and Buddy Hackett who helped him with his technique and timing, from time to time supplied him with material.

Today Joey, having appeared on such top TV shows as the Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas, and Joey Bishop programs, seems to be making it on the nightclub scene. He's played the Sands in Las Vegas, the Copacabana in New York, and the Playboy clubs in New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles where recently he gave out with the following jokes:

I know a guy who makes a great living selling maps to the stars' homes in Hollywood. He sells them to burglars.

Several years ago I was kidnapped in Chicago. I was in my room when three guys came to the door with guns. They took one look at my face and blindfolded themselves.

They talk a lot about foreign aid these days. Did you know that last year we sent a 50,000-ton aircraft carrier to the natives in Africa to help with their revolution? That aircraft carrier has been hammered and shaped into one million spearheads.

A prisoner was banging his plate against his cell bars. The warden walked by. “If you don't stop the rumpus,” he threatened, “I won't tell you what year this is.”

Today the younger generation is so rich that its kids no longer run away from home—they drive.

My nephew came over to the house the other night. He asked me to help him with his arithmetic. After two hours, he said to me, “Uncle Joey, if it takes you so long to do fourth-grade work, what am I gonna do next year?”

After two weeks in Las Vegas, tipping doormen, bellboys, waitresses, blackjack dealers, bartenders, I got so fed up I wouldn't even answer the door. But one evening there was a persistent rap.

“Who is it?” I asked.

“Telegram for you,” the bellboy answered.

“Okay,” I said, “slip it under the door.”

“I'm sorry, sir,” the bellboy answered. “I can't.”

“Why can't you?” I asked.

“Because,” he answered, “the telegram is on a tray.”

anecdote of the week

■ The other day The New York Times assigned two of its newsmen to watch 1040 Fifth Avenue, the apartment house in which Jackie Kennedy Onassis lives. Their job: to report the identities of everyone entering or leaving the residence.

After several hours of watching and waiting, one of the Timesmen, Steve Weisman, Yale '68, spotted McGeorge Bundy, former Presidential adviser and now head of the Ford Foundation, leaving the apartment house.

Although Bundy was wearing his new tortoise-shell rimmed glasses, Weisman recognized the old Yale, raced up to him, asked eagerly, “Can you tell me, Mr. Bundy, whom you've been talking to, whom you've been visiting, whom you've been seeing. Can you tell me, sir, what you're doing in this building?”

Responded Bundy matter of factly: “I live here.”

New York: A protective screen of Secret Service men surrounds Richard Nixon and wife Pat on recent arrival at their Fifth Avenue apartment.

NIXON'S INAUGURAL—THE MOST CLOSELY GUARDED

The New President and the Secret Service

by Fred Blumenthal

WASHINGTON, D.C.

At noon tomorrow, the Presidency of the United States will change hands, as it has 35 times before in the history of the Republic—and a new First Family comes into the keeping of the U.S. Secret Service.

The protection afforded President Richard M. Nixon at his inauguration will probably be the most elaborate in history. Three hundred Secret Service men will be brought in from field offices around the country. Police forces from many cities will assist the Washington force, and highly trained officers from ten government agencies will be on guard. These include men from the FBI, the Pentagon and the "Bum Squad," so named for their shabby plainclothes dress. The inaugural platform as well as the reviewing stand will be protected by bulletproof glass. Secret Service men equipped with binoculars and rifles will cover the proceedings from helicopters and other agents will be stationed on the roofs of the buildings along the parade route.

Mr. Nixon is about to learn the truth of Truman's wry comment:

"The Secret Service is the only boss the President really has."

A President obviously can ignore or countermand Secret Service directions, but he does so at his peril. By the nature of his job he must make frequent public appearances and mingle with crowds of people. And it has been well understood by every Chief Executive since the turn of the century (when Presidential protection was first established following the slaying of President McKinley) that the agents have responsibilities that sometimes must override the President's personal wishes.

President Johnson, who has been known to blow his fuse from time to time at some of the agents around him, has reason to know that they don't always have time for protocol.

"I will never forget that day in Dallas," he recalled recently, "when a great big husky roughneck from Georgia threw 185 pounds of human weight on me, and said, 'down.' And there wasn't any place to go but down, because he was on top of me."

"His life was being offered to protect mine. At least, he thought so."

The "roughneck" was agent Rufus S.

Youngblood, whom Johnson has ever since treated as a warm personal friend. It is probably no coincidence that Youngblood is now deputy director under Secret Service Director James J. Rowley.

Mr. Johnson, like former President Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower, will be guarded by the Secret Service for as long as he lives—unless he continued

Bob Taylor—in charge of the Secret Service White House detail of 40.

No stranger to Nixon: Taylor, shown at rear of car, accompanied the then Vice President to Caracas in May, 1958, when angry Venezuelan mobs stoned Nixon.

I lived in maternity slacks, until I lost 98 pounds

By JoAnne Lawrence—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

Understand me, I wasn't pregnant all the time I wore maternity clothes. I was just plain fat and nothing else fit. It started the first year I was married. I was only 16 and gained 75 pounds in twelve months.

We had moved to Austin, Texas, and our apartment was so small there wasn't much to do. So I cooked and ate and ate and cooked. Then, when I found out I was expecting, I started eating even more. I thought that to have a healthy baby you had to eat a lot.

My doctor kept telling me the weight would be hard to get off. But I wouldn't believe it. I was sure I could take it off in no time. The "no time" lasted nine years. I just kept getting heavier and heavier, as I had another child, and another.

Occasionally, I'd buy some yard goods, and a dress pattern with a waistline, and I'd run it up. Then I'd hang the dress in the closet. It was always too snug to wear. I made things that way on purpose, hoping it would make me do something about my weight. But it never did. I'd just wind up wearing my maternity slacks, which had an elastic waistband.

My husband caught me off guard here, at nearly 230 pounds. This snap is bad enough, but at least I wasn't in my maternity slacks.

By the time my last son was born, I was really in bad shape. I weighed 230 pounds. It was hard even to breathe. The doctor thought I'd lose the baby.

He even thought he'd lose me, the fat was squeezing my heart so hard. But, fortunately, we both pulled through.

It wasn't like I hadn't ever tried to reduce.

Doctors had prescribed diets and reducing pills for me time and again. Sometimes, I'd stay on a diet five days, then I'd have to eat big. Fried chicken and candy. I couldn't seem to live without them. As for the pills, they made me too nervous. Besides, when you swallow them, they're gone. It's the same with liquid diets. You drink them, and they're gone. It's not like having something you can chew on.

After the baby came, I was desperate to lose. And I wanted sympathy so bad, it hurt. Finally, I made an appointment with another doctor. While in his waiting room, I picked up a magazine and suddenly saw this story about a woman who'd lost a tremendous amount of weight. When I looked at her fat picture, I said: "That's me." Then I looked at her slim picture. And I thought, if she can do it, so can I. So I read every word and I found out that she did it with the help of Ayds Reducing Plan Candy.

Now that I'm 132 pounds, even my little boys are proud of me. The oldest keeps saying to his pals: "Hey, you, this is my Mom!"

I didn't even wait to keep my appointment with the doctor. I told the nurse I was sick and left. And I went right to the drugstore and got some vanilla caramel Ayds. Later, I tried both the plain chocolate fudge type and the fudgy chocolate mint. And I started losing on the Ayds Plan.

I didn't set myself too strict in what I ate for meals. I was just careful. But I took the Ayds, as directed, and they helped me curb my appetite. They really did. I kept my Ayds in the refrigerator and that made them real chewy. And that's what I wanted. Something to chew on. Why, if I'd wake up in the middle of the night and start thinking about food, I'd just get up, get an Ayds and chew away.

When I'd gone down 26 pounds, I was able, at last, to get into one of those dresses hanging in my closet. You can't imagine how good that made me feel.

Soon I began looking at pretty dresses in magazines. Bright, bright colors, too. After all, I was just in my mid-twenties and I was tired of wearing black.

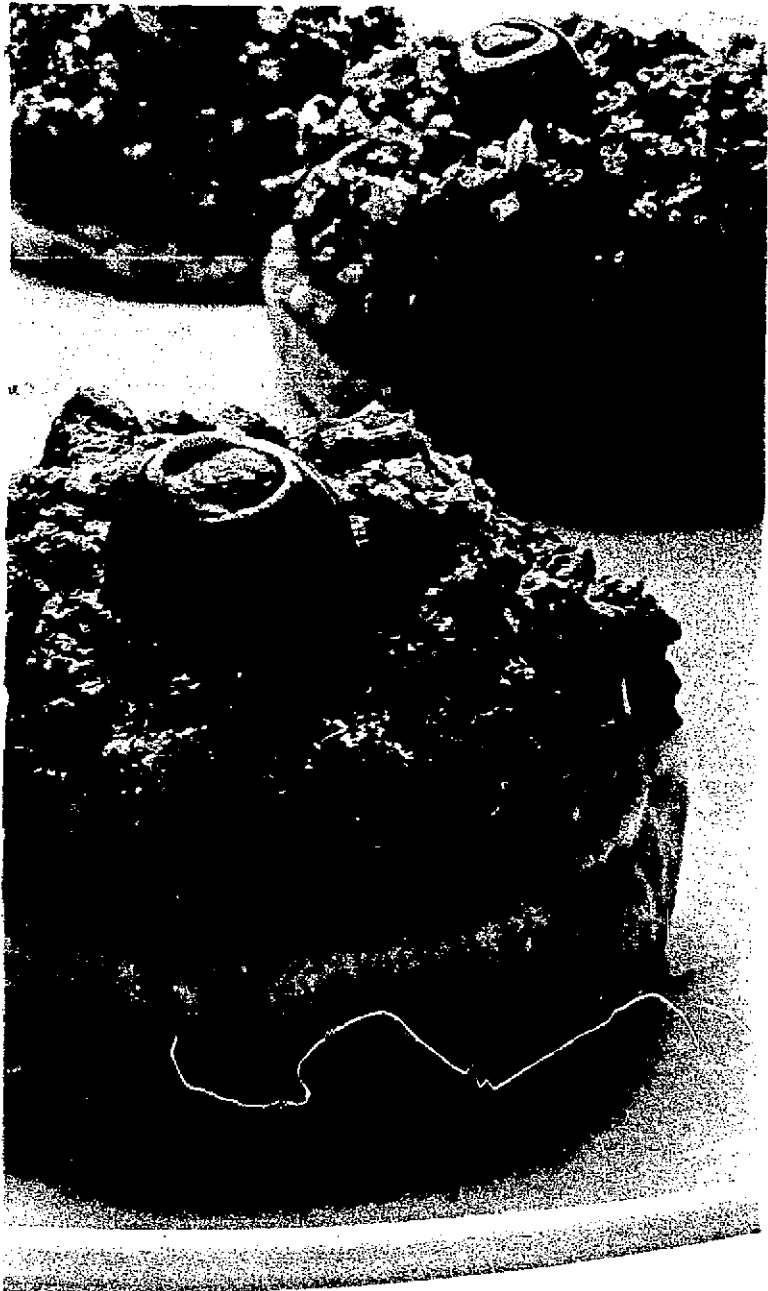

About this time, I also started doing exercises to help me firm up. But I have to admit, when it came to touching the floor, I cheated. So I decided to switch to walking—eight blocks every evening. And it made me feel real good.

When I finally lost 98 pounds, I couldn't believe it. I was like a new person. I bought myself some shorts. Some dresses with belts, to show my waistline. And even a couple of minis. Fact is, we've had to add three new closets to our house. I just can't get enough of dressing up.

I've been down to 132 pounds for some time now, but I still keep a box of Ayds in the refrigerator. When I feel myself slipping, I look at them and say: "You satisfy me, Ayds, or I'm in trouble." And they do. They've helped me cut my appetite way down. And my weight. The only thing out of line now is my clothes bill.

Good old American hamburgers. Like in good old Mexico.

Look what's happened to the good old hamburger from down the block. It's gone Mexican. With Ortega® Green Chile Salsa. A spicy blend of green chiles, tomatoes and onions. Here's how it's done:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 2 tablespoons salad oil | 1 teaspoon prepared mustard |
| 1½ pounds ground lean beef | 1 can (6-ounces) |
| 2 cans (7-ounces each) | Ortega Snap-E-Tom® |
| Ortega® Green Chile Salsa | (or 1 cup tomato juice) |
| 1 teaspoon seasoned salt | 6 toasted hamburger rolls |

Heat salad oil; add beef and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned. Stir in Green Chile Salsa, mustard, Snap-E-Tom and salt. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. Serve over rolls. Makes 6 servings.

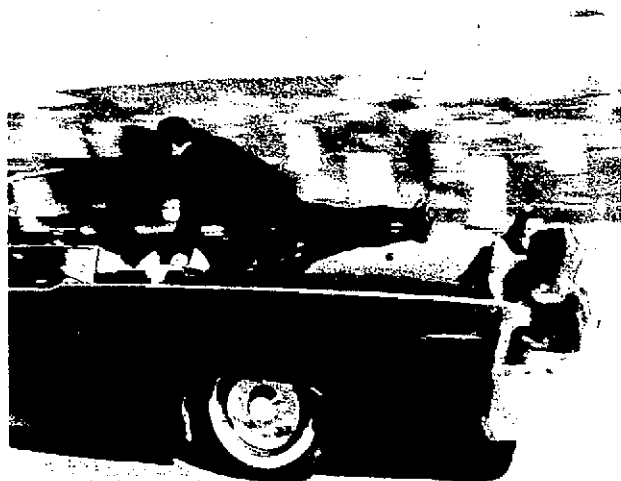

President and Mrs. Kennedy starting out with Governor Connally on the fateful ride in Dallas five years ago.

Secret Service agent Clint Hill leaps on car immediately after the shooting to shield both Jacqueline and the dying President with his body.

Hill leaving Hyannis church with the widow. He now heads a detail of 20 men guarding Agnew.

specifically refuses protection. But the security precautions will be far less rigid and confining than those required for the White House occupant, the reason being, of course, that the threat to a President's life is greatly diminished after he leaves office:

First to notice the "changing of the guard" in Washington will be the Johnson girls and Hubert and Muriel Humphrey. Under the law, they are no longer entitled to Secret Service protection. Mrs. Humphrey, actually, never was a legal responsibility of Rowley's agents. For some unexplained reason, probably an oversight, the law provides protection for the Vice President but not for his wife. In practice, however, agents were assigned to Mrs. Humphrey and will be guarding Mrs. Spiro T. Agnew.

The wives of former Presidents also have lifelong Secret Service protection, unless they remarry—a provision of the law that automatically applied to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis when she married the Greek shipping tycoon last fall. Onassis provided the $50,000 worth of private security for their wedding and when Jackie comes to the U.S. hires Pinkerton detectives. Eight-year-old John John and 11-year-old Caroline, however, continue to receive the protection of the Secret Service until they reach age 16.

The Nixons now fall heir to all the complicated and often confining security apparatus that surrounded the Johnson family through their five years in the White House. Like Lynda Bird Johnson Robb and Luci Johnson Nugent, Julie Nixon had a Secret Service escort when she went off on her honeymoon with young David Eisenhower last month. And 22-year-old Tricia Nixon will have to have an "extra man" hovering discreetly in the background on all her dates outside the White House.

And if Dick and Pat Nixon become grandparents, the youngsters, too, will have agents guarding them as long as grandpa and grandma occupy the White House.

EISENHOWER'S NARROW ESCAPE

When Eisenhower was President, a member of the press corps, a "White House regular" who covered the President's daily activities, was heard by a Secret Service agent to mutter that he was going upstairs to kill the President. This was a reporter who had almost total access to the President and whom one would not be likely to suspect. Fortunately, the agent was alert. He later had the reporter placed in a mental hospital.

The protective network that guards the life of a President and his family, in addition to 250 uniformed White House police under the jurisdiction of the Secret Service, consists of some 650 highly trained plainclothes Secret Service agents in 65 field offices throughout the United States. Each month they receive some 7000 bits and pieces of information that must be checked out and evaluated. The President's autos must be kept under tight security—a plastic bomb could easily be placed under a fender. Explosives can also be molded into furniture. When the President moves from room to room in the White House a buzzer indicates to the agents where he is. The Service has to cope with a steady stream of criminal investigations, such as counterfeiting of U.S. money and forgery of government checks and bonds—crimes which are sharply on the increase—but, above all, its job is to guard the President.

In charge of the permanent around-the-clock Secret Service detail of approximately 40 men inside the White House will be Robert H. Taylor. Bob Taylor, who joined the Service in 1950 and was promoted to his present post a year ago, is no stranger to Nixon. Early in 1957 he accompanied the then Vice President on a trip to Africa and again to Caracas in May, 1958, when the Venezuelans stoned Nixon.

Taylor was born in 1926 in Iola, Kans., took his Bachelor's Degree in Political Science at Wichita State University. He lives with his wife Loretta; daughter Karen, 17, and son Kenneth, 15, in Vienna, Va., a Washington suburb.

In charge of the separate detail of about 20 men, guarding Vice President Spiro Agnew is Clint Hill. He is the Secret Service agent who at the risk of his life jumped on Kennedy's moving car immediately after the shooting in Dallas. He pushed back Mrs. Kennedy, who had started to crawl over the trunk of the car, and with his body shielded her and the dying President in the 80 mph dash to the hospital.

Standards for admission to the Service are extremely high. Candidates today must have at least four years of college; they must be in prime physical condition and have almost perfect eyesight. Above all, they must demonstrate superior judgment for emergency situations, have stable backgrounds, and a readiness to sacrifice their own lives for the safety of their charges. Agents start at about $7000 a year, but after five years, they average well over $12,000, plus considerable overtime pay.

There are no racial barriers in the service. Rowley's force today includes Negroes, Chinese-Americans, Mexican-Americans, and some immigrants who still speak with foreign accents. What they all have in common is dedication to their hazardous duty, a willingness to work incredibly long hours under the most trying conditions, and an ability to adjust smoothly to the personalities, routines, and habits of their sometimes testy wards.

President Nixon and the Secret Service are well known to each other. As Vice President for eight years under Mr. Eisenhower, and again during the last five months of the 1968 campaign, Dick and Pat Nixon got the full security treatment. They are thoroughly familiar with Air Force One, the Presidential jet, and in recent weeks have been riding in the new bullet-and bomb-proof limousine which Rowley's men helped design for Presidential use.

'Family member'

The relationship between a President of the United States and the men who must see to his safety is a unique one. Many Presidents have come to treat the agents on White House detail as members of the family and, sometimes, have exercised the family privilege of blowing up at them.

Last Nov. 23, for example, Mr. Johnson called the White House detail together on the south lawn to witness the presentation of a Presidential award to Rowley for distinguished federal civilian service. In the course of his remarks, Johnson acknowledged that there had been times when he had been less than gentle with some of the agents.

"A lot of things you have had to live through with me," the President said, "if I could rewrite them, I would change a lot of them. . . ."

"I have spent more of my time telling you what you did wrong than what you have done right. But Luci, Lynda, and Mrs. Johnson remind me every day of how blessed you have been to them."

The listening agents were obviously moved as the President continued:

"... I remember in Australia when I just couldn't keep back the tears when I looked in the faces of Jerry Kivett, Dick Johnson, Jerry McKinney, Lem Johns, and Bob Heyn, and the dearest of all, Rufus Youngblood, with all that paint streaming down their faces, splattered all over them, but their chins up and their President safe.

"I remember Bob Taylor standing there and letting the Cadillac run over his foot in order to protect his President from harm.

"I will never forget the great integrity that each man in this service has shown—and I don't except any of them—I mean every one of them."

When you see the inaugural ceremonies on the steps of the Capitol tomorrow, whether in person or on your television screen, with helicopters hovering overhead, honor guards drawn up in brilliant array, flags flying proudly, and dignitaries on every hand, think gratefully of those anonymous men of the Secret Service to whom President Nixon now entrusts his life.

INCLUDING IF YOU WISH

The COMPLETE ILLUSTRATED Book of The PSYCHIC SCIENCES

Take this huge volume as one of your 4 books, a total of up to $2635 in orig. publishers' editions

962. THE COMPLETE ILLUSTRATED BOOK OF THE PSYCHIC SCIENCES. Is there really a "Sixth Sense?" Are "hunches" merely intuition—or something more? Could you actually have ESP powers and not know it? Here for the first time in print is the most comprehensive and authoritative survey of occultism and psychic phenomena ever published. This huge "encyclopedia" details the practices and attested feats of seers, mystics, yoga masters, mediums—even voodoo priests. It describes the techniques claimed to influence dice through mind power... restore youthful vigor... dominate the thoughts of others... magnify physical strength ten-fold... banish the pain of illness... and much more. It also covers all known "rules" and techniques for reading thoughts, interpreting dreams, tea leaves, palms, head shapes, cards, numbers, the stars. (You may even wish to undergo the 15 tests for uncovering hidden ESP powers such as telepathy, telekinesis, precognition, etc.—they begin on page 377!) Absolutely everything you want to know is here between the covers of this incredibly exhaustive—and stubbornly uncompromising—book. Nothing has been omitted... or suppressed. From the experiments of parapsychologists to the delvings of occultists this is the one truly "must" reference work for anyone interested in psychic phenomena. Over 100,000 words. Profusely illustrated. Pub. ed. $5.95

The new UNIVERSE BOOK CLUB challenges you to explore the frontiers of human experience

Flying saucers: Are authorities covering up to prevent panic? Spirit healing: Do some doctors condemn it for your good, or theirs? Those power blackouts: Does anyone really believe "official" explanations? H-bomb ban: Will Russia soon say Yes, because she has harnessed the greater powers of ESP?

Now — decide for yourself
For the first time a book club dares offer you the provocative new books that speak out on puzzling issues of our day. Some are best-sellers. But many others have been shoved to the back of the bookstore because they are "too controversial". These books challenge you to explore the frontiers of human experience.

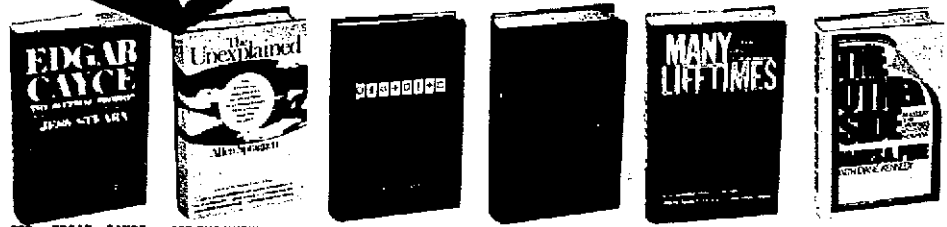

Bold new books — at big savings
Each month Club selections are described to members in advance. Although these new books sell for $4.95, $5.95, $6.95 or more in original publishers' editions, you pay only $2.49 plus postage and handling. (Occasional extra-value selections are slightly higher.) Accept only the books you want—as few as 4 in the coming year. You may resign anytime after that. Send for introductory shipment now, worth up to $26.35 in original publishers' editions. Send no money. You will be billed later. But if not delighted, return books within 10 days to cancel membership. Universe Book Club, Garden City, N.Y. 11530.
